Agriculture Dept. Fundless as New Fiscal Year Starts

Bill Still Deadlocked As Congress Votes Nearly 45 Billions For Agencies, War

(Other Congressional actions on Pages 4 and 5.)

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Congress yesterday in a feverish race with the fiscal year deadline piled an unprecedented $44,809,600,000 in appropriations on the White House doorstep but failed to win the Government's annual money marathon.

The six hundred and eighty million Agriculture Department appropriation bill, deadlocked center of the mid-session jam, remained high and dry in a conference committee, exhausting every effort to move it. That department, fundless after midnight last night, faces a payday for 89,511 employes on July 8.

In a day-long session, Congress had cleared the largest War Department bill of all time—$42,821,900,000 for a 4½ million man army. Five other money measures for Government agencies whose current funds expired at midnight, received rapid-fire approval.

House Votes OPA Funds

Only the almost hopelessly trapped farm bill and the $1,806,669,615 supplemental defense measure, carrying additional money for 16 war agencies, remained on the docket when weary members quit work at dusk. Leaders said there was no deadline set for the latter measure, with its sharply slashed OPA budget. Nonetheless, it was whipped through the House, and awaits only Senate action.

Despite leadership exhortations and appeals from the Administration, farm bill conferees, deadlocked for weeks in a controversy on farm parity and House economy demands, reported failure at the day's end.

House Majority Leader McCormack obtained unanimous consent for them to file a report up to midnight, but they wound up in unbroken disagreement. Another attempt at settlement will be made this morning but the outlook was not bright.

Continuing Resolution Dies

Budget officers of the department said they might manage without funds for a day or two, but pointed out that next Wednesday is payday for some 12,738 employes in Washington and 76,733 in the field. They said it would be impossible to meet payrolls, travel vouchers and other obligations until the bill was passed.

House conferees returned from their last impasse with a "continuing resolution," a device for voting temporary extension of funds until the bill is finally approved. But the resolution, never introduced, re-

10,000 See Stars' War Bond Show

More than 10,000 persons jammed Post Square yesterday to see and hear stage, film and radio stars entertain in front of the District Building for the "Retailers for Victory" war bond drive. Jessica Dragonette, famous singer, sang several numbers while the audience joined in. Jay C. Flippen, radio and stage comedian, was master of ceremonies.

White-Out For Victory

From noon to 12:15 P. M. today Washington stores will stop all ordinary transactions and devote their full energies during that fifteen minute period to selling War Bonds and Stamps. It's the starting gun of Washington's drive toward our share of America's billion dollar quota for July. Buy a Bond or Stamp today in Washington's White-Out for Victory.

Last Hope Gone

Odell Waller Must Die For Murder

By the Associated Press

Richmond, V., June 30.—Governor Darden tonight refused a plea of counsel for Odell Waller, 25, Negro sharecropper, for commutation of his death sentence for the murder of Oscar Davis, white tenant farmer.

The Governor's decision was announced at 9:10 p. m. after a full day's study of the case and conferences with Attorney General A. P. Staples. It followed by approximately 25 hours a lengthy hearing accorded counsel for the Negro on their petition for executive clemency.

The refusal of the Governor to intervene apparently exhausted Waller's last hope of escaping the penalty decreed by a Pittsylvania

32 Million Measure Passes Senate After Months of Wrangling

Navy Yard Raises Pay

APPROXIMATELY 17,000 workers at the Washington Navy Yard will receive pay increases effective next Monday. Page 32.

Housing Bill Passes

Only the President's signature on a $32,500,000 appropriation was needed today to swing the mammoth District war housing and public works program into action.

After months of committee hearings and conference juggling, congressional approval of necessary funds was finally assured yesterday when the Senate passed the appropriation and sent it to the White House.

The House had approved it on Monday.

John Blandford, National Housing Authority head, reported his agency ready to start operations immediately on the building program which is calculated to relieve at long last the District area's acute housing shortage.

To be constructed are 8 dormitories, located throughout the metropolitan area, and 3000 temporary family dwelling units. Congress authorized 12 million for the dormitory construction and 3 million for the family homes.

It was a disagreement between House and Senate conferees on the latter item which held up passage of the appropriation for so long.

In addition, the bill carried $17,500,000 in funds to supply the city with related public works, including sewers, streets, hospitals and playgrounds.

47 Senators Hold 'X' Ration Cards

The names of 47 Senators are among the District motorists who were assigned "X" gasoline ration cards 1 st May, it was announced yesterday at the ration administration headquarters. The list does not include Senators who may have obtained "X" cards outside Washington. A total of 15,565 of these cards were issued here and it is estimated that there are between 13,000 and 15,000 still in the files.

Rule to Meet Treasury Tax Goal Sought

Sabath Proposes Opening Measure To Morgenthau Plan Amendments

Chairman Adolph J. Sabath of the House Rules Committee yesterday proposed opening the revenue shy $5,924,000,000 tax bill to Treasury-sponsored amendments in the House in an effort to reach Administration tax goals.

Sabath told reporters he will confer in a few days with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau before recommending a tax rule that would give the House a chance to vote directly for mandatory joint returns and other Treasury proposals rejected by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Sabath said he did not favor a sales tax, but in framing a rule opening the bill to revenue-producing amendments, "it might be necessary to take the bitter with the sweet and permit a vote on a sales tax too."

Sales Tax Bloc Urges Rule

Advocates of a general 5 per cent retail sales tax, designed to raise another 2½ billion dollars, likewise have been urging a special rule permitting any amendments that would add revenue to the bill, but barring any revision of the bill's present rates on individuals and corporations.

Sabath voiced doubt that the House would accept a sales tax, to which the Administration is emphatically opposed. But he said House acceptance of mandatory joint returns, defeated by the committee, would restore 420 million dollars in revenue to the shrunken bill, and other amendments might be offered to raise more than a billion. Pending conference with Morgenthau and Ways and Means committeemen, he said he was not prepared to say whether the House should vote separately on rate schedules now in the bill.

Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia in a House speech meanwhile urged the necessity of a sales tax for the dual purpose of financing the war effort and siphoning off part of the Nation's excess purchasing power. Robertson said 2½ billion dollars, raised from a sales tax, would aid the price control effort by reducing the demand for and competition for the diminishing supply of consumers' goods.

Sister, Friend See Boy, 13, Drown In Rock Creek

Within sight of his sister and a friend, Robert Schellhorn, 13, of 322 Second Street Southeast, drowned yesterday afternoon in Rock Creek just below Pierce Mill Dam.

According to Park Police, the youth went to the creek with his sister, Grace, 12, and Ervin Lee Reed, 13, of 533 Ninth Street Southeast, having planned a wading party more than a week ago.

The boy's body was recovered by Samuel Berry, 40, of 52 M Street Southeast, a former lifeguard at a Maryland beach. Berry is a truck driver employed on a construction project nearby and dived in when he heard the children's screams.

The Fire Rescue Squad tried for more than an hour to revive the boy. Coroner A. Magruder Macdonald issued a certificate of accidental drowning.

B. H. Didawick, manager of Pierce Mill, said that ordinarily the water at this point is about 3 feet deep, but apparently had deepened, due to recent rains.

Robert's mother, Katherine Schellhorn, 33, is a nurse's aide at Providence Hospital, and his father, Louis Schellborn, 36, is a truck driver for a local trash company.

Enemy Hurled Back in Fourth Day of Terrific Battle of Tanks

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Wednesday), July 1. The Red Army has launched a series of successful counterattacks on the Kursk front where Germany's great offensive, now in its fourth day, continued to smash in vain with waves of tanks and infantry at unyielding Russian lines.

The Moscow radio announced today that the Russians were attacking at several points in this sector, where one of the greatest tank battles of the war has been going on since Sunday.

Whole companies and battalions have been put out of action by the Russians, taking advantage of natural and artificial obstacles, the announcer said.

This bulletin came shortly after the midnight communique stated the Red army still continued to hurl back the waves of tanks and infantrymen with heavy losses. About 150 German tanks were destroyed in the Kursk sector, bringing the total losses of the Germans in this battle to 350 tanks in three days.

Tank Toll Reaches 350

The Russians also beat off massive German attacks on the fortifications of Sevastopol, Crimean naval base more than 500 miles to the south.

[The British radio reported today that 8000 Germans were slaughtered in a frustrated effort to cross Sewernaja Bay, east of Sevastopol, in hundreds of rubber boats. The B. B. C. was heard in New York by C. B. S.]

The Battle of Kursk, 200 miles south of Moscow, showed no signs of diminishing its intensity. The communique mentioned attacks of "big infantry and tank units" and said the Germans were suffering "colossal losses."

"In the Kursk direction, the stubborn battle continues," the communique said. "On one sector alone during the day we killed over 2000

Red Heroes Write Their Own Epitaph

Moscow, June 30 (AP)— . . . "Fire upon our positions."

With this dramatic message to their own artillery a gallant Red army battery, hopelessly surrounded by the Germans on the Sevastopol front, wrote its own heroic epitaph, Russian dispatches said today.

Under murderous assault by German planes, artillery and infantry, the battery held out for three days, and died to the last man rather than surrender.

67 Lose Lives

By the Associated Press

The sinking of three more United States merchant vessels, with a presumed loss of 67 lives, was announced yesterday by the Navy.

The latest losses raised to 327 the total of United and neutral nations' vessels unofficially tabulated by the Associated Press as lost in the Western Atlantic since Pearl Harbor.

Six seamen, sole survivors of the crew of 38 of a medium-sized vessel sunk more than 500 miles from land, said they believed they were torpedoed because immediately after the attack they saw light signals flashed between two points nearby. They sailed six days in a lifeboat before being picked up by another merchantman.

Eleven of the crew of 35 aboard a second ship, a small one, were lost when it was sunk in mid-June without warning. One lifeboat was

Without Mice

Today's News Of Battle Told By Herodotus

This war's censors have stymied many a reporter with a story to tell, but Chester Morrison, Cairo correspondent for the Chicago Sun, has devised a method to give his editors a clue about what is happening in the battle for Egypt, a dispatch showed yesterday.

"The delicacies of censorship," he said, "are such that I have been stumped in an attempt to devise a form telling the whole story in other words than in relaying the communique cliches which may be understandable to experts, but which do not deal with anything except military phrases."

Then in an apparent effort to show that Axis Gen. Erwin Rommel's armament was superior to the British, his dispatch, which can be interpreted several ways, went on:

"There is a passage in Herodotus which, since it was published 2,000 years ago, may be passable now. When recounting the battle for Egypt in his time Herodotus wrote:

"'As two armies lay opposite each other there came in the night a multiude of field mice which devoured all the quivers and the bowstrings of the enemy and ate the thongs by which they managed their shields. The next morning the enemy commenced their fight and great multitudes fell as they did not have arms with which to defend themselves.'

"There is a remarkable scarcity of field mice in the present campaign."

In spite of the news received of the fight being put up by New Zealanders, Morrison apparently implied that New Zealand artillery was not in action, if any New Zealanders at all had joined the battle. His dispatch said:

"Much is being written about the participation of New Zealand artillery units in the current battle. They did not participate in the earlier phases, however, and the last time I saw New Zealanders was in Syria."

Japs Opening New Campaign In East China

Province of Fukien Appears to Be Next Invader Objective

By William McGaffin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chungking, June 30.—Japanese forces in Kiangsi Province appeared tonight to have opened a new phase of their East China campaign with indications that the coastal province of Fukien might be their next objective.

Japanese columns admittedly were making progress through eastern Kiangsi toward the Fukien border and a Chinese spokesman said some 50,000 Japanese troops from the Philippines were concentrated on Formosa, Japanese island off Fukien's coast.

They were there, the Chinese heard, "for readjustment and training"—presumably after their hard campaigning and heavy losses that preceded the reduction of Bataan and Corregidor—but Formosa notoriously is a preparation ground for offensive action. The conquest of the Philippines was rehearsed there.

Near Province's Border

Japanese columns already are in southern Chekiang, near Fukien's northern border, and in eastern Kiangsi, just west of Fukien. Chinese strategists believed there might be coordinated drives from both directions against the province which the Japanese need to round out their conquests and give them a safe overland route from Shanghai to Singapore.

The Chinese high command communique admitted that Japanese forces attacking south of Ihwang, 80 miles south-southeast of Nanchang, former capital of Kiangsi, had made progress.

The communique was silent on the situation along the Chekiang-Kiangsi railway, the objective of most of the East China fighting in the last six weeks, but a spokesman

Fight Is Raging Along Narrow Coast; U. S. Air Force in Action

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, June 30.—Swiftly attacking Axis armored columns plunged past El Daba, only 100 miles west of Alexandria, tonight on an advance that imperiled the entire defense of Egypt.

This marked a 75-mile sweep during one night and day since the fall of Matruh. [The United Press said Axis forces were only 80 miles from Alexandria.]

Whether the Axis sweep beyond El Daba—generally regarded as the point where the mauled Eighth Army had been expected to make a firm stand—was in force or by scattered panzer units was not clarified in a brief announcement tonight.

The fighting tonight continued in the whole vast funnel-shaped zone between the Mediterranean and the Qattara Depression—to the west of El Daba as well as to the east, British military experts emphasized.

[According to the International News Service, new tank reinforcements reached the British lines in the El Alamein area and are being blasted furiously by Axis bombers. El Alamein is about 70 miles west of Alexandria and 30 miles east of El Daba.

[The United Press quoted officials as saying there was no fighting at El Daba, that the British abandoned it "in conformity with our tactics of avoiding a static and continuing a fluid front."]

Details of Battle Unknown

The enemy force which succeeded in driving as far as El Daba was believed composed of one German division, probably of mixed arms, although exact details of the fighting had not reached Cairo.

Despite the determined British fight, some enemy elements were still feeling their way eastward.

The Eighth Army, now under the personal command of Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck, may be able to stand firm at a natural defense position 35 miles east of El Daba. There the desert between the Mediterranean and the eastern extremity of the soft, sand-bogged Qattara Depression narrows to about 36 miles.

U. S. Force in Fighting

This is the narrow point of the bottleneck into which the Axis forces have plunged in their speedy advance against the British, who, although exacting what Nazi casualties they could, have been withdrawing without making a major stand.

Fresh New Zealand and Free French reinforcements and new United States Army Air Force squadrons joined the battle during the day and earlier reports said the British lines were stiffening.

The battle of rapid maneuver still was highly fluid, but the Axis forces

2500 Short of Quota

17,645 District Youths 18-20 In 5th Selective Service Call

Exactly 17,645 Washington youths between 18 and 20 enrolled in yesterday's fifth registration for Selective Service as the Nation completed the gigantic task of organizing its man power, which reached a total of approximately 43 million men.

The District figure fell about 2500 short of the predicted total. In contrast to past registrations, yesterday's was decidedly slow here and there were no long lines at the 49 registration centers. District officials attributed it to the fact that many of the youths were on vacation and registration for Selective Service was by now no novelty. It was also pointed out that many of the youths were working and preferred to sign up after leaving their jobs at the end of the day.

Dr. Chester Holmes, chief registration officer, said that the total figure comprised 11,144 white registrants and 6501 Negroes. Thomson Elementary School Center had the highest enrollment with 858, while the Stuart Junior High School center was a close second with 853.

Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, accompanied his 19-year-old son, Robert, to Woodrow Wilson High School at 7 a. m.

In the Nation there are about 3 million in the 18 to 20 groups, but under existing law only the 20-year-olds are subject to call. Those who became 20 by last September 30 were registered February 16 and some of them are in the Army now.

In other parts of the country the registration was much livelier than here. The New York City draft director described this registration—the fifth—as the most efficient of them all. It was estimated that 35 per cent of the city's 160,000 eligibles registered in the first four hours.

Ewing Sentenced To 8-24 Years

A jail sentence of 8 to 24 years was imposed in District Court yesterday on Orman W. Ewing, 55-year-old former politician convicted of raping a young Government worker in October of 1941. At the same time, Justice James W. Morris dismissed a motion for a new trial for the former Democratic national committeeman and denied a request for his release on bond until the case could be heard by the United States Court of Appeals.

City Attorney and Legislator Shot to Death in Lynchburg

By the Associated Press

Lynchburg, Va., June 30.—The city attorney of Lynchburg and its representative in the Virginia House of Delegates were shot and killed in a downtown office building today and a short time later police pushed their way through the lunch hour crowd in the corridors to arrest a middle-aged salesman cringing in one of the victim's offices.

Stepping over the body of T. Franklin Daniel, 42-year-old State legislator, officers kicked in the door of his office and confronted Warren Myers, 51. He came from behind Daniel's desk and throwing up his hands, said Lieut. J. Malcolm Burruss, entreated:

"Don't kill me! Please don't kill me!"

Burruss said Myers' explanation was that he shot Daniel and T. Gibson Hobbs, 57, because of their actions in opposing him in a lawsuit. He was charged with murder.

The lawsuit over which the shooting allegedly occurred was a $550,000 claim against the American Wells Corp. of Aurora, Ill. Myers

U. S. Agents Subject Refugees To Nation's Record Spy Quiz

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

Jersey City, N. J., June 30.—A tough, vigilant Uncle Sam, on Argus-eyed guard against further "invasions" by Axis saboteurs or spies, today subjected the 942 passengers returning from Europe aboard the war-time exchange liner Drottningholm to the most rigid checkup ever conducted aboard ship in New York Harbor.

The FBI, Army Intelligence, Navy Intelligence and Immigration officials comprised a gantlet of star-chamber boards which questioned and cross-questioned passengers one by one after the Drottningholm, on her second diplomatic exchange voyage from Lisbon, docked in Jersey City shortly before 10 a. m.

More than seven hours after the ship's arrival, not more than 50 passengers had been permitted ashore, so minute was the interrogation to which they were subjected. Of this number, only 32 were permitted to

Return That Mat, Mr. Ickes! It's No Good for Tires

Akron, Ohio, June 30 (AP).—Secretary Harold L. Ickes might as well give that rubber mat back to the White House for all the good it will do the war effort.

Furthermore, you might as well keep the rubber mats on your automobile floor boards. Their only use, say reclaiming plants, is to make more mats.

Ickes carried a rubber mat out of the White House for the scrap collection. Since then, piles of matting have been turned in here.

A survey of major rubber companies shows this type of scrap can't be used for tires, tubes, conveyor belts or even tire retreads.

Shakeup Disarms Churchill Critics

General Auchinleck Takes Command Of Desert Forces

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 30.—A decisive victory for Winston Churchill's government was predicted tonight by well-informed sources after he partly disarmed critics by announcing that Gen. Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck, commander in chief in the Middle East, had assumed command in north Africa on June 25, superseding Lieut. Gen. Neil M. Ritchie.

It was Churchill's first appearance in Commons since his return from the United States and he received a tumultuous welcome. Later he conferred with King George.

Nevertheless, the two-day debate which opens tomorrow was expected to verge on the acrimonious and the probing and criticism were expected to wring from Churchill some concessions. These, the Parliamentary sources said, would be most likely to take the form of the creation of a more effective body to direct the British military effort, such as a combined general staff.

Silent on U. S. Talks

The Prime Minister gave no accounting today of his conferences with President Roosevelt, confining himself to this brief statement:

"I do not propose to make any statement today about the momentous battle now being fought in Egypt, but I feel the House would wish to know that on June 25 General Auchinleck decided to assume command of the Eighth Army personally in succession to General Ritchie.

"As soon as Auchinleck informed the government of the decision he had takn he was at once told that it had our approval."

The most significant development of the day, pointing to a strengthening of the government's position in commons, was the decision of the powerful Conservatice "1922 commite" not to support the motion of Sir John Wardlaw-Milne, Conservative, for a "no-confidence" vote, calling it "ill advised."

This decision, in the opinion of Consrvative members, far outweighed the addition of Sir Henry Morris-Jones and Sir Murdoch MacDonald, Liberal Nationalists, to the lists of critics backing the motion.

Morris-Jones expressed the views of the opposition and of tmany members who will probably abstain from voting when he declared he supported Churchill as prime minister but not as minister of defense.

After Churchill's statement on Auchinleck, the House showed some signs of stubbornness by heckling Lieut. Col. Sir Edward W. M. Grigg for failing to answer directly questions regarding the supply of dive bombers for Army support.

Wavell Report Kept Secret

Criticis of Churchill decided to have WardlawMilne move the "no-confidence" mtoion to open the debate, with Sir Roger Keyes, an admiral to the fleet, as the second speaker. Clement Davies, opposition liberal, will conclude the first day; and Leslie Hore-Belisha, former war secretary, and the Laborite, Aneurin Bevan, will speak on the second day in that order.

The government banks on Churchill's speech backed by his tremendous prestige to override it.

Churchill today declined to permit publication of the reports of Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, commander in chief in India, on the losses in Malaya and Singapore, remarking that it would "clearly cause a great deal of ill-will throughout the British Empire."

War Sidelights

Hitler Faces Opposition Of Churches

London, June 30 (AP).—Disclosure today of a critical sermon delivered Sunday by the Bishop of Brelin, Count Konrad von Preysing-Lichtenegg-Moos, coupled with recent anti-Nazi manifestations by Catholic priests in occupied countries, have led informed British sources to the belief there might be the beginning of coordinated Church opposition to Adolf Hitler.

The Bishop of Berlin was reported to have said:

"Justice deriving from God cannot be replaced by justice derived from the state. It is a fatal mistake to believe that the state is the highest expression of divinity."

The Belgian government in exile here, reported that a Catholic priest had been arrested at Leval-Trahegnies for preaching an anti-Nazi sermon. Catholic priests in other parts of Belgium, it was said, have refused to hold services for Belgian Nazis killed in Russia.

For the first time in Holland's religious history, the Catholic Church last April collaborated with the Dutch Reformed Protestant Church on a pastoral letter advising young Dutchmen not to join the Nazi labor service.

In Norway the Oslo clergy of the State Church continue to regard Eivind Berggrav, deposed by the Nazis, as the head of the church.

British Cut 'Pop' Supply

London, June 30 (AP).—The food ministry announced today it was closing down 200 soft drink plants in Britain in a reorganization of the industry designed to save 400,000 tons of transport annually.

2649th Alert in Malta

Valletta, Malta, June 30 (AP).—The 2649th air raid alert sounded today in Malta, the tiny island 70 miles south of Italian Sicily which has been bombed more than any place on earth.

An airdrome of the British base was attacked during four alerts last night, but there was little damage, a British communique said. One bomber was destroyed by a night fighter. Activity today was negligible.

Coogan Studies Gliding

Plainview, Tex., June 30 (AP).—Pvt. Jackie Coogan, who as "The Kid" won movie fame, reported yesterday for training as an Army glider pilot.

Turks Seize Chutists

London, June 30 (AP).—Two German parachutists, each equipped with a two-way radio set, were arrested by Turkish authorities three weeks ago on the Caucasian boarder, Reuters reported today from Ankara.

It was believed that the pilot had intended dropping his passengers behind the Russian lines for an espionage mission but had mistaken his position and let them jump while they were over Turkish territory.

R. A. F. Blasts Bremen Again

By the Associated Press

London, June 30.—The German U-boat nest at Bremen was attacked heavily last night by the Royal Air Force and an informed source declared the cumulative destruction inflicted there has put the Nazis' second biggest port "in much the same state as Cologne, Essen, Emden, Lubeck and Rostock."

Looking back to the 1000-plane raid on Bremen last Thursday night and the follow-up blows delivered Saturday and Monday nights, observers calculated the port had been hit by about 2000 tons of high explosives over a span of five nights.

In addition, it was reckoned that tens of thousands of fire bombs—probably 100,000—were dropped on the submarine building yards, railway installations, factories and warehouses, and it was estimated that 1400 twin and four-engined bombers had been sent over Bremen in the last three raids.

Some 300 planes in the "strong force" which struck at the heart of Nazi submarine production last night found the port still smoking from the previous raids.

The British announced the loss of only nine bombers in the night's work which spread over airfields in German-occupied territory and to railway objectives in France and shipping off the French coast.

(The Germans acknowledged that fires were started in residential sections of Bremen and declared ten British raiders were downed in this ninety-seventh raid on the great port.)

Army Veteran Registers

Klamath Falls, Ore.—When the 45-to-64 year men here registered for the Army, Bob Ellis signed up for the fourth time. The first was for the Spanish-American War, the second was for the Boxer rebellion in China, and the third for World War I. Ellis has a son who is a major in chemical warfare and a grandson with sergeant's stripes in the Army.

Registers, Although 66

Portland, Me.—Though he said his age was 66, Francis E. Morse of Brattleboro, Vt., insisted on registering with those between 44 and 64 before the draft board here. Draft officials admitted there was no law to prohibit his action, but wrote "voluntary" on his papers.

leave the pier.

This meant that hundreds of travel-weary, disappointed passengers turned back from the ship's railing, which they had lined for hours, to spend yet anotoher night on the Drottningholm.

Diplomatic immunity went by the board after the Drottningholm arrived and Uncle Same went to work. Approximately 165 North and South merican diplomats were put through the star chamber sessions. The only concession granted them and their families was that of appearing first before the examining boards.

Ship Heavily Guarded

The passengers who were kept aboard after the pier was locked up for the night at 7 p. m. were placed under heavy guard. Every precaution was being taken lest any Axis agents had slipped aboard the liner in Lisbon with forged American passports.

By midday the watchful eyes of a customs agent netted the first big haul. But it was a trio of allegedly big-time, international diamond smugglers.

The three arrested were Alex B. Bethelsen and his wife, and the latters sister, Dorothy Greenberg. All were indicted five years ago as members of the so-called Ginsburg diamond smuggling syndicate. Following the indictment in 1937, the trio fled to France.

Fact again outflanked fiction shortly before noon when Ruth Mitchell, sister of the late Gen. "Billy" Mitchell, was the first passenger to step ashore. Behind her were many months in 12 different Axis concentration camps, but not her membership in the famed Comitadji, part of the Yugoslav guerilla army now harrassing Axis forces.

"I am still a Chetink (guerilla)," she explained. "Once a member, always a member."

The first and only American woman ever to join the daring Chetnik organization, Miss Mitchell said her job was that of dispatch rider because "I was just about able to ride anything with four legs."

The German threat of invasion in the Balkans lead her to enlist in the guerilla band in April, 1941. At that time, Miss Mitchell was studying Balkan folklore. She enlisted as an aid to Kosta Pecanec, the aged chieftain of the 400-year-old Comitadji.

Four months after her enlistment, the Gestapo arrested Miss Mitchell. Then began the long months of imprisonment in a dozen concentration camps until finally she was included in the exchange group returned today in the Drottingholm.

A slim woman with vivid, titian hair, Miss Mitchell had with her today the vial of poison given each Chetnik with which to commit suicide rather than submit to capture. The vial, she explained, is always worn in the lapel of the Chetnik uniform.

Admiral Says Nazis Won't Keep British Out of Mediterranean

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The British fleet could continue to operate in the Mediterranean even if Field Marshal Rommel should capture Alexandria, a distinguished sailor said here yesterday.

He was Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, former commander in chief of the British Mediterranean Fleet, who has just come to Washington as head of he Brtish Admiraly Delegaion.

Sir Andrew who exploded Mussolini's "Mare Nosrum" claims and by his vicories led British newspapers to nickname the Mediterranean "Cunningham's Pond," told newspapermen that the loss of Alexandria would be "very awkward." But he denied that its fall would mean that the British fleet would be trapped.

"We could use Port Said or possibly Haifa," he said. "I hope we are not in danger of being cut off, but I believe that the danger is being provided against."

Rommel Got Supplies

A plain-spoken, rather shy man, who says he would rather be back with the fleet than at a desk, Sir Andrew, discussed the failures in Libya and the Mediterranean frankly and without trying to dodge the question of why the British failed to hold Rommel.

What was the primary cause of the Libya "catastrophe?" somebody asked him.

"I don't know the real cause," he said, "but the naval angle is this—that last October and November our advance attacks by submarine, R. A. F. bombers and the fleet air arm were devastating the Nazi convoys by which Rommel was supplied. At one time 50 per cent of the ships sailing from Italy to Tripoli were sunk.

"The Germans then shifted their air forces to Sicily, and pounded Malta so that they neutralized our air forces and got across some supplies. Rommel obviously got more supplies than we thought."

Used Land-Based Bombers

Another factor costing Britain control of the Mediterranean sea route, Sir Andrew said, was the operations of land-based bombers which had a great advantage in the narrow waters.

He disclosed that the Axis had tried three times, without success, to close the Suez Canal by mining it. The longest delay caused by these air-borne mines, he said, was four days. But now with more efficient sweeping, he said, the British could clear the canal in 24 hours except under persistent attack. He said it took ten or 12 hours to get a man-o'-war through the canal.

With the remark that "I don't think I should criticize even enemy admirals," the victor of Calabria and Matapan refused to discuss the fighting ability of the Italian fleet. However, he estimated Italian strength at from four to five "moderately efficient" battleships, two or three 8-inch cruisers and six to eight 6-inch cruisers.

Czech Patriot Blasts Train With 6 'Pens'

By James T. Carter
Associated Press Staff Writer

New roYk, June 30.—Come along with a Czechslovak patriot as he blows up a Nazi freight train with fountain pens.

It's deep midnight when a motorcyclist speeds up to the leader of a group of Czech saboteurs in the German-occupied land, and, according to this account received here today by the American friends of Czechoslovakia, hands him this message:

"Tomorrow at 4:10 a. m. a freight train leaves station—for the Russian front. See that it does not arrive."

That brief, unsigned order, borne by an unidentified courier, sets the chief saboteur in motion. Racing down the street to an inn, he summons a taxi driver and they roll out to the edge of a wood. The saboteur, a young student, stands in a clearing and makes a sound like a hoot owl.

The eerie call is answered.

Then, the account of this particular instance goes on, the student enters an old game warden's cottage and is welcomed by the housewife "with the look of women whose husbands have been dragged off to concentration camps."

The housewife takes the patriot to the cellar where, from a shelf behind some barrels, he selects six fountain pens of assorted sizes. He rejoins his driver and goes to another wood near the railway, hiding in the bush along the right-of-way.

"A little after 4 in the morning," the report sas, "a freight train appeared—coal cars and then tank cars. The student took a pen marked 'K' from his pockt and threw it onto the small platform of the tank car. His second pen landed on a flat car of straw. The third and fourth landed on two more tank cars o foil. The thickest pen landed on the roof of a boxcar which he rightly conjectured was loaded with ammunition.

"The results came out next day when the grapevine passed along word that there had been a serious railway accident at Lvov. A freight train rolling towad the Russian front had suddenly and inexplicably exploded in five places. A German troop train crashed into the wreck and some 800 soldiers were injured, many of them very seriously."

Thus does a beaten people write bad news for their oppressor, with pens of explosives far more indelible than ink.

Slag Piles Yield Scrap Metal

Canton, Ohio (AP).—Those huge, unsightly piles of slag and waste that have cluttered the landscape near steel mills for years have become "acres of diamonds" for the industry as the result of a reclamation program pioneered by Republic Steel Corporation.

Started as an experiment last fall when donation of old iron dogs and bedsteads by citizens failed to yield enough scrap, the reclamation program at first brought in about 700 tons a month at dumps at three mills. Since December, however, about 6000 tons are being reclaimed monthly.

Grim Heroism Marks Sevastopol Defense

By Ilya Ehrenbourg
Soviet War Correspondent Written for United Press.

Moscow, June 30.—Admiral Kornilov, who was in charge of the defense of Sevastopol in the Crimean War 88 years ago, issued an order of the day which said:

"There can be no thought of surrender. If anyone says to you in my name that we must surrender, shoot him for a traitor. And if I should issue an order for surrender, shoot me, too."

Those words echo around the world today as Sevastopol again fights for its life. Twenty-six days of hell have not broken the spirit of the defenders.

"Black Death" to Nazis

There they stand, those powder-stained defenders of Sevastopol who have not slept for days on end. The Germans call them "black death."

The whole population has gone underground. The center of the city is destroyed. On the main street only Lenin's monument still stands.

War Prisoner Kneidler tells what the siege of Sevastopol is like from the German viewpoint:

"We didn't expect such resistance. Every stone seems to be shooting at you."

Before one German attack, Political Instructor Mikhail Gakhokidze told his men:

70 Dead Germans

The Germans attacked in strong force four times. Gakhokidze, armed with rifle and grenades, lunged at the enemy. Three men followed him. Jumping into a trench, he hurled two grenades and bayoneted a German oficer and three soldiers. Seizing a machine gun, he began firing point blank. The four men annihilated 70 Germans.

The company of political instructor Anatoly Trachenko repulsed three tank attacks. In a fourth, the leading tank reached the Russian trenches. Trachenko flung himself beneath the tank, grenades lashed to his belt. The tank was halted.

Oberlieutenant Oskar Greiser wrote in his diary, which fell into Russian hands:

"Near Bakhchisarai stood the sacred city of the Crimeans known as Chefut-Kale, and nearby is a valley which was called the valley of death. The city, or rather the ruins of the ancient city, has been liquidated by our soldiers and the valley now justifies its name. If I am not mistaken the greater part of the population of Erfurt, Jena and Eisenach lie buried there."

Can't Make the Trip Just Now, Thanks

With the United States Army in Northern Ireland (AP).—The "tough-break" champion of the army got the sobriquet back in the States, but the crowning incident, to his way of thinking, occurred here.

The public relations department of the camp where Private Curtis Kirkpatrick, of Pierre, S. Dak., was stationed in the U. S. called him "the tough-break champion" and cited a broken arm, a lightning bolt, torn ligaments in the right leg, a furnace explosion and a 9-inch cut in his lower lip—in succession—as evidence.

The story, widely circulated, got Kirkpatrick an invitation to visit Hollywood, all expenses paid, as a guest of Preston Foster.

Kirkpatrick received the invitation the other day—in Northern Ireland.

UNIV. OF CALIFORNIA

Has Our Town Gone Mad?

YOU bet it has—fighting mad!

But don't take Mr. Steig's picture too literally. It's merely his way of describing what people around this old town of Washington are buying every day with their War Bonds.

Do you know that every $18.75 War Bond will buy enough fuel oil for a destroyer to cruise 37 miles in search of Nazi submarines?

Do you know that every $37.50 bond will buy 6 shells for an anti-tank gun?

That every $75 bond will buy 40 rounds of anti-aircraft fire—enough to bring down the biggest Jap bomber that ever threatened an American warship?

Yes, Washingtonians are sending all these things to our battle fronts every time they buy a War Bond.

But they are doing more than that. For America is not asking Our Town to give this money—even to make sure that our way of life is not blotted out by Fascism!

Instead, you are lending this money to your country. You are being paid generous interest. And you can get your money back after the first sixty days, if you need it.

In just ten years these bonds will be worth one-third more—you'll receive $25 for every $18.75 you invest in War Bonds today.

And think what this will mean ten years from now! For you personally it will provide a cushion to ease the shock of family readjustment from war to peace.

But more important, this vast fund of savings that you and millions of others have built up will be a bulwark against dreaded inflation. It can protect us against the economic ruin that has struck so many people in the past.

For this all, your country asks that you buy your share of War Bonds and Stamps. Retail stores, today from 12 noon to 12:15, will suspend all store selling in a National "White-Out for Victory," to promote the sale of War Bonds and Stamps. Invest your share in VICTORY—today and every day.

Agriculture Without Funds As New Fiscal Year Begins

stricted the 30-day extension to the controversial provisions of the House bill, and included the House ban on below-parity sales of Government grain. Thus the same issues were projected which deadlocked the main bill, and Senate conferees refused to accept it. Speaker Rayburn likewise objected to adoption of a continuing resolution conferees had made a last effort at full agreement.

Record Appropriations

While conferees considered and discarded at least two suggested compromises, House and Senate in close teamwork completed action on all other major measures needed to finance the Government's work in the new fiscal year. Last to clear the jam was the $1,071,000,000 Labor-Federal security measure, liquidating the Civilian Conservation Corps. Waiting for conferees to agree on the CCC death warrant, both Houses recessed through the dinner hour, then returned to confirm the action and approve other funds in the bill.

The $44,809,600,000 grand total in the six bills sped to the White House for signature carried appropriations at this session to a record for any single term of Congress—$134,500,000,000. For war agencies alone, $205,000,000,000 has been appropriated since January 1940. Since Pearl Harbor, $129,000,000,000 in war funds have been voted.

280 Million Dollars for WPA

Besides the $42,821,900,000 War Department measure, passed by the Senate in hal fan hour, bills finally approved during the day were the Labor-Federal Security bill, 425 million dollars in State, Justice and Commerce appropriations, 280 million dollars for WPA, $178,099,000 for the Interior Department, and the $32,500,000 District war housing measure.

The President is expected to take a direct hand in the House-Senate tangle on the Agriculture appropriation bill, as the dispute involves not only his "food for victory" program, but the Administration's policy of marketing surplus grain below parity for feed and industrial uses.

The Senate approved a compromise of that plan, which would permit one hundred and twenty-five million bushels of surplus wheat to be sold at 85 per cent of the parity price of corn for feed and industrial uses. The House in two separate votes insisted that only "deteriorated" grains be released for below-parity sales. It likewise refused to accept the Administration's formula for counting soil benefit payments as part of farm parity income.

Rehabilitation Disagreement

Senate and House were equally far apart on farm rehabilitation funds. The House voted only 75 million dollar fof farm security loans and grants and refused to accept the Senate's increase to 125 million dollars. It voted the Farm Security Administration only 25 million, against the Senate's demand for 50 million dollars. The Senate also voted two million dollars for Farm Tenant Act administration, plus 40 million for tenant loans. The House refused to accept more than $1,250,000 and 25 million dollars in tenant authorizations.

During yesterday's futile effort at agreement, House confrees proposed as a compromise that 25 million bushels of wheat be released at corn parity prices between now and mid-September. They offered 5 million dollars more in farm tenant loans, but refused to accept other Senate increases. Senate conferees rejected the compromise. Efforts then were made to rach agrmnt on the resolution temporarily extending appropriations, but calapsed when the same issues were injected.

Eleventh-Hour Proposal

As House conferees returned with the farm bill still in deadlock, Speaker Rayburn called a conference off the House lobby and insistde on another effort at agreement.

It was learned that one eleventh hour proposal for a compromise involves the Bankhead-Fullmer bills guaranteeing 100 per cent parity loans on wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco and rice. The Senate Agriculture committee already has reported such a bill, but it was believed un acceptable to the Administration. Under the proposal, farmers would be assured of a 100 per cent parity loan, virtually pegging prices, and the Government could sell the surplus thus acquired at any price it chose. If wheat is used for feed purposes, it would have to sell at a loss.

Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia and Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama are expected to ask early enate action on the 100 per cent loan proposal. If the liberal loan policy is approved, it was indicated that a majority of House conferees would accept the Senate's provision for below-parity sales of Government-owned grain.

Mayor Hague Bids for Power Through Meany, Norris States

By the Associated Press

Senator Norris (Independent) of Nebraska, charged in the Senate yesterday that Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City was seeking to extend "his power into the domain of the United States Government" through the elevation of Thomas F. Meaney to the Federal District Court in New Jersey.

Confirmation of Meaney's nomination, he said in a three-hour speech, would be "received with condemnation and shame by most of the liberty-loving citizens of the United States."

Senator Smathers (Democrat) of New Jersey, chairman of the Judiciary subcommittee which held public hearings on Meaney's qualifications, sought an immediate vote on confirmation but action was deferred until today.

Norris asserted that Meaney was "unfit for public office because he is part and parcel of the Hague machine." Reading from testimony of the hearings and quoting from letters he said he had received in opposition to the nomination, Norris said:

"When the faith of the common people in the judiciary is gone, then we have nothing left.

"Judges must be free, honest and independent. When people get the idea they are corrupt, elements of decay already have entered the superstructure, and it is only a question of time when the pillars of justice come crumbling down on the ruins of such a republic."

Ellender Cites Good Record

Senator Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, said that as a State judge Meaney "made a very commendable record and conducted himself beyond reproach." Norris replied that Meaney "may make a good judge till the Hague machine comes in and then he redeems his pledge."

Norris declared that Meaney resigned a common pleas judgeship in New Jersey with the assertion that the $15,000-a-year salary "wasn't money enough."

"Now he's making a bitter struggle for a position which pays $10,000," Norris said. "It's a fact worth considering."

OPA Gagged By 75 Million House Budget

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Drastic curtailment of major phases of its anti-inflation program which may be translated into rising living costs for 130 million Americans last night confronted the Office of Price Administration under the restriction of a 75-million-dollar budget voted by the House.

The House action came as OPA was prepared to launch today these measures for restraining living costs in two vital economic areas:

1. Extension of price ceilings to the five-billion-dollar retail service industry—laundry, dry cleaning, repairs, etc. One million establishments providing a wide variety of services in connection with commodities will be governed by the ceilings—..generally maximum prices of last March and effective at 12:01 a. m. today—but administration of this order, in the view of OPA spokesmen, may be "seriously impaired" to the disadvantage of both business and consumer.

2. Invocation of rigid Federal rent ceilings reducing by at least 10 per cent rents paid by nearly 38 million Americans in 75 population centers, including Washington's Maryland and Virginia suburbs. Unless Congress votes OPA additional funds, no money is in sight, officials say, to provide administrative personnel not only for the 75 areas but for 231 war production communities where rising rents also call for regulation.

Deadline for Filing

In addition, today is the deadline for every retail store selling "cost-of-living" commodities—200 important categories of food, clothing, furniture, etc.—to file with the nearest War Price and Rationing Board a statement of its ceiling (March) prices for these commodities.

Also beginning today, every retailor, wholesaler, jobber, distributor and manufacturer must have available for public inspection a list of his highest March prices together with customary allowances, discounts and other price differentials.

OPA is now operating at about 78 million dollars a year, 3 millions less than the House appropriated. Unless the House figure is raised, officials see OPA's whole cost-of-living program in jeopardy.

Drastic Curtailment

OPA now is employing, or has scheduled for employment, between 35,000 and 38,000 persons, of whom 6200 are in Washington, the balance in the field in regional, State and district officers under its program for bringing inflation control close to the people and the businesses it affffects.

The dencentralization program caled forestablishment of 230 district offices, and this probably wil have to be abandoned, as not more than 10 or 15 have ben organized. In addition, OPA forsees the scraping of control for 231 areas where high rents are an acute problem.

Nearly 2 Billion Voted for War Activities

The House late yesterday voted $1,808,669,615.47 to finance Federal war activities, including 75 million for Leon Henderson's Office of Price Administration, after majority leaders headed off a drive to cut the OPA to 50 million. Senate hearings on the funds are expected to begin tomorrow.

The only fund cut below Appropriation Committee estimates which won House approval was a $1,818,000 slash for the Board of Economic Warfare, headed by Vice President Wallace, leaving the founds for the agncy at 12 million dollars.

Sharp criticism of the pric agency and its administrator, which carried the House into a night session Monday, was resumed yesterday, and Representative Taber (Republican) of New York proposed that its funds be cut to the 50-million-dollar figure, with the plea that such action would result in improved administration.

Chief Counsel Rapped

Taber called for OPA administration "on the basis of public cooperation, and not with a sledge hammer." He charged that Paul Porter, deputy OPA administrator in charge of rent control, had no real estate experience, and that OPA Chief Counsel C. David Ginsburg "little more than a year ago was getting $2800 a year" in the Government.

Taber's attack was joined by Representative Cooley (Democrat) of North Carolina, who at one point asked whether the Price Control Act should not be repealed and Representative Crawford (Republican) of Michigan, who declared that Henderson could not control prices if he had a billion dollars to spend, unless Congress enacted heavier taxes, wage stabilization and forced savings.

Representative Hoffman (Republican) of Michigan, also urged a ceiling on wages to go with price control, while Representative Barden (Democrat) of North Carolina, criticized the OPA for failing to employ "people who understand the problems of rural areas."

Kunkel Enters Lists

Against the criticism, a corps of majority members came to the defense of Henderson and the OPA, and one minority member, Representative Kunkel of Pennsylvania, said that the Appropriation Committee had cut the agency "too much" in recommending 75 million. Henderson's original request was for 210 million, and the Budget Bureau recommended 161 million.

Kunkel said he thought Henderson was doing a "magnificent job," and "I don't want to see him handicapped."

Representative Woodrum (Democrat) of Virginia said that the Price Control Act affects the financial forcrat of some 2,200,000 firms, and the living standard of most of the country. "We'll not perform a service by taking away money to administer the act," he said.

"No Personalities"

Woodrum joined with Majority Leader McCormack in urging the House not to "mix personalities" in their decision about the job to be done by OPA or the amount of funds to be granted.

Representative Patman (Democrat) of Texas, praised the qualifications of Henderson and Ginsburg and warned that Henderson's task is to keep the dollar worth a dollar, and keep the $50 pay checks of Army privates worth $50.

Representative Mary Norton (Democrat) of New Jersey said th Congressmen would "hear at election time" if consumers are faced with rises in the cost of living, and she suggested that th OPA funds be increased. Representative Casey (Democrat) of Massachusetts, joined in the warning that Congress would be blamd of "sabotaging" price control if the housewives see prics going up.

Cole Offer Killed

An amendment offered by Rep. Cole Republican), of New York, to require Congress to approve rationing orders was discarded on a point of order. The proposal of Rep. Jesie Sumner, (Republican) of Illinois, to bar persons eligible for Selective Service from OPA employment was voted down 87 to 39.

Killed on a voice vote was an amendment, offered by Rep. Van Zandt, (Republican), of Pennsylvania, whose effect would have been to bar the OPA from using funds to enforce any rationing order which was not nation-wide. That was aimed at the gasoline rationing, which applies to the seaboard States.

Refugee Refuses First Pay Check For 'Doing Duty'

Des Moines, Iowa (U.P.).—George Logothetis is a most unusual war worker.

When his first pay check was handed to him at the local ordnance plant, he refused it. He could not see why he should be paid for doing his duty. Finally, he took the money—and purchased war stamps.

Before the Nazis overran Greece, Logothetis was general manager of theonly munitions factory in that Balkan state. He was sent to America by the Greak government to obtain needed war materials under lend-lease aid after Italy had invaded his native country.

Logothetis managed to dispatch nine munition-laded ships to his homeland. The first two arrived as the Germans were bombing Athens and were sunk. The third exploded in the Red Sea. The other six safely reached British hands.

He was no longer needed by his government after Greece surrendered, so he offered his services to the United States Rubber Co., which manages the Des Moines ordnance plant. His offer was snapped up and Logothetis came here as a technical adviser.

Logothetis says, "I am only doing my duty in a small way. The more munitions we turn out here, the nearer the day I can return to my home country."

Congress Signs Death Warrant For CCC

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Curtains for the Civilian Conservation Corps, one of the first of the New Deal's relief agencies, were ordered rung down for the duration last night and liquidation of the agency will start this morning.

Congress completed action to liquidate the CCC at 7:35 p. m., nine years and three months after President Roosevelt signed the act setting up the agency.

The last act in Congress was a Senate voice vote approving expenditure of eight million dollars to wind up the affairs of the CCC. The liquidation was left to James J. McEntee, CCC director, and he was given a year in which to do the job.

House Gives Approval

Forty-five minutes earlier the House, also on a voice vote, approved the liquidation plan, but the fate of the corps had been sealed shortly after noon when the House voted 229 to 121 against appropriating about $76,500,000 to continue the CCC work.

Final disposition of the Corps was included in the Labor-Federal Security appropriation bills. Other than the CCC, the major point of difference between Senate and House through yesterday involved setting up a Federal loan fund for technical and professional students whose work is of value to the war effort. The two Houses finally agreed to limit the fund to five million dollars, and to extend loans only to students whose work can be completed within two years.

Appropriation Passes Billion

The total appropriation, which went to the White House, carried about $1,071,000,000 for the Labor Department, Federal Security Agency, Employes Compensation Commission, National Labor Relations Board, National Mediation Board, and the Railroad Retirement Board.

Although Director McEntee issued no statement on elimination of the CCC, a spokesman for his office said that the director is expected to call a meeting this morning of the officials handling CCC work in the War, Agriculture and Interior Departments and the Veterans Administration.

A plan for the liquidation has been worked out in tentative form within the past week, and the first orders putting it into effect are expected to go out today, it was said. The plan is to liquidate as fast as possible, sending the enrollees home as soon as transportation can be found, and turning the CCC property and equipment over to the War Department, Navy Department, or Civil Aeronautics Authority. These three agencies were given priority to receive the camps and equipment.

57,000 Affected

The orders to go home will affect about 57,000 enrollees, in about 370 camps, it was said. Of these, about 1000 are enrolled in seven camps in the District, including one in Rock Creek Park, one at Fort Dupont Park, two in Beltsville, Md., one near Cabin John, Md., one at Fort Hunt, Va., and one at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Also coming under the liquidation are about 7000 nonenrolled personnel, including company commanders, skilled laborers and others, and 3000 administrative employes. Of the latter, it was estimated that about 55 are in the Washington headquarters of the CCC, and about 600 work on CCC affairs in the War, Agriculture and Interior Departments and the Veterans' Administration.

Includes Indian Units

Included in the enrolees the spokesman said, are about 13,000 veterans of the first war, 14,000 Negroes, 6500 Indians on Indian reservations and 3500 in the Territories. Of the veterans some 4000 are expected to be worked into jobs in Veterans' Administration activities, under an agreement worked out two weeks ago.

The spokesman said that McEntee would want it known that eliminating the CCC was no reflection on the enrollees and that the director felt they had done "a splendid job."

One Shell Requires 140 Gals. of Alcohol

New York, June (INS).—Every time the Navy fires a 16-inch gun, 140 gallons of ethyl alcohol are required. That is the quantity needed to make the necessary amount of smokeless gunpowder for one of the shells, according to Dr. A. J. Liebmann, director of the Schenley Research Institute, which controls the quality of large quantities of alcohol being manufactured for munitions.

Dutch Housewives Told To Use Chalk for Sugar

London, June (INS).—The German occupation authorities in the Netherlands have advised housewives to use powdered chalk instead of sugar, which has become virtually unobtainable. They claimed that chalk neutralizes the acidity of vegetables, (like rhubarb), just as well as sugar does. A little sugar may be added for sweetening purposes.

Subcommittee Hearings Set On 2 D. C. Bills

Two committees of the House are scheduled to study District legislation at 10 a. m. today when the blackout bill and a measure giving the Public Buildings Administration authority over parts of the Capitol grounds for dormitory sites come up for consideration.

Considerable opposition to the blackout bill, which would give the Commissioners power of requisition private property for defense purposes, is expected to develop from citizens at one of the hearings, before a House District Subcommittee.

Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, is chairman and those scheduled to testify include Harry Wender, executive vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech; Col. Earl S. Patterson of the War Department; Col. Lemuel Bolles, District director of Civilian defense, and Hugh H. Obear, chairman of the District Bar Association Blackout Committee.

The second hearing is scheduled before the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee. The bill before it would transfer to the PBA for the duration jurisdiction over the Capitol grounds park areas adjoining Union Station Plaza.

Still a third District hearing is scheduled tomorrow morning before a three-man Senate Judiciary Subcommittee, headed by Senator McCarran, on the eight nominees for judgeships of the new merged Municipal Court.

Florida Plans Rubber Farms In Everglades

Belle Glade, Fla.—Independent growers, representing more than 100,000 acres of rich black Everglades farm land in the heart of Florida's sugar bowl, are ready to grow the ingredients for synthetic rubber.

A program—which contemplates the planting of 100,000 acres of sugar cane, sweet potatoes and peanuts from which materials for lastic can be produced—already has been approved by a farmers' committee headed by Mrs. Ruth S. Wedgeworth, one of the biggest independent farmer packers in the Lake Okeechobee district.

The plan, first advanced by Clarence R. Bitting, president of the United States Sugar Corp., is that independent growers and the sugar company cooperate in supplying approximately 10 per cent of the Nation's rubber needs.

A petition asking the expediting of priorities needed for production has been sent to Washington with endorsements of both the growers and the sugar firm.

Half the acreage will be operated by the farmers and half by a subsidiary of the sugar corporation, under terms of the proposal. The sugar company has announced that it will lease land for processing plants at $11 and operate them at cost, without profit, for the war period.

Private Debt Moratorium Studied as One Plan to Alleviate Tax Burden

By Irving Perlmeter
Associated Press Staff Writer

A nw fiscal year began last night with a war budget so huge that the Treasury raised the possibility that citizens may have to be given a moratorium on their private debts so that they will be able to pay commensurate taxes.

The budget for the new year calls for the spending of 67 billion dollars for direct war activities, about six billion more for other Governmental programs, and four billion dollars for financing Governmental corporations primarily engaged in supplementing the war effort.

Against this proposed outlay of approximately 77 billion dollars, tax receipts from existing statutes would provide only about 17 billion dollars. A new tax bill now pending in the House Ways and Means Committee is designed to raise about six million dollars a year.

Randolph E. Paul, tax advisor of the Treasury, made public a memorandum to Congress in which he said that the problem of drastic tax increases upon persons who spend a large part of their income to pay debts, particularaly to buy homes, "could be dealt with from a wider point of view by some sort of more or less general moratorium on debt payments, at least for home owners."

Paul explained that this was not a recommendation, and he wrote the memorandum merely in response to Congressional requests for suggestions on possible means of granting relief to persons with heavy private debts. Among other suggestions from Paul were special income tax credits for war bond purchases or debt payments, a system of postponing for four years part of the income tax of persons who use a large percentage of their income for debt payments or saving, and a special "spending tax" which would be an extra income tax based on the percentage of income a person spends.

The size of the budget for the new fiscal year overshadowed the fact that the old year set new records for expenditures, revenues, deficit and debt.

Exact figures will not be available until later in the wek, but the Treasury revealed that from July 1, 1941, through June 27, 1942, it spent $31,941,675,387 for all governmental purposes, including $25,586,462,338 for direct war activities. Taxes and other revenues in the same period totaled $12,696,936,089, leaving a deficit of $19,244,739,298.

The deficit was made up through the sale of about si billion dollars of war bonds and about 14 billion dollars of regular Treasury securities, all adding to the public debt. On June 27, the Treasury owed, both for itself and governmental corporations, a record total of $76,586,076,103. By this time next year, the Treasury expects to owe about $125,000,000,000, which is the current statutory debt limit.

Paul's memorandum said that "many individuals are finding it difficult, if not impossible, to continue amortizing the mortgages on their homes, or to maintain premium payments on life insurance and endowment contracts, or perhaps even payments on installment purchases of automobiles, refrigerators, etc.

"One of the reasons for this difficulty is the increasing rates of income tax . . .

"The hardships resulting from the imposition of heavy income taxes on persons with commitments to repay debts present a difficult problem. The solutions which readily come to mind are open to serious objections. However, the importance of the problem is such that even an inadequate and defective treatment may be better than none."

Grazing Land To Be Reseeded

Salt Lake City (AP).—The U. S. Grazing Service plans to reseed a million acres of Western range land this year.

But Kentucky blue grass or creeping bent won't be sown by the agency—it will mostly plant the sort of stuff folks usually pull up as weeds. Included will be wild plants such as Indian rice grass, filaree and four-wing salt brush, plus some commercial seed such as sweet clover and crested wheat grass.

The grazing folk plan to use power machinery wherever possible. Where it isn't possible because of rough terrain, one method calls for sowing broadcast by a man on horseback riding ahead of a flock of sheep. The sheep tramp the seeds into the soil as they graze.

Rommel's Army Now Within 80 Miles of Alexandria

already were 200 miles inside Egypt—far beyond the deepst previous penetration by the Italians at the start of the first desert campaign in 1940.

The milling masses of tanks, men and artillery ranged over hundreds of square miles of hard, brown desert sand during the day and fought on tonight under the refreshing cool of a desert moon.

The paramount object of both the British and Germans was to destroy the opposing army.

Earlier in the bitter combat today, the Allied army had thrown back the advancing Germans from Fuka, a coastal point on the rim of the desert 45 miles southeast of Matruh. But the wily Axis commander, Marshal Erwin Rommel, struck again with two German and one Italian armored divisions. Apparently the British dropped back before the superior forces in good order.

(Axis communiques claimed Rommel's advance forces had reached and passed Fuka, but did not claim its capture.)

The battle groups of Auchinleck were in the fore of this supreme defense of the Alexandria naval base, the Nile Delta and Suez.

They are small, swift units of infantry, supported by antitank guns and quick to use the bayonet. Since Saturday they have been taking on the Axis tanks, destroying a number of them, and—at night—rushing the crews caught outside their tanks and wiping them out with cold steel and hand grenades.

In the forward areas the United States Army Air Forces, also reinforced, were in heavy bombing action with the R. A. F. For the last two nights these strengthened squadrons have fired Axis trucks, armored vehicles and grounded aircraft just west of Matruh and have flown on to dump explosives on the ruined harbor of Tobruk, hitting at least one 5000-ton enemy supply vessel directly amidships.

This continued Allied command of the air and the valient Allied fight on the desert floor brought from an American military observer, just back from the front, this statement:

"While the situation cannot be classed as good after such reverses as have been suffered in the desert, it certainly is not hopeless and it looks better now than a few days ago.

R. A. F. Has Air Control

"The R. A. F. has kept control of the air and this has had a tremendous effect on the morale of the troops. In the latest phases of the withdrawal, they fell back to new positions assigned to them in the greatest order, taking almost everything with them and leaving nothing to fall into the hands of the enemy.

"They are keen for new battle."

Disabled Allied tanks, it was disclosed, were being repaired rapidly behind the main theater of battle; mechanics were working day and night to get hundreds of these, only slightly damaged, back into the fight.

Auchinleck, it could be revealed today, has been in command of the British Eight Army since June 25. At that time the general officer commanding in the Middle East saw fit to personally supersede Lieut. Gen. Neil M. Ritchie as the commander in the field.

Ritchie had been commander of the Eighth Army since last December 11.

Five solid attacks by Rommel's Twenty-first Panzer Division, the firstin the Fuka sector, were flung back by New Zealanders as they went into action Saturday.

Germans Beaten Back

The German command first threw two infantry attacks against the New Zealanders' strong positions on the coastal escarpment, then followed up with two tank charges.

But the defenders beat all these attacks, capturing German prisoners who said the German casualties were heavy.

As the battle went on, the New Zealanders were surrounded by German forces. Supported by British North Country troops and a few tanks, they beat off violent attacks from every side and then forced a gap through the invading force, using bayonets, tommy guns, grenades, antitank guns and mortars.

With the Axis air force still moving up, Alexandria was under air attack last night for the second time in 24 hours.

Twelve persons were killed and 14 wounded.

One raider which ventured into the Nile Delta was shot into the sea by a British night fighter.

Enemy planes known to have been destroyed in the desert during June now total more than 90, more than a third of them dive bombers. The area where the battle now is raging is dotted with desert airfields which the British have had to abandon, but there has been no letup in the Allied air activiy as a result.

lowered and other men reached a liferaft. After the ship sank, the submarine surfaced and the commander asked routine questions about the ship's cargo and destination.

The lifeboat, which took on all the survivors, sailed into a Caribbean port the following day.

Canadian Ship Sunk

Late in the day it was announced that a small Canadian merchant ship had been torpedoed in the Caribbean area and that survivors had landed at an East Coast port.

The Canadian merchant vessel sank so rapidly after two torpedo hits that only six men survived out of a crew of 30, the Navy said.

The six, who had been thrown into the water by the blast, climbed aboard a raft which had broken loose and were sighted the next day by a United States Navy patrol vessel.

The attack occurred "late in May," Navy spokesmen said.

said the points of the Japanese pincers still were some 50 miles apart.

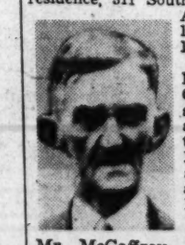
Japs Claim Some Gains

(The Japanese asserted they had opened new drives from east and west to close the gap in the 450-mile railway and indicated the two columns were only about 30 miles apart. The eastbound column, they said, had driven some 20 miles from Kweiki, last week's battleground, to Iyang.)

The Chinese communique told of a continuation of a bloody, complicated battle which has raged for two weeks on the foothills of the Taihang Mountains along the Shansi-Honan border, some 600 miles northwest of the Kiangsi battle zone. A Chinese spokesman admitted this conflict was "very complicated," but the general purpose of the Japanese appeared to be to clear away strong Chinese concentrations in this area which might interfere with any large scale operations westward against Chungking.

W. McCaffrey Dies; Retired Councilman

William J. McCaffrey, 64, former member of the Alexandria City Council, died early yesterday at his residence, 311 South Royal Street, Alexandria, following a prolonged illness.



A native of Salem, N. J., McCaffrey had resided in Alexandria for more than 40 years. He was retired about 12 years ago from the old Mount Vernon-Washington Railroad line, having served previously as a foreman for the Fruit Growers Express Co. at Alexandria.

He was elected to the City Council from the First Ward in 1919 and served two terms, completing his service in 1923.

Mr. McCaffrey is survived by his wife, Mrs. S. Madeline McCaffrey; one son, Thomas C. McCaffrey; six daughters, the Misses Julia Ann, Mary Jean and Alice Theresa and Mrs. Madeline Edwards, Mrs. Isabel Martin and Mrs. Catherine McKinney, all of Alexandria; three brothers, Thomas, of Salem, N. J.; James of Audubon, N. Y.; and Maurice of Lyanoch, Pa., and two sisters, the Misses Alice and Isabel McCaffrey of Alexandria.

Funeral services, for which final arrangements had not been completed last night, will be held Friday morning at St. Mary's Catholic Church.

Sevastopol Beats Off New Attacks

Germans."

The communique said 150 tanks were destroyed in addition to 200 previously reported knocked out in the first two days of the Kursk battle.

Referring to the bitter fighting around besieged Sevastopol, where the Germans have thrown a quarter of a million men into the furious assault, the high command said tersely:

"On the Sevastopol sector, our troops beat off attacks by big enemy forces."

This indicated the Russian lines were holding firm after the withdrawals mentioned in the previous day's communique.

The Kursk offensive thundered into full fury Sunday in what looked like the prelude to Hitler's long overdue general asault and the Russians said the Nazis registered some initial penetrations with infantry troops.

Caught in Red Pockets

But before supporting tanks could be brought up, Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's men swarmed in behind the Nazis, who perished in these tight pockets by the hundreds. With the enemy thus weakened, the Russians said their forces were able to smash subsequent attacks on their positions.

At Sevastopol the situation was clearly one of the utmost gravity for the Soviet garrison, as the unequal struggle raged through its twenty-sixth day, apparently to an imminent decision.

Dispatches from the Crimean battlefield said the Germans had inched forward slowly during th day with their more important gains in the northeastern fortifications of the once great but now ruined naval base.

"No matter what the outcome of the unequal struggle for the ruins of the city," commented the army newspaper Red Star, "this is a victory for Soviet arms.

"History will always remember the duel of one lone garrison with 15 German divisions."

Before the latest Nazi advances at Sevastopol the Russians had rallied to blast the Nazis from some positions and reported killing 400 Germans overnight.

To this was added 3000 of the enemy slain around Kursk and 300 on the relatively quiet Kalinin front northwest of Moscow. These figures were in addition to the 2000 killed in one Kursk sector, reported early today.

(Germany's high command said the inner defenses of Sevastopol were pierced "in the face of stubborn enemy resistance" and Nazi military experts said the fall of the Crimean base "will probably now be a matter of only a short time." An attack by 18 Soviet ships across the narrow Gerch Straits was declared thwarted.)

While the high command listed 75 tanks, along with 108 trucks, 26 planes and 3000 Germans destroyed around Kursk, front dispatches of Red Star put enemy tank losses at 200.

Many of the infiltrating machines, which attacked in waves of 50 and 75 with overhead support, were destroyed at close range by hand grenades and flaming gasoline bombs.

Nazis Disregard Losses

Red Star said the Germans disregarded losses, however, and hurled several hundred reserve tanks at the Russian positions. Soviet troops, lying in ambush trenches, prevented any large German mass from exploiting the breaks, wiping out the ground forces by the hundreds with deadly, close-range fire.

The Germans were reported to have used Hungarian mercenaries, but after a few costly assaults the Hungarians fell back to their original positions.

Heavy but indecisive fighting continued on the Kharkov-Kupyansk sector.

Nazi Flier Describes Escape

By Paul M. Chandler
Associated Press Staff Writer

Detroit, June 30.—Smug and smiling in the blue uniform of a Nazi air oberlieutenant, 22-year-old Hans Peter Krug blandly told in Federal Court today of how he outwitted police officers of Canada and the United States for almost two weeks in making his way from an Ontario prison camp to Detroit, Chicago, New York and San Antonio.

The Government's first witness in the treason trial of Max Stephan, Detroit restaurant-keeper, the young pilot balked only at divulging details of his flight which he described as "military secrets." He insisted Stephan helped him as a "personal favor" and not with treasonable intent to aid an enemy nation.

Halts Questioning

At length he brought the questioning to a halt, saying:

"The defenders of Max Stephan stated that I stayed to testify against Stephan. If that is so, I will be relieved of further questioning—I do not want to testify against Stephan."

Government attorneys said they had completed his examination, and he was permitted to leave the stand at this point.

Earlier the young Nazi had related his experiences with Stephan in Detroit—of trips to bars and restaurants and gifts of money from the restaurant owner, a naturalized citizen who was a sergeant in the German army during World War I. The hot courtroom was packed with spectators and in the hallway stood 200 more.

Krug grinned broadly when he testified, "Yes, FBI agents arrested me in San Antonio—unfortunately."

He gave two reasons for his flight from a Bowmanville, Ontario, prison camp on April 16.

"First, I wanted to return to Germany and to my duty," he said. "Second, I wanted to report to German government officials the conditions I found in Canadian camps—of the murder of a comrade flier of mine."

District Attorney J. C. Lehr said there was "absolutely no substantiation" of the young Nazi's story of the shooting of a fellow prisoner, whom he designated only as "Oberlieutenant Miller."

In Washington, the International Red Cross, whose representatives inspect war prison camps for reports to the nations whose nationals are held there, said that if the charges were true such reports undoubtedly would have been made public previously. It was pointed out, however, that prisoners attempting to escape have been shot and killed in various countries.

Before growing hesitant to talk near the end of today's court session, Krug told from the witness stand of making his way to Toronto after escaping from the Bowmanville camp, and of traveling by train to Windsor, Ontario, by means of a ticket procured for him by a priest.

Questioned about a rowboat which FBI agents said he stole in Windsor to row across the Detroit river to the United States, Krug said he didn't steal the boat, simply "took it."

Leaving Detroit on April 19 after Stephan had purchased his bus ticket to Chicago, the Nazi flier said, he went to Columbus, Ohio, and on to New York.

Unable to get aboard ship there to return to Germany, he told of heading for Mexico, passing through Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Pa., Cincinnati, Louisville, Paducah, Ky., Memphis and Dallas en route to San Antonio.

Krug ended his direct examination by identifying several articles taken from him when he was arrested. They included a .32 caliber pistol, ammunition, two atlases, three photographs of himself and a bit of chewed up paper. Asked what had been on the paper, he declared:

"That I will not tell you."

Later, on cross-examination, Defense Counsel Verne C. Amberson asked the flier if it were true that Stephan had advised him to return to the prison camp, telling him that escape to Germany through South America was impossible.

"Yes," Krug replied, "he told me that."

THE LAMB: I must apologize for just walking in like this. But I am here to remind you of a gentler way of dealing with that little trouble of yours.

JACK: Hmmm! I guess he must mean my constipation, Jill.

THE LAMB: You are quite correct. If you are one of those people with normal intestines who are troubled with constipation due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN will not only correct the cause of the trouble, but will do it in a way that's surprisingly pleasant and gentle, too.

JILL: Let him go on, Jack. I want to hear more about this "gentle" idea.

THE LAMB: It's really very simple. Many medicinal laxatives work by prodding the intestines into action, or by drawing moisture into them from other parts of the body. But ALL-BRAN is quite different. It acts principally on the contents of the colon, helping you to have easy and normal elimination.

JACK: Say, you've got something there! But tell me, how does it taste?

THE LAMB: Oh! that's the best part. ALL-BRAN'S now improved—golden-soft, doubly delicious. Try it—you'll love it. Eat it often and drink plenty of water.

Rep. Woodrum Learns to Fly In Four Weeks

By the Associated Press

Climaxing a four-week training course he took unknown to even his closest associates, Representative Woodrum (Democrat) of Virginia, yesterday made his first solo airplane flight at Congressional Airport here.

Later he sported gold "wings" in his lapel testifying to his rating as a student pilot. He hopes to continue his training until he wins his private license.

A Secret to His Office

Woodrum, 35, attended his classes at 6:30 a. m., in time to arrive at his office at his regular hour so that not even his office force knew what he was doing.

"It demonstrates to me," he said, "what the poet said: 'You have to get older but you don't have to get old.'"

Yesterday morning he paid back his daughter, Martha Ann, for the surprise she paid him over a year ago when she informed him she had soloed. He recalled he had told her to "stay away from those things." She didn't, however, and won her private license. Her father was her first passenger.

"With a daughter putting pressure on me like that," he asked, "what else could I do?"

Trained With Patterson

Woodrum and Assistant Secretary of War Robert Patterson were fellow students, the Virginian said. Patterson began his course a few weeks before Woodrum, and soloed several days ago.

Woodrum has long been an aviation enthusiast, having handled the first congressional appropriation for the Civil Aeronautics Administration's civilian pilot training program.

After studying civil aviation from the House Appropriations Committee viewpoint, he said, he decided to study it from the inside.

Tests His Theories

Another purpose he had in mind, he said, was to test his own theories of the problem of finding "a place for men beyond 45 in industry."

"I am tired of hearing about the inability of men beyond 45 to get employment because they can't stand the work or can't learn," he said. "I was given the most rigid physical examination before I was ever allowed to get into a plane, and my student instruction was most intense."

Army Signal Corps To Start Va. School

Richmond, Va., June 30 (AP).—Instruction in Army Signal Corps work is planned for 360 Virginians at a school to be conducted by the U. S. Army Signal Corps in Danville beginning August 1.

Candidates for the new school are being recruited by the U. S. Civil Service Commission, which has called for applications to be filed until July 11. Half of the 360 men are desired for training as junior repairmen, trainee (radio) and the other half as mechanic learner, Signal Corps equipment. Applicants will be given a written aptitude test.

Axis Spies Make Battlefield of Our Homes, Welles Tells Inter-American Conference

By H. K. Reynolds

International News Service Staff Writer

The United States yesterday urged prompt and vigorous action by all the nations of the Western Hemisphere to smash enemy agents who are waging a dangerous offensive against the inter-American economic system.

Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles, addressing the opening session here of the Inter-American Conference on Systems of Economic and financial control, declared that subversive activities of the Axis have made this continent one of the great battlefields of the war.

The conference is carrying forward the work of last January's Rio De Janeiro meeting of the foreign ministers of the American Republics.

Total Assault

Emphasizing the present war is not being fought on the military front alone, Welles said:

"We, the free Nations of America, are today faced with the supreme and historic mission of repelling a total assault on our freedom and our integrity, an assault that is being carried on, not only by pirate submarines and military arms, but also by the colonies of subversive agents on the sovereign soil of each one of our countries.

"These human termites, carrying out the will of their Axis masters, have been gnawing for a long time, not only at the foundations of our inter-American system, but also at the foundations of the economic structure that maintains us whole."

The conference, attended by 50 delegates representing the 21 American republics, is expected during the next ten days to adopt further restrictive measures to assure proper handling of international transactions and control of domestic operations of Axis nationals, or by persons whose actions might be of benefit to the Axis.

Rowe Offers Greetings

After the conference was opened by Secretary Welles, Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, welcomed the delegates, and Dr. Manuel Gallagher, financier and delegate of Peru, responded on behalf of his Latin American colleagues.

The United States delegate, Edward H. Foley, general counsel of the Treasury Department, was elected permanent chairman, and Dr. Francisco Alves de Santos of Brazil was chosen as vice chairman.

Welles referred to the decision of the Rio de Janeiro conference to establish commercial and financial controls to block eorts of enemy fifth columns to encroach upon this hemisphere. He declared that in addition it would be necessary to work out details of joint procedures to "altogether eliminate the financial and commercial maneuvers by which the tools of the German, Italian and Japanese war lords, operating in this hemisphere, seek to reduce our defenses and endeavor to prepare the way for our subjugation."

Active on Every Front

"We are confronting an attack upon the New World which is being waged by the Axis powers on every front upon which they can muster their forces of treachery and o fdeceit," Welles continued.

In his opening addres as chairman of the conference, Foley said that the strength of the American republics lies in their singlenes sof purpose and unity of action, and he asserted that no country could any longer have confidence in the security of a policy of strict neutrality during the present war.

"We canot hope for full success," he said, "if such Axis transactions are controlled by one American republic, but not controlled by another; if fugitive funds can pour from one American republic to another where the Axis taint can be cloaked and the funds used for financial and commercial transactions inimical to the interests of al lthe American republics."

Plenty of Ships for Present, Harriman Says

By the Associated Press

London, June 30.—W. Averell Harriman, United States lend-lease administrator, declared today "there is no lack of ships presently to supply our needs on all allied fighting fronts."

Speaking at a press conference following his return from the United States with Prime Minister Churchill, Harriman said he was "not worried about American production any more, either in quality or quantity."

Harriman said production was over the hump and that conferences between Donald Nelson, chief of the War Production Board, and Oliver Lyttleton, British minister in charge of production, would result in far-reaching improvements in the allied position.

Record for Shipbuilding

San Pedro, Calif., June 30 (AP).—The cargo ship Joseph McKenna was delivered to the Maritime Commission today—but there's a lot more to that announcement than meets the eye.

Behind it is a story of records being broken almost as rapidly as they are set.

The McKenna was outfitted 18 days after its launching. It was launched 57 days after its keel was laid. That's a total of 75 days from bottom to top.

But its original delivery date was October 23. Thus it was ready to sail 115 days ahead of schedule.

The McKenna holds the current record at the amazing California Shipbuilding Corp. yards, but it probably won't last long. Almost every new ship has been trimming the time mark of its predecessor. Today the Unipero Serra went down the ways 41 days after her keel was laid.

The credit goes to approximately 40,000 employes at a yard which a little more than a year ago was swampland on Los Angeles Harbor's terminal island. Only slightly more than 1 per cent of the 40,000 had any expesience in shipbuilding or allied inrustries prior to their present jobs.

Hard Fight Ahead

Japs Use Women Pilots General Says

By Walter Clausen

Associated Press Staff Writer

Headquartres Hawaiian Air Force, T. H., June 30.—A new chapter in aerial warfare has been opened by the conbict in the Pacific and the showdom is yet to come in what "looks like a long hard job" against an enemy that is "not a pushover," said Maj. Gen. Willis H. Hale, commanding the United States Army Air Forces in the Mid-Pacific, tonight.

He declared that the Japs have used women pilots in warplanes.

"Our real punches will tell their own story as our Army-Navy team delivers them," said General Hale in his first interview since appointed to his new command. "The Japs at least must be trying to figure what is coming next."

Hale, 49 years old, is one of the youngest flying generals. He is a resident of Colorado Springs but his wife and two daughters are living in Washington while he is in a combat zone.

Alert and affable, General Hale remarked that when he went to Kansas State College, Manhattan, Kans., he didn't know whether he wanted to be a delicatessen shopkeeper or a banker. A picture of native troops hanging on a wall in the New York Military Academy at Cornwall, N. Y., however, started him toward Manila in 1913 to join the Philippine Constabulary. He served with that force for four years.

Infantryman in Last War

In the World War he served with the Infantry but transferred thereafter to aviation, and for 20 years his chief interest has been bombardment aircraft.

"The Pacific War has opened a new chapter in modern air warfare, a chapter dealing with long-distance operations," General Hale said in discussing recent events in this area. "Vast distances present a challenge greater than in any other theater of war, and our navigators and pilots are meeting this challenge.

"The operations at Midway are an excellent example of the complete coordination between all the forces in the Pacific. Mutual effort is necessary and we are fighting as one team—Army, Navy and Marines.

"Air forces will be the controlling factor in the Pacific. We are strong, but so is the enemy. It is no push-over. It looks like a long, hard job.

"Our sky fighters are rendering good account of themselves but the home folks must realize that it is a fatal military blunder to underestimate an enemy.

"The Japanese have real planes, manned by real fighters who are highly skilled and well trained. They have shown that they have very effective plans and tactics prepared for years and carried out with precision. They have introduced new weapons in the war in the Pacific, for example grenades from planes. They have used women pilots in warplanes. They have improved their zeros (navy planes), sacrificing protection for speed and maneuverability.

Showdown Yet to Come

"They know how to use their weapons. It's going to take the best we have and plenty of it to carry on to victory.

"The showdown is yet to come."

Asked how he happened to switch from the infantry to the air corps, the general replied with a smile:

"Well, in France I used to find at dances that we were pushed aside for lads who wore halfwings or wings, so I decided I had better get myself some wings."

Taking up aviation's role in naval warfare, the general continued:

"We know airplanes can sink battleships and their only protection is other airplanes. No one will risk his carrier in the range of land-based aviation. The Japs did it at Midway but didn't know they were doing it. I think they didn't have the slightest knowledge of what they would run into. Any Navy is going to be on the defense if within range of land-based aircraft."

Lightning Man Is a Composer

Pittsburgh (U.P.).—The man who composed the new war tune, "I'm a member of the OCD," makes his living at the particularly unmusical business of taming lightning.

When he isn't composing some new ditty, J. A. Clivlett, a sales engineer for Westinghouse, specializes in lightning protective devices and surge generators. He is the inventor of a device that computes the amount of lightning protection needed for electric motors and generators.

Clivlett received his inspiratoin for "Im a member of the OCD" while driving to a meeting of the Song Writers Guild here. He went to work as soon as he arrived at the meeting room and completed the words in 25 minutes. He wrote the score of the spirited marching tune when he arrived home.

Seek OCD Recognition

The tune has been broadcast by a Pittsburgh radio station and has been sent to James M. Landis, national director of the Office of Civilian Defense for his consideration as the official tune of the OCD.

Here are the words:

I'm a member of the OCD, glad to serve in that capacity,
While our boys fight over there,
I'll stay home and do my share;
We will fight to keep our country
free—every loyal son,
March on to victory.

I'm a member of the OCD;
When the enemy bombs homes and children
I'll be there to rescue, men and women—
Cries of babies—timid ladies—I'll do the best I can.

Civilett has composed some 50 songs, including "Back Again."

Waller Must Die For Killing Farmer

County jury on September 27, 1940.

Waller is sentenced to die in the electric chair Thursday morning.

Counsel for the condemned man contended that an error of his trial attorneys was responsible and argued that Waller, if left to die, would die by reason of a technicality.

This contention was based on the failure of the defense to offer evidence at the trail to prove that nonpayers of the State poll tax were systematically excluded from the jury lists. In the repeated appeals to the courts, one of the major contentions has been that Waller was denied equal protection of the laws in that he, a non-payer of poll taxes, was tried by a poll tax paying jury.

Another point stressed by the defense has been divergence of testimony at the trial. John F. Finerty of New York, a representative of the Workers' Defense League, told the Governor that the record of the trial was "a composite mass of gossip" that left ground for reasonable doubt that Waller was guilty of a premediated crime.

While the State proved to the satisfaction of the jury that Waller shot and killed Davis without justification, the defense brought Waller's foster mother, Annie Waller, before the Governor to testify that the shooting occurred only after Davis had denied Waller his share of a jointly tended wheat crop and had reached toward his hip as if for a gun. Davis was not armed when Waller went to his home before breakfast on the morning of the slaying, armed with a pistol and with a shotgun in the truck in which he arrived.

State witnesses, including a 20-year-old Negro, Henry Davis, testified there was no argument prior to the shooting and that Davis promised to send Waller his wheat after finishing threshing in the community. As the farmer turned to go to breakfast, Henry testified, Waller started shooting.

Youth, 14, Has Many Talents

Binghamton, N. Y. (U.P.).—At the age of 10, Vernon Christman was writing plays and poetry in the meter and mood of Shakespeare.

Today, at 14, Vernon shows unusual ability in musical composition, piano playing, writing, mural designing, acting and in school studies.

As a student at Port Dickinson Union School, from which he graduated this month at the head of his class, young Christman made these contributions to the graduation exercises:

He designed and helped to execute the mural of Port Dickinson in the school auditorium.

He composed and arranged a piece "Sonatina for five strings and a piano.

With Mary Hurrle

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH is only two days away. You'll be able to make a bonanza holiday of it even if the gas tank is anaemic and the tires weakly. Every nitery in town is mapping plans so that the whole town can "go to town" in a big way on Saturday. Crossroads is only a quart of gas away from downtown. And if you've been saving gas by riding streetcars there should be an extra gallon of gas to carry your party to such roaring Fourth of July parties as they'll celebrate at River Bend and the Log Tavern . . . If you cleverly decide to holiday at Glen Echo you won't have a care in the world beyond getting on the right streetcars. The Fourth at Echo should include dunking yourself in the Crystal Pool for several hours, dinner or supper at the Roof Garden Cafe which overlooks the park's entire "40 acres of fun," dancing to Paul Kain's jitterish rhythms in the Spanish Ballroom.

MARLENE DIETRICH RELAXED AT LA SALLE DU BOIS SATURDAY NIGHT WITH A PARTY THAT INCLUDED MAJ. ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT. THE REST OF THE PARTY ATE A BIG DINNER BUT MARLENE HAD NOTHING BUT A TALL DRINK OR TWO. SO THAT'S HOW SHE KEEPS THOSE PRICELESS STEMS.

BALALAIKA'S PLAYERS HELP RUSSIA. The Balalaika's balalaika orchestra recently played at the Russian Art Exhibit in the Chamber of Commerce Building . . . And the party of 50 you may have seen dining in Restaurant "400" yesterday afternoon was the Philadelphia Balalaika Symphony here for the Russian War Relief Show. Mrs. J. Borden Harriman and the other sponsors of the show held a party at "400" later in the evening.

MUSICAL EXCITEMENTS. "I Want to Dance With a Dolly With a Hole in Her Stocking" is the newest song of Eve Knight of the King Cole Room . . . Another pert one is "Bambetera," composed by Maestro Johnny Velasquez of Copocabana. The title in English would be "Chatterbox" . . . You'll like the way Merry-Land's Cliff Jones adds amorous accordion trills to his version of "Moonlight Cocktails" . . . Little Jack Little's Four, now at El Patio, is one of the week's prime musical excitements, but, of course. The old massa's magic piano touch seems to get finer with the years . . . The melody heart throb at Lounge Riviera is Mary La Marr's warbling of "Be Careful, It's My Heart," from Irving Berlin's "Holiday Inn" . . . The big moment at Casino Royal comes every night when "Jivin' Jack" Schaeffer shuffles out like a turkey gobbler about to have a nervous breakdown and blasts all hearers with his combo of trumpeting and offside sagas.

SAVINA, piquant singer with Georgia Auld's Band in the Victory Room

LIEUT. MEL WETTERGREEN, whose song, "I've Got a Right to Love," took top honors in the Neptune Room's "Tin Pan Alley Nights" and will soon be the theme of a Capitol Theater overture

Lucille Lincoln, handwriting expert of the Starlight Roof, recently gave a reading to Alfred G. Vanderbilt, not knowing him from Adam. She informed him that he was quiet, reserved, essentially a scientist.

LA TERPSICHOREANS. Cordoba, now dancing on the Shoreham Terrace, looks like a vision of Pierrette. All her gowns are in bouffant ballet length and she wears classic sandals tied around her ankles with ribbons. . . . Handsomest dancing couple seen in town this year are Le Brun and Campbell, now at the Lotus. He's very tall and Esquirish with a little moustache, while she's a sun-tanned platinum blonde.

STRANGE BUT TRUE. Leonard Friendly, organist of the Plymouth, is married to Dr. Camilla Anderson, psychoanalyst and author of "Emotional Hygiene." It's a caution the way these musicians seem to marry all the brilliant women and motion picture stars. . . . The blue agate ring worm by Maestro Del Casino, now at Del Rio, once belonged to Rudolph Valentino. . . . Violinist Durward Bowersox of Burt's Trans-Lux started his career as a "child prodigy." . . . Maestro Bert Bernath of the Pall Mall Room is also a member of the bar.

Representatives Emmet O'Neal and Brent Spence say they've been greeted by their colleagues as "Congressman Boogie-Woogie" and "Mr. Jive" since they testified for the Victory Room in that little legal ruckus it had with a nearby apartment house.

HOW THEY PLEASE THE CUSTOMERS. Whenever the Rainbow Room's Milton Davis spots Labor Conciliator Jim Dewey, he plays "East Side, West Side." For Coal Man Fred Hessick it has to be "One Dozen Roses." . . . Hi Hat's Jack Neal makes a proud mother chortle with glee by launching into her son's fraternity song every time she enters. . . . Mayfair's Dick Abbott earned the undying gratitude of a customer lately by resurrecting "O! Man Mose," the biggest hit of the year a couple of seasons ago, but now almost impossible to get on a request to the average orchestra leader.

DINING TIPS. The Burlington's cool green coffee shop gives a charming, summery setting to small dinner parites. . . . Pleasant surprises are waiting for you daily on the menu at Olmsted's. Their chef deserves a medal. . . . The steps at Restaurant "823" look like a mezzanine every afternoon. They're always crowded with wistful customers waiting for tables.

War Workers Guaranteed Gas

Special Stations Near Isolated Plants To Assure Ample Fuel for Employes

Workers in Eastern war factories will have special gasoline filling stations near isolated plants, the War Department announced last night.

Alarmed by the conditions over last weekend which kept many workers at home for want of gas to drive to work, the Army Eastern Procurement Division worked out with Secretary Ickes' office a plan to designate strategic stations which would be guaranteed constant supplies of gasoline. This fuel will be sold only to persons showing the factory identification badge as well as their ration cards. In return, the workers are expected to form themselves 100 per cent into Share Your Car Clubs.

District motorists may expect relief from the severe gas drought that has prevailed for the last few days. Tomorrow will bring in a new 10-day quota of gasoline to filling stations—but it's not expected to last long, and motorists are warned that the letup will be only temporary. Last weekend was only the first of what dealers predict will be a long series of equally gasless periods.

Less Gas, Higher Price

Feeling in Washington, as reported by the Gasoline Retailers Association, is generally that of the entire East, that the rationing should be spread out over the entire country.

"The public here feels that it is being shoved around a bit," said Harry Wainwright, head of the association. "The dealers feel the same way. They don't give us as much gas as the rest of the country has, and they make us pay more for it. The consumer loses, and the dealer does, too."

Wainwright pointed out that although gasoline is now selling for more than 20 cents a gallon, the dealer is still getting only 4 cents of it, and he is not selling as much.

Meanwhile, Paul M. O'Leary, OPA deputy administrator in charge of rationing, suspended gasoline deliveries to 12 filling stations in the Newark, N. J., area for alleged "illegal" gasoline sales. The suspensions are for periods of 15 and 30 days, and were based upon evidence that the stations sold gasoline without requiring ration cards.

Rationing for Boats

The OPA announced that when the permanent rationing system goes into effect July 22, small powers boats in the Eastern rationing area will receive a basic fuel ration based on their engine horsepower.

Hopes of any relief within three years for the gasoline-famished East faded last night, while the failure of the President's scrap-rubber drive made Nation-wide gas rationing appear inevitable.

The three-year minimum was set by Maj. Gen. Eugene Reybold, chief of Army Engineers, who estimated it would take at least that long to construct and enlarge pipelines and waterways from the Texas oil fields by way of Florida to the Eastern seaboard.

Testifying before the Senate Commerce Committee, Reybold said the three-year job could be accomplished only if priorities and adequate man power were made available. Any estimates that the canals could be finished in 15 months "never came from me," Reybold said.

Chairman Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, agreed with Newbold that driving for pleasure is out of the question for the duration of the war.

47 Senators Hold 'X' Ration Cards for Unlimited Gasoline Purchases in D. C.

The names of 47 Senators—33 Democrats, 13 Republicans and 1 Progressive—are on the list of District motorists who hold "X" ration cards giving them the legal right to drive into a lling station and say, "Fill 'er up."

Of the 15,565 "X" cards issued in the District last May, ration officials estimate that there are somewhere between 13,000 and 15,000 still in the files, which were made public yesterday for the first time at the Ration Administration headquarters, 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

No record was kept of the number of persons who turned in their pink unlimited cards for lesser quotas. Their "X" card applications were simply taken from the fils and destroyed.

The list of Senators does not include those who may have obtained "X" cards outside the Capital. The District files filling three drawers, each 2 feet long, were made public yesterday by Whitney Leary, director of the Office of Price Administration for the District, and the unofficial list was compiled by reporters, who were admitted after noon.

The press was asked not to publish the names of Army, Navy, Marine Corps and law enforcement officers holding unlimited ration cards.

About half of the total "X" cards issued were for vehicles used in trucking, delivery, messenger service, transportation of materials and construction equipment and similar uses, the partial survey showed. Only an approximate sixth are held under the much debated "E" classification, "official business of Federal, State, local, foreign governments or Government agencies." About an equal number seemed to go to taxi cabs.

Physicians and surgeons came in for the next largest number, according to the survey, with the remainder scattered between the other two of the seven classifications, ministers and ambulances or hearses.

The British purchasing commission was revealed to have 19 "X" cards, the Soviet purchasing commission 9. The Philippine High Commissioner, Joaquin Elizalda, also applied for unlimited supply of gasoline. Kenneth Romney, sergeant at arms of the House, was listed, but Chasley W. Jurney, sergeant at arms of the Senate, was not.

Attached to the application of Dean Acheson, Assistant Secretary of State, was a letter describing his hours of employment as "protracted, irregular and uncertain." Stating that he was "subject to performance of extra duty at any time in the national interest," the letter was signed for the Secretary of State by G. Howland Shaw, Assistant Secretary.

In contrast to such elaborate explanations of the need for unlimited gasoline, which were few, were a number of applications where not even one of the seven classifications were checked, but cards were issued anyway. These cases officials explained as probable oversights on the part of volunteer registrars in neglecting to check the classification after it was explained to them.

One woman wrote under the physicians' classifications that she did "work for the Red Cross and civilian defense." In getting unlimited gasoline for their Cadillac, one couple marked the physicians' classification and wrote in "dentist." "Physician" was again checked on an application made for a liquor company by a man who gave his addres as Grenbelt, Md.

Senators whom the unofficial survey showed applied for "X" cards are Charles O. Andrews (Democrat) of Florida, Warren R. Austin (Republican) of Vermont, Theodore G. Bilbo (Democrat) of Mississippi, Homer T. Bone (Democrat) of Washington, C. Wayland Brooks (Republican) of Illinois, Hugh A. Butler (Republican) of Nebraska, Dennis Chavez (Democrat) of New Mexico, D. Worth Clark (Democrat) of Idaho, Tom Connally (Democrat) of Texas, Peter Gerry (Democrat) of Rhodie Island, Guy M. Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa, Carter Glass (Democrat) of Virginia.

Chan Gurney (Republican) of South Dakota, Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, Carl Hayden (Democrat) of Arizona, Clyde L. Herring (Democrat) of Iowa, Lister Hill (Democrat) of Alabama, Rufus Holman (Republican) of Oregon, Hiram Johnson (Republican) of California, who signed for Minnie L. McNeal Johnson as owner of the car; James H. Hughes (Democrat) of Delaware.

Cab Chief Defies PUC Rate Order

Flat defiance of the Public Utilities Commission order to file notice by today of what rates a cab driver chooses to operate under was ordered by Edward A. Glenn, president of the cab-drivers union.

"I have told my men not to file any such notice and to go on and charge whichever rates they prefer," Glenn said. "The PUC order is an outright violation of the agreement made with the drivers last Friday before the House District Committee, nad the only thing we can do is to disregard it."

Glenn said, however, that the union has always advised the drivers that they cannot switch rates between one ride and another to chose the most profitable one for an individual fare, but must keep to the one started upon for at least a day.

"I haven't told any of them that they must stick to the old rates, either," Glenn added. "Some of the boys want to try out the new rates to see if they work, and I think those who feel that way should do it."

Hankin had no comment to make upon the flaunting of his order, except to say that in his opinion a law was made to be obeyed.

A check-up at the PUC late yesterday revealed that only six or eight notices of intent had been filed. The forms were sent out on Monday to all drivers, the PUC reported. Independent drivers were mailed individual copies, and the associations were furnished with enough blanks for all of their drivers. No fofrms were sent to the union.

Although the PUC order specified that unless a driver had filed his notice by Wednesday he would be held to the new rates, Hankin said that extenuating circumstances, such as illness or absence from town, would be taken into consideration if a driver were late in filing his notice.

Md. News Bureau Loses 4 Editors To Armed Forces

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 30.—Three editors of the Baltimore bureau of the Associated Press were granted leaves of absence this month to enter the armed forces, making a total of four going into various branches of the Service since March.

Mason C. Brunson, jr., veteran Maryland racing writer and day news editor at Baltimore, enlisted in the U. S. Marine Corps and now is in training at Parris Island, S. C.

David E. Nopper, who came to the Baltimore bureau a month ago from Annapolis where he had been AP correspondent and legislative writer since 1940, was granted leave of absence today, and will enter the Service Thursday. Nopper formerly was employed by The Washington Post and The Baltimore Sun.

On July 8, Morton Coates, night wire editor, will take a leave of absence to enter the Army.

Last March, Edward O. Ethel, State office editor of the AP in Baltimore, went into the Army. He now is in training at Camp Chaffee, Ark.

YOUR friend, the grocer, is the most important figure in the government's National Nutrition Program.

For just as the druggist serves the needs of the sick, so your grocer serves the well. On his shelves are foods that every mother must rely upon to keep her family in health—and, particularly, to build strong, sturdy children. And he has much knowledge and advice that you can use.

So, ask your grocer about the kinds of foods specifically recommended in the National Nutrition Program. Get him to help you plan your meals.

He will probably show you the official U.S. Nutritional Chart that has been released by the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services. This chart is reproduced here. The government has urged that food dealers display it, and that homemakers cut it out and pin it to their kitchen walls.

But even more, it urges that you give your family, and particularly your children, these important strength-building foods—some from every group in the chart, every day.

For these are the foods that build a strong nation. And America needs Americans strong.

Producer-Director Hears Critics Praise His Picture

Mark Sandrich Sits in at "Holiday Inn;" Rooftop Cast Is Tops in Versatility; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

MARK SANDRICH, one of Hollywood's ablest directors, and the man who whipped the Hollywood Victory Caravan show together almost over night and made it one of the greatest audience entertainments ever offered the public, was a visitor in Washington yesterday. Sandriched in, as you might say, between more pressing official duties, he managed to find time to slip into the plushy Paramount projection room in time to catch the final reels of the preview screening of "Holiday Inn," thus affording the guys and gals of the drayma desks opportunity to tell him in person what a dilly they thought it was.

BING CROSBY

In view of the fact that he was both producer and director of "Holiday Inn," these ardent encomiums seemed to fall gently and gratefully upon the sensitive Sandrich ears. And we of the inkpots weren't kidding.

In what, so far as I know, is his first adventure as a producer-director, Mr. Sandrich has gone and rung himself up a bulls-eye. With Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire costarred in a unique story, involving the comparative charms of song and dance as instruments of romance, "Holiday Inn" just naturally can't miss a practically 100 per cent favorable public reaction. Especially since Irving Berlin has contributed a score more prolific in song hits than perhaps any he has ever composed for any motion picture.

Bing sings profusely and Fred dances prodigiously to lend punch to a tale that is as novel as it is handsomely staged and cleverly hinged together by all the holiday motifs to be found on the calendar. Wait until you see it. Then you'll probably go back to see it three or four times more.

While Mr. Sandrich realizes the present importance of "escapist" entertainment, something a little more substantial than that is suggested by more than one of the enlivening sequences in his latest picture and still more important contributions to the public state of mind in time of war are churning about in the back of the Sandrich cranium. That is what brought him here—plans for an objective, dramatic treatment of topics uppermost in the mass consciousness and most vital to the successful pursuit of the war. He will be making them known in due course.

Never having heard any authentic final figures in the matter, we pressed Mark with some insistence as to just how well that Hollywood Victory Caravan fared in its 14 performances on the road that leads from one coast to the other. In round figures, the all-star revue that had its opening performance for Army-Navy relief in Loew's Capitol Theater in this city, ran up a total "take" of $730,000. That's by way of being a sizable head of "lettuce." Mark frankly declares that the show would have been far less successful than it was, had he not had Gene Ford at his elbow throughout those hectic rehearsals in the Willard and at the Capitol the afternoon and night before it opened to the Capitol's $25,000 audience. That's the way Mark is. Regular as they come—and twice as gifted.

Where Credit Is Due

Our Mr. Ernie Schier is still chortling rhapsodically over the diversity of talents disclosed by the Willard Roof cast, consideration of which was crowded out of his review of the opening performance of "East Lynne" by space priorities. "Take, for example," he has been babbling ever since, "Miss Ellen Love, who portrayed the prim and spinsterish Miss Cornelia Carlyle. In black dress, high buttoned shoes and an aging makeup, Miss Love practically overwhelmed the opening night audience by giving voice in a charming and lyrical manner to a brazen and saucy song that completely broke down the friendly prejudice the patrons had felt toward her performance. Then there was Isham Keith, who not only acted in the play, but also performed as m. c. during the community sing with a charm of manner that had all the ladies swooning at his feet. Jane Middleton and Louise Snyder displayed ingratiating voices and terpsichorean abilities, which, added to their abundant personal charms, caused the stage-door Johnnies to stampede madly toward their dressingrooms. Our own favorite was Richard Midgely, who directed the play and performed as Sir Francis Levinson, the villain of the piece, in such a delightful, tongue-in-cheek manner as to make us applaud rather than hiss his appearance. He is also a roguish vocalist. And a lusty panegyric to Bibi Osterwald, the 'darling of Washington,' who tosses a rose with such gay abandon that every male in the audience envies the lucky recipient of her casual coquetries."

So you see—even if our Mr. Schier is young and impressionable!

So when we arrived at the office yesterday, three more of those Lilliputian soldiers, in their shiny steel helmets, had taken up their post with the others around our electric light plant. Being quick to catch on—it seldom takes over a week or two—we are beginning to see dawn. One advance sentry Saturday, two reenforcements Monday, three Tuesday, making six to date in the detachment. Obviously, there will be four more added to the squad today. How do I know? I don't. But that would make 10—the culmination of a perfect "teaser" campaign for "Ten Gentlemen from West Point," opening at Loew's Palace tomorrow. Nice going, Mr. Danieloew Terrell. I used to be a press agent myself! Or am I wrong again? Could be.

RICHARD MIDGELY

under the ominous eye of the theater's ubiquitous Mr. George Spelvin, smirks an exceedingly mean leer, as Sir Francis Levison, in the Willard Roof Players' "Gay Nineties" revival of "East Lynne." This famous old tear-jerker is continuing this week and next atop the Willard in the quaint, music hall manner, with olio acts and everything!

HEDDA HOPPER

Meandering Miranda!

—Carmen Miranda's next picture, after finishing "Springtime in the Rockies," will be "Caribbean Nights." Story starts in Texas, carries her to Cuba, the Caribbean Islands, and finishes in Rio. No wonder they brought

CARMEN MIRANDA

Mainboucher out to do her clothes. Imagine getting a crack at designing for all those countries and then having a gal like Miranda wearing them.

It wouldn't surprise me if she wore an entire Caribbean Island on her head, 'cause Carmen will do anything for a laugh or sensation. It goes before the cameras in August.

With the great success of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," you'd you'd think there'd be enough credit for all. But you'd be wrong. For months Writer Robert Buckner shook his head over the story and said: "You'll never get a picture out of it."

But after the Epstein brothers and Eddie Joseph worked on it, it turned out to be as emotional a bit of screen fare as we'll see in many a long day.

Now Buckner is taking all the credit. The Epstein brothers aren't even mentioned on the screen.

The town is full of Russians, including white Rusians, who are now admitting maybe the Communists were right in the first place. It's a funny reversal of form. That is, funny—if you hadn't heard them blow off before Russia's victories.

Well, at last the two sisters, Joan and Olivia (last names Fontaine and De Havilland), are together in a little house up Carmel way. The other night, after a bit of excitement, they went bowling at Monterey and one of the attendants said to Joan, "Gee, it's no wonder your sister won the academy award. She sure is beautiful." And Joan spoke up and said, "She didn't win it—I did!"

He said, "Say, who are you trying to kid anyway? You must read the wrong papers."

If Gene Tierney, now doing "China Girl," doesn't get out of these oriental parts like "Shanghai Gesture" she's going to be stymied in the same way Myrna Loy was years ago, when she played nothing but slant-eyed slinky sirens.

Little Ann Jeffries' grandfather, aged 86, in Goldsboro, N. C., wrote to her saying he'd seen her first movie only because Ann was in it. Stayed to see it thru five times.

Letter read: "The thing was called 'I Married an Angel'—I don't know who that Nelson Eddy and Jeannette MacDonald are, but you sure are some one in this family, and you looked beautiful, child."

Before the ink had time to dry on their new radio deal an Eastern columnist announced the "split-up" of Abbott and Costello. It would be funny if the boys didn't take it so hard.

"We're not sore, Hedda," Bud told me, "we're just wondering who's behind this thing. If it's our goat they're after they've certainly got it."

Jed Harris has turned down the play Thornton Wilder wrote for Fredric March.

New York, June 30.

Thursday night a party was held at the home of Fanny Holtzman, the lawyer, in honor of King George of Greece. The arrangements for this informal party were so secret that not even Miss Holtzman's family knew who the guest of honor was to be. Louis Bromfield, Spyros Skouras, Clifton Webb, et al, wore dinner-coats, but the King arrived wearing a sack-suit. Some of the ladies curtsied, while those who didn't almost had their skirts yanked off by a matron who stood behind them, at the presentations, and who insisted that they bend the knee.

DEANNA DURBIN

Skouras greeted the King with a Greek phrase. Danny Kaye insisted that the phrase was inaccurate, and spoke the correct one. His majesty agreed that Kaye's version was true. "Where'd you learn it?" asked the Greek-born Skouras . . . "From a Greek soda jerker," Danny confessed. "In the Brownsville candy store where I used to hang out when I was a kid" . . . Kaye entertained by singing his "Tschaikowsky" number from "Lady in the Dark." During the run of the show, he completed the rapid recitation in the record time of 40 seconds. "Time it," Danny told the King. His Majesty held the stop watch. Kaye broke his record. He did it in 32 seconds.

At 3 a. m., Constance Collier introduced Peggy Wood, "who will sing 'I'll See You Again.'" Before Miss Wood could begin, the King rushed out, and went home. This was not meant as a slight to Miss Wood. It was just that one of the ladies present had shaken his royal hand and said she was going home—unaware of the protocol which prohibits any guest from leaving before the King departs. That's why he rushed out, to spare her the embarrassment and criticism which otherwise would have eventualized.

Next week the employes of Carl L. Norden, Inc., will present two bombsights to the Navy Department and one to the Army Air Corps. They made these bombsights on their own time . . . The International Students Service again will have summer sessions at the president's home in Campobello Island this summer . . . Harold Ross's remaining friends, incensed at his statements about the Bronx and Harlem, planned to hire two buses, drive up to his Connecticut home, and leave bottles and newspapers strewn over his place . . . Mrs. Maxim Litvinoff was invited to meet Jo Davidson, the solemn-faced, gray-bearded sculptor. "You know who he is, don't you?" Mrs. Litvinoff was asked . . . "Of course," she answered. "He's Karl Marx."

John Steinbeck's new book for the Air Corps, about the life of an American bomber crew, will have an Air Corps enlistment application on the back page . . . Fifty-second Street's newest laugh provoker is the 51 Club's Sid Tomack . . . Kim Wong, Anna May Wong's 18-year-old brother, will make his screen debut as a Chinese soldier—a featured role in Deanna Durbin's "Forever Yours" . . . Macy's June Jamboree at the Astor netted the U. S. O. more than $15,000 . . . Syd Livingston, the reporter who has covered police headquarters for 25 years, always carried a gun in a holster strapped to his hip. He now has been transferred to the dayside. He still wears that holster, because he's accustomed to it. But instead of a gun, he carries two pencils in it.

Arthur Hornblow, jr., the movie producer who recently was divorced by Myrna Loy, spent 90 minutes at the New York studios of Bruno of Hollywood, examining thousands of photographs, in search of some new faces to take back to Hollywood . . . The Texaco "dealer" shown repairing a child's doll, in the color ads appearing in the national magazines, is Eddie Johnson, the Chicago Tribune's cameraman—who not only took that picture, but also posed for it . . . "Carl Post," the new press agent, really is Johann Singer, the American concert pianist who played with the Paris Symphony and who gave two Town Hall recitals in 1940 . . . Hazel Scott and Teddy Wilson of Cafe Society, will be in Gregory Ratoff's "Something to Shout About."

When Michael Todd produced his first Broadway show, a flop whose title was "Call Me Ziggy," George Jean Nathan devoted less than a paragraph to the show, and the rest to a description of Todd's elegant full-dress attire on opening night. When Todd produced "Hot Mikado," Nathan devoted half his review to the show, and the other half to Todd's well-tailored dinner suit . . . Wednesday night, at $6.60 tops, Todd presented "Star & Garter." Nathan is devoting his full review to the show—for Todd was the only one in the theater wearing a brown business suit.

Wide Variety of Amusements Announced for Holiday Week

"TEN GENTLEMEN FROM WEST POINT" make their appearance on the screen of the Palace Theater to portray the early struggles which marked the establishment of our famous military college. George Montgomery, Maureen O'Hara and John Sutton play the roles of three who devoted their lives to the institution whose graduates are bringing fame and honor to our country in the present world conflict. Opens Thursday.

Earle

"LARCENY, INC." is the latest satire on American lawbreakers. Edward G. Robinson plays the part of a famous outlaw who encounters serious difficulties in his campaign to loot a bank. Everyone conspires to make him a successful business man when all he wants to do is crack one little safe. Jane Wyman appears as his adopted daughter who helps trick him into being a "solid citizen." The new stage show will be devoted to the open trail and the wide open spaces. Roy Rogers, one of the favorite singers of the cowboy tunes appears with his horse Trigger. Others in the showy include the Sons of the Purple Sage, singers of western tunes; Dick Nash and Janet Evans and Rollo and Verna Pickert. Opens Friday.

RKO-Keith's

"LADY IN A JAM" brings Irene Dunne back in another of her popular sophisticated comedies. Miss Dunne plays an irresponsible heiress who goes broke and then proceeds to go west, to the badlands of Arizona, to work an abandoned gold mine in a ghost town. Patric Knowles and Ralph Bellamy are the men in her life, and the supporting cast includes Queenie Vassar, Eugene Pallette and Samuel S. Hinds. In addition to the feature picture the new issue of the "March of Time" is being shown entitled "Men in Washington" depicting and telling who and "how-come" are the men that are running this war-time Capitol of ours. Opens Thursday.

Capitol

"THE MAGNIFICENT DOPE" brings the combined comedy talents of Henry Fonda, Don Ameche and Edward Everett Horton together to burlesque the "Dale Carnegie" type of school which purports to teach timid folk how to win friends and influence people. Fonda plays the role of a Vermont youth who takes the course because he has fallen in love with one of the teachers. Lynn Bari appears as the object of his affections. Opens Thursday.

Metropolitan

"SERGEANT YORK" makes its bow for the first time a popular prices. Gary Cooper stars as the distinguished hero of World War No. 1. This is the story of the simple Tennessee farmer who first registered as a conscientious objector but later became the soldier that all America idolized. Opens Friday.

Columbia

"HER CARDBOARD LOVER," in which Norma Shearer plays the role of a wealthy girl who hires a songwriter to pose as her lover while she fends off the advances of a rushing suitor. The scene is a fashionable Florida resort town against a background of moonlight and palm trees. Robert Taylor and George Sanders complete the triumvirate in this transposed Continental comedy. Opens Thursday.

Little

"THE MAN WHO SEEKS THE TRUTH," the last film completed by the distinguished French actor, Raimu, before the German occupation of Paris. The story centers around an honest Paris banker who learns that his fiancee is not entirely faithful. To test her he pretends to become deaf and in so doing learns more than he expected. Supporting Raimu are Jaqueline Delubac, Gabrielle Dorziat and Alerme. Opens Wednesday.

Pix

"MEXICAN SPITFIRE SEES A GHOST" brings back the team of Lupe Velez and Leon Errol in a wacky tale of ghosts, saboteurs and high jinks, with the fiery Lupe and her scrambled English going to town. Cofeatured is "WHISPERING GHOSTS," a comedy full of laughs and thrills with Milton Berle and Brenda Joyce. Opens Wednesday.

Trans-Lux

"FIGHTING FISH," a sports short about marlin and swordfish, highlights this week's program. "Screen Snapshots," featuring Lieut. Jimmie Stewart, Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen and Janet Blair, add a festive touch to the holiday show. The program winds up with the weekly features of H. V. Kaltenborn and Tex McCrary plus a Walt Disney cartoon and 35 minutes of news pictorials. Opens Friday.

Cross Roads

"SEPARATE ROOMS," which opened Monday night, will continue for a second week. Izetta Jewel, jr., and Robert Allen have the leads in this witty farce of modern manners. Performances are at 8:45 nightly except Sunday, and there is regular bus service from Tenth and D Streets to the theater.

Wilson Line

S. S. MOUNT VERNON, the new streamliner, is featuring Monday and Friday cruises to Marshall Hall Park, at which time fare for adults and children is halved. On other days as well the popular liner leaves its berth at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. to sail down the Potomac to the well-known amusement center and picnic park.

Glen Echo

THE SPANISH GARDEN orchestra, under the direction of Paul Kain, is preparing special patriotic tunes for the enjoyment of the holiday crowds. Those who wish to remain cool during the day may take advantage of the free swimming lessons being offered at the Crystal Swimming Pool. Fifty different amusements and a cool picnic grove round out the multiple offerings of the popular Washington playground.

Star Would Give Estates to Charity

Paul Henreid, Bette Davis' leading man in "Now, Voyager," is trying to give away $100,000.

Henreid, whose family estates at Karnten, Austria, were seized by the Nazi(along with his Vienna bank account, wants to deed all his property to the international Red Cross.

"Don't let anybody think this is a very generous gesture," he explained. "So far as I am concerned, whatever I owned in Austria will never be mine again. But the Nazis have curious legal minds, and I am trying through friends in unoccupied countries to get a court ruling before the Nazis make their thievery what they call 'legal'."

Woman Gets Wills Registry Deputy's Post

The first woman ever to hold the office of deputy register of wills for the District of Columbia was scheduled to begin her duties this morning at the District Court Building.

She is Mrs. Ella A. Brown, 2901 Connecticut Avenue, who has been connected with the office of wills registry for more than 20 years. She takes the place of Melvin J. Marques of 430 Turner Street, Chevy Chase, Md., who is to be commissioned a captain in the Adjutant General's Department of the Army. Marques was appointed to the registry of wills in 1918, serving the last 12 years as second deputy.

Mrs. Brown has been chief accountant of the office for the past eight years. Filling the vacancy left by Mrs. Brown's promotion is Mrs. Katherine E. Peyton of the Highlands Apartments.

Court Directs Verdict in Favor Of Dr. Darlington in Will Case

By the Associated Press

White Plains, N. Y., June 30.—Surrogate Charles D. Millard directed a verdict today in favor of the Rev. Dr. Henry Darlington, rector of New York City's fashionable Church of the Heavenly Rest, and other proponents of the will of the late Mrs. Anna H. Paton, who bequeathed 30 per cent of her $1,300,000 estate to the rector.

Dr. Darlington's legacy will produce for him only about $2000 annually, because of shrinkage of the estate through taxation and a compromise agreement entered into prior to the will contest.

Contesting relatives charged that the clergyman, 53, married and the father of two children, wooed Mrs. Paton, who was 26 years his senior, in order to get her money. Supporting their contention, counsel introduced letters from Dr. Darlington to the widow in which he said "I love you very much and miss you terribly . . . love and then more love . . . oceans of love."

Proponents' counsel insisted that such phrases only indicated an affectionate "mother-and-son" relationship.

The surrogate, in directing the verdict, found that Dr. Darlington was Mrs. Paton's "religious adviser," while she was a "staunch supporter of his church" for 13 years. The church gets another 10 per cent of the estate.

The will provides $25,000 for the contestants—the family of Mrs. Paton's brother, the late Dr. E. Hollingsworth Siter of Philadelphia.

177 Convicted As Saboteurs, FBI Reports

By the Associated Press

The FBI has reported 177 convictions in the field of sabotage and 5246 complaints investigated in the ten months beginning last July 1.

Clyde A. Tolson, assistant director, said some of the cases investigated were "aggravated cases of sabotage," but that up to early June there had been no foreign inspired sabotage in this country.

He made this statement in hearings on a defense appropriations bill being considered by the House. His testimony, made public yesterday, was given before the FBI announced the seizure of eight submarine-borne German agents last week.

Most of the complaints investigated, he explained, involved "disgruntled employes and cranks, and persons who had grievances."

So far, Tolson said, the FBI has arrested 8844 alien enemies, consisting of 4611 Japanese; 2989 Germans and 1365 Italians. Contraband seized in raids on suspected premises included 631 pistols, 710 rifles, 1616 shotguns, automatic rifles, and machine guns, 207,994 rounds of ammunition, 1652 sticks of dynamite, 1645 short-wave radios, and 956 swords, bayonets, knives and dirks.

"We have investigated a large number of espionage rings and quite a large number of individual agents," Tolson said.

As a result of investigations of Government employes, Tolson revealed, "a number of individuals have been discharged from the Government service" and others charged with subversive activities have resigned.

To keep in close touch with everyone who might be in a position to serve the purpose of an enemy government, the FBI has built up a fingerprint file of almost 40 million sets of records. To this total it is adding at the rate of two million sets monthly, the additions including all persons working on army or navy contracts.

Butterfly Expert

Salem, Va. (AP).—Carl Gottschalk, Roanoke College senior, is recognized as an authority on butterflies although he plans to become a doctor not an entomologist. Gottschalk has collected more than 4000 specimens of several hundred species, including 350 North American species alone.

One particular aberration bears his name in its scientific title: "Strymon cecrops, ab. Gottschalki." He plans to continue his hobby while studying medicine at the University of Virginia.

New York, June 30.—The first rocket cannon appears to be the reason for Rommel's victories in Lybia and Egypt.

This gun is the 88-millimeter weapon, firing shells which are bigger and which outrange any tank projectiles possessed by the British.

Many reasons point to this explanation. Edward Kennedy of the Associated Press, in a dispatch from Cairo on June 23, wrote: "Shells from this gun are for a semirocket type, said to gain greater range by gases produced after being fired.

"The 88 was thus able to destroy many of the best tanks on this side, such as the U. S. General Grants, which have 75-millimeter guns, before the tanks could get within range of the German artillery."

Success in the rocket principle, applied to bombs, was reported from London five days before Kennedy's dispatch, in an account of the sea fight in the Mediterranean. The same dispatches pointed out that the Russian Stormivik planes used rocket bombsw with great effect.

Another confirmation comes from the Associated Press photo June 25 of the 88-millimeter gun, a picture which came from Portual showing a remarkable looking weapon—a light gun, with an exaggerated long barrel, appearing almost too slender to hold a shell of 88-millimeters (about 3½ inches).

Photos in previous wars have revealed important enemy secrets, and Edward F. Chandler, New York engineer and member of the American Rocket Society, says this picture virtually fixes the semirocket character of the new German terror.

The slenderness of the barrel and the light weight is the tip that the gun is partly merely a projector. It is not heavy enough to fire an 88-millimeter shell full range, unless made of some secret new alloy, an interpretation precluded by the Cairo dispatch.

The British soldiers could see the tails of fire from these shells.

The principles on whichc this gun necessarily operates are obvious. The shell is fired as in an ordinary gun, but only by a light charge of explosive propellant. The charge is sufficient to give the shell a fair muzzle velocity, and to fix its direction, or trajectory, toward the target with accuracy.

As it leaves the muzzle, a rocket charge inside the shell ignites, to carry it farther than it otherwise would travel, and probably actually to cause it to pick up speed after it leaves the gun muzzle. In fact this tyupe of shell could be traveling with its greatest velocity at the moment of impact, instead of when it leaves the cannon.

The requirement to make such a shell is merely a chamber filled with fuel, which will burn explosively, shooting out from the rear end of the shell in a continuous, rocket stream. It is not this stream of fire which propels the shell, but the inner explosion, pushing against the shell, showing it in the direction already imparted by the cannon.

Rally in Post Square Prelude to Retail Stores' 'Whiteout' Sale of Bonds Today

OFFICIALS AND ENTERTAINERS at the retail stores' bond rally on the District Building steps are (from left) Herbert Willett, speaker; Bruce Allen, chairman; Jessica Dragonette, songstress; Jay C. Flippen, emcee; and Gene Marvey, songster. They are surrounded by the Earle's Roxyettes and the Capitol's Rhythm Rockets

A civilian army was mobilized before the District Building yesterday in preparation for an "all out" conversion of retail store activity in Washington at noon today to the program of providing funds to arm and equip the Nation's fighting forces.

For 15 minutes after noon today, during what the Merchants and Manufacturers Association has called a "whiteout," the only thing that will be sold in any store will be war bonds and war stamps. Arthur J. Sundlun, president of the association, yesterday expressed hope that customers would show the same enthusiasm as was shown yesterday by salespeople.

Approximately 10,000 of the latter overflowed Post Square as they were sung to, spoken to and stirred with enthusiasm for today's wholehearted effort to help the armed forces. It was part of a stupendous Nation-wide effort in which stores everywhere will join.

Strains of the "Star-Spangled Banner" will signal the "zero hour" for today's attack. At the same time District Commissioner Guy Mason will address potential buyers in words that will be heard over public address systems in many stores. Patriotic music will be carried to the same stores from radio stations, and as the effort reaches its climax, H. L. Rust, jr., chairman of the District War Savings Committee, also will address the crowds.

Today's drive, while it will be the most concentrated of the month, will inaugurate a program that is to extend throughout the month and is expected to add in Washington fully $6,250,000 to a $1,000,000,000 goal that has been established for the United States.

The next major event in the month's campaign is to be a "war heroes' day" on July 17.

The entire movement has been named the Retailers-for-Victory Drive, although the enthusiasm that was expressed at yesterday's meeting was evidence enough that the urge is there to make it an Everybody-for-Victory Drive, at least so far as Washington is concerned.

Jay C. Flippen, radio star, acted as general leader of yesterday's rally, and Jessica Dragonette sang "God Bless America" and other songs, in which the mobilized salespeople joined. Jane Pickens and other stars will be present in stores today to assist in the actual sale of bonds and stamps, and uniformed members of the American Women's Voluntary Services also will do their part.

Ruling Is Clarified For Police, Firemen

Only Those Who Have Been Sworn In Will Be Granted Military Leave Here

Only those District policemen and firemen who have been sworn in as enlistees in the armed services will be granted military leave from their posts, Commissioner Guy Mason asserted yesterday.

His statement clarified a decision made by the Commissioners Monday, when they voted to discontinue the custom of granting military leave. At least 100 policemen and firemen are affected by the interpretation.

Immediate protest was voiced throughout both departments, especially by those men who already have made application to the Navy and Coast Guard and are awaiting a call to be sworn in.

Commissioner Mason declared these men will not be granted military leave and added that the Secretary of the Navy Knox had assured the Commissioners the men would not be sworn in.

Many in Class 1A

As a result of Mason's declaration, Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, and his assistant, Inspector Harvey G. Callahan, yesterday asked the Navy and Coast Guard to furnish them with a list of men already sworn in.

Police records so far have not separated those who have only made application from those who have been sworn.

It was pointed out yesterday at Police Headquarters that those who desire to enlist may resign from the department but will not be granted leave unless drafted.

At least 40 men in both departments already have been classified 1A or have been assured by their draft boards that they cannot expect deferment.

However, Selective Service officials in Washington previously had agreed to defer any registrants among policemen or firemen on occupational grounds.

Draft boards of nearby Maryland and Virginia apparently have not entered into the agreement. For the majority of protests heard yesterday came from officers living in the counties.

One man, a private in the Accident Prevention Unit, said he lives in Prince Georges County and that his board told him he would be called before the end of the year. The board, he said, assured him his wife would be given work to support their child.

Under the Commissioners' ruling the men may not "take the bull by the horns" and leave the dpartment without automatically becoming A. O. W. L. They are then liable to trial and possibl dismissal from the force when they return.

Civic leaders took opposite views of the question yesterday. Though none was found who would spak for publication, all seemed to think that if a policeman or a firman is to be drafted h should be allowed to better his position by enlisting.

However, some were of the opinion that trained police and remen ar necessary here and that both groups should be prvented from leaving unless called under the Selective Service Act.

Parker New Bolling Field Commander

COL. PARKER

Col. Lewis R. Parker, 37, operations officers at Bolling Field, has been appointed commanding officer of that field, to succeed Col. Ralph B. Walker who has been appointed commandant of the Newark, N. J., airport. Bolling Field headquarters announced yesterday. Col. Parker will take over next week.

A native of Wray, Colo., Col. Parker has been with the Army Air Force 15 years. He was graduated from the Kelly Field, Tex., Advance Flying School in 1929, from Chanute Field, Ill., Air Technical School in 1931, and the Air Technical School at Maxwell Field, Ala., in 1940.

Before coming to Bolling Field in 1937, where he has acted as First Staff Squadron officer, base engineering officer and operations officer. Colonel Parker was stationed at Luke Field, Hawaii. He also has served at Rockwell Field, San Diego, Calif.; March Field, Calif., and Chanute Field, Ill. His wife and three children live with him at Bolling Field.

Colonel Walker, a native of Detroit, is a World War I veteran. His service began in Hawaii. He transferred to the Air Force in 1920, and served at Nogales, Ariz., March Field, Kelly Field, Post Field and Randolph Field before taking over the command at Bolling Field about a year ago. He is married and the father of one son, Capt. Paul K. Walker, who is stationed at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.

Army to Take Over W. Va. Guard Camp

Representative Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, stated yesterday the War Department had authorized him to announce that about August 1 the National Guard camp at Camp Dawson, near Kingwood, W. Va., would be taken over by the Army as a military police training camp.

The number of men to be trained at the camp and other details were not announced.

King Peter, Farmer Himself, Studies Methods of U. of M.

HE TAKES THE COW BY THE HORNS—King Peter of Yugoslavia visited the University of Maryland yesterday. This isn't a bull he has by the horns. It's Barr Surprise, a purebred Ayrshire which is the prize milk producer at the school

Exiled King Peter of Yugoslavia paid a surprise visit to the University of Maryland's farm and dairy departments yesterday afternoon to make a study of American agricultural methods.

After an extensive tour of the university's farm facilities, the King participated in an open discussion with heads of the Maryland Experiment Station and State farm organizations.

Declaring that he was looking forward to the time when it will be possible to rehabilitate his country's agricultural industry, the King was especially interested in the dehydration of fruits that would permit the shipment of large quantities of food to Europe.

Visiting the campus as a guest of the military department of the university, the 18-year-old monarch was dressed in the white summer uniform of a Yugoslavian lieutenant-colonel. He was greeted with the customary 21-gun salute and went immediately to talk with Dr. H. C. Byrd, university president, and to meet school and farm officials.

During the discussions on farm problems, the King reminded university officials that his father, the late King Alexander, was world-famous as a poultry fancier. Part of the discussion dealt with the manner in which farmers are assisted with their problems by county agents and home demonstration.

Accompanying the King were B. Culbrilovitch, Yugoslavian Minister of Agriculture; Dr. Fred H. Leinbach, head of the university's animal husbandry department; Dr. Morley A. Jull, head of the poultry department; Dr. Charles H. Mahoney, head of the horticulture department, and Dr. William B. Kemp, head of the agronomy department.

ICC Employe Kills Self by Gas

A certificate of suicide was issued late yesterday in the death of Mrs. Bertha H. Babick, 43, of 1673 Park Road Northwest, an employe of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

She was found dead in the kitchen of her apartment shortly before noon. Her head was resting on the top of a gas stove and was covered with a blanket, police said. All jets on the stove were open, but unlighted.

Detective Sergt. Charles Carver of the homicide squad said the doors and windows of the kitchen were stuffed with articles of clothing. Two notes were found, dated June 27, in which Mrs. Babick complained of ill health. She asked that a sister, Mrs. J. R. McCamy of St. Joseph, Mo., be notified.

It was estimated that Mrs. Babick had been dead since Saturday night or early Sunday.

Jury Indicts Lionel Atwill For Perjury

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 30.—Lionel Atwill, stage and screen actor, was indicted by a county grand jury today on charges of perjury while testifying before a 1941 grand jury investigating parties in his Hollywood home.

The 1941 jury, after its inquiry, reported there was insufficient evidence for action. The new jury recently reopened the investigation, and Atwill appeared before it today at his own request.

No charge has been filed against the actor in connection with the parties. The previous investigation followed accusations that Sylvia Hamalaine, 16, was mistreated by a guest in his home. Atwill several times said the story was inspired by a shake-down plot.

Subsequently, Virginia Lopez, Cuban dress designer and Sylvia's roommate, was convicted of contributing to Sylvia's delinquency. Both appeared before the 1941 grand jury.

Atwill spent more than an hour before the jury and return of the indictment followed. Bail of $1000 was recommended.

The actor's attorney, Isaac Pacht, issued a statement saying, in part:

"The charge against Mr. Atwill was thoroughly investigated by a previous grand jury and found to be baseless. Mr. Atwill will press for the earliest trial possible when his innocence will, I am sure, be completely established."

The actor, formerly prominent on the New York stage, was married in 1930 to Mrs. Louise Cromwell MacArthur, former wife of Gen. Douglas MacArthur and daughter of O. T. Stotesbury, wife of the Philadelphia financier. Mrs. Atwill's home is in Washington, D. C.

Raid On Wake

The brilliant raid against Japanese-held Wake Island which American bombers carried out last Saturday is a signpost pointing to the future. The time may not yet be at hand for our forces in the Pacific to begin retaking what we lost to the enemy in the months after Pearl Harbor. The raid on Wake indicates, however, that such a development may not be too long in coming. For while we may not yet be able to seize and hold the island which was lost to the Japanese on December 23, we are now doing the next best thing, namely, making it very expensive for the enemy to retain his foothold there. "We leveled everything on the surface," said Col. Art W. Meehan, pilot of one of the bombers, "and crippled this Japanese stepping stone in the Pacific at least until the Japs can repair the damage and fly in new planes." This they certainly will do as speedily as possible. The raid on Wake shows how far-reaching is the range of our bombers. It was the longest over-water bombing flight ever made, and what was done this time can and will be repeated.

Realism On Rubber

Results of the rubber collection campaign probably leave many officials with a weak feeling in the pit of the stomach. In this respect news from the rubber front is comparable to that from the Egyptian front. We have to acknowledge, in both instances, that there has been general reliance on mythical resources that we did not possess. Realization of that fact is an uncomfortable sensation, and if we fail to act upon the discoveries thus made the consequences may even be disastrous.

The 219,000 tons of scrap rubber collected are a small fraction of the stock pile which many officials had visualized as being in the possession of householders. Estimates of the amount that might be collected had run into the millions of tons. We must remember that these collections have not involved the old tires in the hands of dealers. But when every allowance is made, the returns to date are something more than "disappointing."

President Roosevelt has properly extended the campaign for ten more days. In that period, of course, efforts to assemble every rubber article not in use should be redoubled. But no miracles from this prolonged drive can be reasonably anticipated. The clear implication is that our shortage is more serious than it was believed to be when this drive was launched.

The primary purpose of the drive, it will be remembered, was to determine how much rubber can be reclaimed so that officials will be in a better position to determine whether Nation-wide rationing of gasoline will be necessary. On the face of present returns, therefore, the Administration appears to be committed to restriction of gasoline supplies throughout the country. If we are going to safeguard our limited rubber resources, there is no other answer. We would be inexcusably prodigal if, in the face of this showing, we should go merrily forward burning up rubber in needless driving. In war, disaster comes, as General Ritchie has just learned in Egypt, from not recognizing our weakness and taking remedial measures while there is yet time. Every rule of common sense and military precaution calls for the reduction of rubber usage for nonmilitary purposes to a minimum. And that can be effectively done only through Nation-wide rationing of gasoline.

Showing Our Colors

Our national magazines are trying to make up for the general lack of flag displays among the citizenry. We wonder whether our national emblem has ever had such a tribute on our magazine covers. Tony, who runs the stand outside The Post Building, says a customer counted more than 25 different flag covers. Even the traditionally plain orange of Harper's is relieved this Fourth of July by a full-color, if formal, representation of our flag. Reader's Digest defied its tradition and placed the usual front-cover index on the back to allow room for a full-page Old Glory waving in the breeze. It will stir our hearts anew to find the flag in our homes as part of the Nation's reading matter. As a matter of fact, our flag consciousness is not as lacking as some people imagine. This is shown by the way that thousands of people are choosing a flag motif in their clothing and ornamental gadgets. What is really lacking is the kind of flag waving that is the excuse for just plain noisiness, but which the people seem instinctively and rightly to feel is out of place in this war.

Task For The Army

It is said that the great mistake of Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck at Cairo was that he did not know how to get rid of incompetents. He had been given the authority. But he preferred to cover up incompetence by doing the work of the incompetents himself. Whether that be true or not, the charge has a familiar ring. It can be laid at our door no less than at Britain's. We simply can't be tough enough to override claims of seniority, personal attachments, the old-school tie, and honest-to-goodness gentlemanliness in insuring what Walter Lippmann calls the "quality of our command." Incompetents are apt to be kicked upstairs instead of being kicked out.

The problem is raised again because our Army may shortly be taking the field against Hitler's legions. We have a sacred responsibility toward these young Americans to see that they are armed with the best weapons and led by the best officers. Are we sure the right men are in the right places? That is a problem for General Marshall. Some months ago he cut out a lot of deadwood, and he deserves great credit for it. But what he cut out was the deadwood that lay closest to him, and the fact remains that some of it still clutters other and equally vital branches of the Army. For not all the generals he superseded were retired. Some of them were shifted to positions of equal responsibility in the Army.

It is uncertain, of course, whether our military leaders will be able to measure up to Nazi standards, no matter how much effort we spend to smooth out the way to the top for the worthy. The odds are against us. There is no tradition of military study in our country, as there is in Germany. Our military men do not occupy the prestige which their opposite numbers occupy in Germany. Till war broke out we cheerfully skimped on the essential weapons which would have provided the practical training for our Army. Only in one respect are we sure that the Nazis can be proved deficient. That is in the paraphernalia of warfare. Kicked around though they have been, our industrialists can outdo their peers in Germany, for the American industrial brain is still supreme.

Still it is only on the field of battle that we can demonstrate the supremacy in the quality as well as the quantity of our war material. That means that the link between our industry and the Army cannot be too close. Our industrialists will always remain a model behind the Nazis if the liaison between them and the Army is not intimate and constant. The WPB—or the industrialists back of them—cannot go into the field. They cannot find out for themselves the latest styles in war weapons. Mr. Nelson already has said that from now on the strategists will keep in close touch with the WPB. That is a constructive development as far as it goes. But neither the Joint Staff Committee nor the Combined Staff Committee determines the military requirements that the industrialists are expected to produce. Orders for equipment come from the Army Requirements Division. It is through that division that the combat needs of the Army are transmitted to the factory front.

Now it is up to the Army to make our industrial brains count in this most technological of all wars. There must be a direct line between civilian or WPB procurement and the Requirements Division without any time-wasting interference from other departments. We have said that before. Of equal importance is the need for direct contact between the using arm in the field and the Requirements Division. This war has already demonstrated a dizzy rate of technological improvement in war material. And the need for improvement can be appreciated first by the men who use equipment or see it used against them. Organization of the Requirements Division must be based upon this indubitable fact.

That is so obvious that it would go without saying but for the fact that it is not yet realized in organization by the United Nations. The Nazis realize it. And see how it works: In the fifth Libyan campaign Ritchie drove Rommel clear across Libya. The Nazi marshal was pushed back to El Agheila, where he was able to hold on. After a spell it was his turn to drive Ritchie back over Libya. How was it done? By Rommel suddenly putting into action a new antitank gun which could both outrange Ritchie's and had a high muzzle velocity which gave it penetrating power. Rommel was himself stopped at Knightsbridge. Here he dug in, and, when he again went on the warpath, he was found to have the new dual-purpose 88-mm. gun for action against both tanks and aircraft. The new equipment (coupled, of course, with his brilliant tactical use of it) answered Rommel's particular needs at particular periods in his campaign. How did he get it? Of course, the Nazis have a shorter supply line than the British. But in Berlin, without question, the technicians in the supply departments must have been waiting to execute Rommel's orders as soon as they received them. And those orders were not suggestions, either.

One man has long appreciated this technological link between the using arm and the factory front. That man is Gen. Andrew McNaughton, commanding officer of the Canadian forces. He fitted out Auchinleck's army for the push to El Agheila. When that Army was thrown back, McNaughton came back to London and then paid a visit to Washington. He talked like a zealot for a New Weapons Division. He made an impression on men's minds, but not on Army organization either here or in London. In Canada, however, he did succeed in having set up a New Weapons Division—a division that now is constantly on its toes for technological news and requirements from the Canadian armies.

We in this country do not need a New Weapons Division. What we need is a transformed Requirements Division. And we need it fast, for time is flying and vital positions are being lost. Moreover our supply lines are much longer than Nazi Germany's or Japan's. Transformation might begin by authorizing every one of our armies to keep a representative with the Requirements Division. Even that simple reform would give the men soon to be sent into action that much more insurance that they will get the best material of which our arsenal is capable. Other reforms will suggest themselves if the end is kept in sight. This is that there should be no obstacles between the field and the factory front by the time our Army gets into action. Otherwise we shall court the same danger that overcame the British when they found themselves faced in Libya with superior equipment. And the payoff would be defeat and the blood of our soldiers.

Gandhi Now

The flat failure of the Cripps mission to India had one result which is of benefit in following the latest lucubrations of Mr. Gandhi. It educated the American people about the problem of India. That problem is now seen in true perspective—not in the simple terms of an imperialistic British raj grinding down the people of India but, in the words of an American historian, as "the most complicated governmental and ethical problem that has ever been presented to any people to solve." Mr. Gandhi has underlined that lesson in his public utterances since Sir Stafford Cripps left India.

Soon after Sir Stafford left Delhi, Mr. Gandhi, who was responsible for the breakup of the independence talks, began to demand Britain's withdrawal. He was taken to task in India. Mr. Gandhi answered his critics in his paper Harijan. On May 3 he felt convinced that "British presence is the incentive for the Japanese attack. If the British wisely decided to withdraw and leave India to the management of her affairs in the best way she could, the Japanese would be found to reconsider their plan." Nobody seems to have asked, as a rejoinder, why Japan invaded China. Or sought Gandhi's explanation for India's inclusion in Japan's coprosperity sphere. On May 18 Gandhi said he opposed a scorched earth policy in case the Japanese invaded India, except for the munitions factories. "I would certainly destroy them," he said. In other words, he would like to see India caught with its pants down, and would then strip them off, the better to enable India to serve as Japan's slave. On June 14 Gandhi again raised his volce to demand that Britain leave India "to God, or, in modern parlance, to anarchy, and that anarchy may lead to warfare for a time or to unrestrained dacoities (robberies with violence)."

We doubt whether even Gandhi's philosophic mentor, Tolstoy, would have condoned such a relegation of India to chaos and worse. No wonder the Japanese are singing Gandhi's praises in their propaganda war against India. Mr. Gandhi is virtually asking the Japanese in. Naturally the Mahatma is not playing the Japanese game wittingly, and nobody who knows the Congress leader would make that accusation. But the effect is the same. The fact is that, as has long been known, Mr. Gandhi's head is in the clouds. That would be a tolerable luxury in days of peace, but when the flames of war are spreading over the world, Gandhi's mysticism has become plain irresponsibility. He lacks the wisdom which consists of attention to realities. However, we need no reminders now from Mr. Jinnah, the Moslem leader, that Gandhi is not India, or that even his Congress Party represents anything more than a fraction of India's population.

WAR WIDOW

Close the door softly
Let nothing intervene,
Let me gaze in silence
On a hollow scene.
Laughter like a shaft of light
Is just beyond the door,
Hood its saltant radience
That it obtrude no more.
Never a fallen soldier
But rives the world apart,
So stilled in death my gallant one
And ravaged is my heart.
Wrap his name in glory,
His destiny was bright,
But close the door softly
On me and the night.

Letters To The Editor

Retirement Omission

Perhaps you are familiar with the amendment of January 24 to the Federal Civil Service retirement law, as this is the amendment which granted pensions to members of Congress. Contrary to the precedents set by all former amendments, however, the benefits of the amendment were not extended to employes already retired.

This matter would make a good subject for an editorial in your paper, as I am sure you will see the injustice of the legislation of January 24, 1942. Since 1920 employes have been contributing a certain percentage of their salaries, which has built up a large retirement fund, but the January amendment gives the benefits of this fund to those who retire after that date, but not to those already retired. The forgotten retired Federal employes would be grateful to you if you could assist in expediting the passage of the bill, H. R. 7209, which will correct the injustice or inequality.

A letter to the President calling attention to this matter was referred by him to the Civil Service Commission, and the Commission advises that:

"Should the Commission be requested by the proper Congressional committee to make report on any bill to extend the new method of computation to persons retired prior to January 24, 1942, you may be assured that careful and sympathetic consideration will be given the matter."

Sloppy Work

A number of weeks ago, on the front page, your paper printed an article concerning the appearance of the average woman in this city. It seems as though some man, whose name I cannot recall, feels that this "average woman" is far from appearing well groomed. At that time, I read the article with a great interest and no understanding. This man complained of sloppy dressing, unkempt hair, chipped nail polish and other things.

On behalf of myself and thousands of other young women in this city I would like to answer that man by saying that clothes that are not properly cleaned cannot look right and they are not cleaned well because of a lack of policy on the part of the dry-cleaning establishments, which charge good prices for poor work. Nail polish chips because manicurists do not know how to apply it properly in the first place. Hair looks unkempt because there is perhaps one competent hairdresser in town and the average Government employe's salary does not allow her to pay such prices.

Because the city has so rapidly grown is no reason for sloppy work and I am sure that many, many women will agree with me that it is high time something be done about it.

I am appealing to you to aid us in what may be called a—well, a crusade.

Laurels For Mr. Stokes

Congratulations to The Post and to Mr. Stokes on the Guild Award.

We are not surprised—we who have followed the Dillard Stokes byline through America's scrubby underbrush of home-grown Quislings, Lavals, Benedict Arnolds, diehard Tories and a fancy assortment of less dangerous psychotics and screwballs.

As long as we have editors, publishers and reporters doing this sort of work the less will be our tendency to revive the fence-rail and faggot treatment for those who persist in standing in the way of an American victory.

Dropping Arms

I have just finished reading your article about King Peter and his country, Yugoslavia. I am entirely in sympathy with what you say and with the desire of American people and our Government to help all enslaved and conquered peoples to fight the Axis, because in so doing they are really helping us.

What I can't understand is why the distinction between Yugoslavia and Korea, for instance, or between China and Korea? If we can drop supplies and weapons of war on Yugoslavia to use against Germany, why can't we drop the same kind of material on Korea to use against Japan and to help China?

For 40 years Korea has been fighting the Japs with whatever weapons her people had. They have carried on guerrilla warfare in China and Manchuria ever since the "China Incident" began, and for several years a Korean army of some 35,000 has been fighting shoulder to shoulder with the valiant Chinese.

The strategic position of Korea in the Pacific war zone cannot be overlooked. If our second front in Europe is to be weapons of war in the hands of the people in the occupied countries, why not a second front in Asia using similar methods?

Senator Ellender

The public is informed that "Ellender lashes at Britain" and the general tone and impact of Mr. Ellender's "lashing" is not what is expected of such as he is.

A man of presumably sufficient mental maturity to have been found eligible to represent his State, Mr. Ellender still has not learned the rather valuable lesson that talk, such as his, is detrimental to the good feelings extant between the Allied Great Powers, and is also a direct contradiction to the promise made of his mental maturity.

A "lashing" based on a sublime—or, shall we say, ridiculous—ignorance of facts, circumstances and conditions, discredits not only Mr. Ellender but the august body of which he has the honor of being a member.

This statement that "four million British soldiers are sitting on their haunches" is as vulgar as it is incorrect. In addition, to state that this army of four million(?) is doing nothing is evidence of gross ignorance and of latent ill feeling.

Load Taxis

Why not start a campaign to conserve taxi capacity by using a suggestion similar to the following.

At Union Station designate certain locations at the loading section such as:

South West (Buildings so & so's.)
North East (Buildings so & so's.)
North west (Buildings so & so's.)

Passengers could then assemble in these sections and taxis during the rush hours could readily pick up a full load for each district.

At present there is a man standing at the loading platform asking a small percentage of people where they are going and trying to coordinate passengers, but this method is quite inefficient.

Shipments To Enemies

In view of the universally recognized need for all-out war to smash the Axis, I feel that it would be appropriate for The Post to comment editorially on the fact that shipments of supplies from the United States are still going to Hitler-dominated countries, to be used by the Nazis in their war against the United Nations.

In fact, two ships, the Ile de Ouessant and the Ile de Noirmoutier are presently being loaded at New York, preparatory to sailing to French North Africa, where Hitler will be at liberty to unload them at his leisure.

When we consider how American men are risking—and giving up—their lives daily to guarantee adequate supplies for our Allies, it becomes the grimmest kind of a fiasco to contemplate such activities being carried on with the full knowledge of our State Department.

This is the result of the strong remnants of appeasement of the Chamberlain variety that still remain in our State Department. While our Secretary of State supports the President's policies without reservation, he is still forced to yield to the pressure of those short-sighted (or even traitorous) sixth column elements that want to continue the appeasement of the Axis and its satellites until the war is over. Such a policy obviously fits in perfectly with Hitler's fondest hopes, and can result only in boosting the strength of the Axis and in bringing about more Tobruks and Pearl Harbors.

Only the most widespread public pressure will bring about the complete defeat of our domestic appeaser gang; it is therefore the patriotic duty of every person and every newspaper that supports the war effort to demand the immediate cessation of all appeasement on the part of the State Department, including the severance of all relations with Hitler's puppet states: Finland, France, and Spain. Thus will we guarantee the speediest possible defeat of Hitler and all he stands for.

Ending Discrimination

It is welcome news for the believers in genuine democracy that the Navy has finally granted a commission to a Negro, Bernard W. Robinson, despite Secretary Knox's recent statement that there was "no thought" of granting Negroes commissions. Together with the opening up of jobs for 9000 Negroes in the Sun Shipbuilding Co's plant at Chester, Pa., it shows that at long last some genuine, if belated, progress is being made toward giving Negroes the same rights as all our other citizens.

These additional rights have been won as a result of the steady pressure on the Government by such Negro organizations as the March on Washington Movement, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the (Negro) Elks, together with such white friends of interracial democracy as Wendell Willkie, Mrs. Roosevelt and Pearl Buck.

Much still remains to be done. We should at least pass the Federal Anti-Lynching Law, remove the restrictions which exist in some States on educational opportunities for Negroes, abolish the poll tax as a necessary qualification for voting, and strengthen the powers of the Fair Employment Practices Committee so that it will have real power to compel employers to cease discriminating against Negroes in employment opportunities.

The Post Impressionist

"When The Roll Is Called Up Yonder"

Mr. Tomlinson, the Christian missionary whom I had visited in Khemissets, wrote me that he was coming up to Fez to conduct services there, and I met him at the bus station early one Sunday morning. On the way to the mission house we stopped at a cake vender's stall, and Mr. Tomlinson laid in a huge supply of cakes and sweetmeats.

"You must have quite a sweet-tooth," I observed.

"We always have a bite to eat after the services. Now mind you," he said firmly, "I have no use at all for 'rice Christians,' and we're not troubled with them here. I don't believe in feeding people in order to make converts out of them. But when they come to services at the mission house I feel that they are guests of mine, in a way, and I like to offer them a glass of tea and a cake afterward. And, I must confess," and here he smiled wryly, "that there's a practical side to it, too. Once a Moslem has eaten and drunk beneath your roof, the sacred ties of hospitality are established between you and him, and neither one can do anything to harm the other. It's a good thing to have such friends in a country like this."

At the door of the mission house, which was situated at the end of a long and dark alley, we found a young Moor waiting for us, clothed all in a soft maroon, with bright yellow babouch on his feet.

"Ah, Baba!" exclaimed Mr. Tomlinson and greeted him with a warm string of Arabic. "This is Baba," he explained to me, "my most faithful friend in Fez. He never fails to come every Sunday and help me set up the chairs and get things ready. He speaks French fairly well, so you will be able to talk to each other." Then he explained to Baba who I was, and Baba shyly extended his hand to me.

The mission house was built around a large courtyard with a fountain. From an adjoining room the three of us carried folding chairs and set them up in the courtyard, and then we rolled out a harmonium. People began to arrive, mostly young men who seemed to be particular friends of Baba, for they exchanged warm greetings. Gradually the courtyard filled up with young Moors, all chatting with great animation. I asked Mr. Tomlinson how many of them were Christians.

"Not a one," he replied sorrowfully. "They just come for the fun of it, because it gives them something to do, and because it is a novelty for them."

It was a novelty for me, too. Mr. Tomlinson called the congregation, if it could be called that, to order, and the service began. He had translated some Christian hymns into Arabic and taught them to the congregation. Pumping strenuously at the harmonium, he led the group in the singing. Since Arabic music is not built round the tempered scale, which led to some conflict between the singing and its accompaniment, and since the Arabic words did not fit the rhythm very well, if at all, it was some time before I recognized the hymn they were singing with such gusto. Then I understood the reason for their enthusiasm, for the references to trumpet blasts and roll calls fitted in perfectly with the militant concepts of Islam. They were singing, I realized, the Arabic version of

When the trumpet of the Lord shall sound and time shall be no more,
And the morning breaks eternal bright and fair;
When the chosen ones shall gather over on the other shore,
And the roll is called up yonder,
I'll be there.

Then Mr. Tomlinson announced the title of another hymn and began the opening chords, but there arose a great chorus of dissent.

"What's the matter?" I whispered to Baba, who was sitting beside me, his limpid eyes glowing with the excitement of the singing.

"We don't want to sing about Jesus; we all want to sing the battle song again," he answered.

Mr. Tomlinson expostulated for a moment, but his congregation was firm in its adherence to its favorite. Mr. Tomlinson gave in graciously, and again we lifted our voices in the battle song. I carried along bravely in English, and Baba held his head close to mine to catch the barbarous noises I was emitting.

Then Mr. Tomlinson read the Bible to us in his own translation and preached for half an hour. This part of the service did not interest the congregation very much. Moors are not happy sitting in chairs, and soon everyone began to wear a strained look, in which politeness fought with boredom. Another hymn was sung, this time without protest, the service was concluded, and we settled down to the real business of the day.

With many willing assistants, all chattering gaily, Mr. Tomlinson made pots of mint tea and heaped platters with cakes. The chairs were folded up and put out of the way under Baba's direction, and we all sat comfortably on the floor and noisily sipped our tea and ate many cakes and chatted happily. Mr. Tomlinson, I could see at once, was very popular with his Moorish friends and knew all about their affairs. We settled down for an orgy of gossip.

At last the agape was concluded. Everyone thronged about Mr. Tomlinson urging him toward the harmonium. He pretended to resist for a while, and then seated himself and began the strains of "When the Roll Is Called Up Yonder."

"A very beautiful battle song," said Baba, and his friend nodded their agreement as they launched into it at full blast.

Since the Nazis' salute is "Heil Hitler," I propose that our salute will be "Hit Hitler." All Americans everywhere, civilians as well as the military, will "Hit Hitler" with "everything we've got," in the factories, on the farms and on the battle fronts.

Man-Power Policy

By Ernest Lindley

Sharper Definition Is Needed

TWO IMPORTANT steps have been taken toward a more orderly allocation of the national man power for war purposes. War Man Power Director McNutt has issued directives concerning the deferment from military service of men in essential jobs. The primary task of determing which are essential jobs falls to the United States Employment Service. That is proper; the deciding agency should be one with full knowledge of industrial needs for labor and the labor supply. It is not a question which either an employer or an employe should have to argue with a local draft board.

LINDLEY

The second step is the setting up of four categories of men otherwise available for military service. This has been ordered by Selective Service. But at the same time local draft boards have been warned to permit nothing to interfere with supplying their draft quotas. So it seems likely that injustices growing out of poor administration of Selective Service will continue—at least for the present. And there is no clear assurance that the four categories to be set up will prevent such injustices in the future.

Until superseded by the latest order, there was a national rule to the effect that a married man should not be put in Class 1A "merely because his financially dependent wife is working or is capable of working."

BUT ONLY a few days ago, Eugene Duffield of the Wall Street Journal cited two recent cases in districts near Washington. One board put a man with a wife and one child in Class 1A because his wife once held a job. A second board, meeting in the same building, had just renewed the deferment of another man in exactly the same circumstances. In another district, a man was classified as 1A because his wife had once taken a stenographic course, although she had never held a job.

Thus, in two of these three cases, the local boards were going beyond the boundaries of natonal policy as it was then set forth by Selective Service Headquarters.

Such instances, from various parts of the country, are what caused Congress, in voting allowances and allotments for dependents, to authorize the setting up of categories according to family status. But these categories now exist only on paper. They must be made effective and perhaps need to be more sharply defined.

There is, of course, opportunity for appeal. But many men do not wish to avail themselves of it—and it is widely asserted, the appeal boards have lacked clear guidance as to national policy.

THE SELECTIVE Service Act probably left too much discretion in the hands of the local boards. As to the claims of particular individuals, especially in smaller communities, they are able to make fairer judgments, as a rule than could be made elsewhere. But their discretion should be exercised only within the framework of a firm national policy. Whatever the shortcomings of the law, they have been magnified by the failure to draw, and insist upon the observance of, Nation-wide rules. And the public has been still further confused by a multitude of conflicting interpretations, forecasts and hints, by spokesmen for Selective Service headquarters.

Another basic difficulty appears to be a lack of statistical information. As a result, quotas are fixed more or less by rule of thumb. This sometimes puts individual boards under exceptionally heavy pressure—which leads, in turn, to the drafting of men who, under a sensible and fair national policy, would be deferred. This lack of central statistical information, more than a year and a half after Selective Service went into effect, is astonishing. Until it is overcome, quotas for individual boards cannot be made equitably.

It is impossible to know how many men may be reached for the armed forces. We do not know whether this will be a three-year war or a ten-year war. We do not know what the casualty rate will be. We do not know even how many men will be needed next year. No one can know until the summer discloses whether the Russian Army is still fighting, whether China is still resisting, and what has happened to the Middle East. We may need 10 or 12 million men in the armed services, or we may need only 7 or 8. There can be, therefore, no assurance of deferment from military service for any able-bodied man for the duration of the war or even for another 18 months.

Before long, in all probability, the draft age will be lowered to 18, as was done in World War I, opening a new vein of first-class military material. But this is only one of many steps which need to be taken toward a more intelligent and orderly allocation of man power. Because of uncertainties as to the course of the war, the policy must be revised from time to time; but whatever it is, it should be clearly defined and equitably enforced.

The Gallup Poll

American Public Wants Harsh Treatment For Hitler and Nazi Leaders After the War

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 30.—While the American public is inclined to be surprisingly lenient on the German people, they think harsh punishment should be meted out to Hitler, Goering, Goebbels and other Nazi leaders when the war is over.

The largest number want them to be hanged, shot or imprisoned, a Nation-wide Institute poll shows, while a few think they should be subjected to the same mental and physical tortures which the Nazis have inflicted on people in conquered countries.

The national hatred for Hitler and his satellites is typified in the suggestion for punishment made by a 24-year-old man school teacher in San Francisco:

"Combine Hitler in a cell with Goebbels, Goering and Himmler, with the women of Lidice as guards."

A recent poll showed that only 6 per cent of American voters feel that the German people as a whole are our chief enemy. Thirteen times as many think the German government is to blame for the war.

As a sequel to this survey the Institute asked voters how they think Hitler and the Nazi leaders should be treated when the war is over. The results follow:

Punishment for:	Hitler	Nazi Leaders
Hang or shoot	39%	35%
Imprison or put in asylum	23	31
Exile	9	7
Treat as Nazis have treated others	5	5
Won't be alive—will have committed suicide or been killed by then	6	2
Slow torture: mental and physical suffering	3	2
Be lenient in punishment	2	2
Not our affair	2	2
Court-martial	1	2
No opinion	10	12

The mood of the public, similar to that in the last war when a "Hang the Kaiser" movement was started, is reflected in hundreds of individual statements in the survey, such as the following:

"Nothing is too bad for Hitler—hang him up by his thumbs."

"Let the Czechs have him."

"Give his brain to a doctor for research."

"Put him on trial like any other criminal."

"Tie him near an ant-hill. Killing is too good for him."

"Let him sit on a rusty bayonet."

"Find a St. Helena for him; he's nearly insane anyway."

"Bring him over here and put him on public exhibition in a steel cage."

"Have someone read his own speeches back to him eight hours a day until he goes nuts."

Instiute surveys have shown that, while hatred for Germany is concentrated largely on a few public figures such as Hitler, Goebbels and Himmler, Japanese war leaders have not been clearly identified in the public's mind.

Fair Enough

Spying On Spies

LEWIS MERRILL, president of the United Office and Professional Workers' Union of C. I. O., has challenged me to "cite a single instance" where a member of his organization ever betrayed to an outsider secret information concerning an employers' affairs which was obtained in a confidential capacity as secretary of the employer. This union is a party-line organization of the Communist front and has been so identified by unanimous report of the Dies Committee. No doubt its voluntary membership includes some white-collar workers who reject and hate communism and are individually worthy of trust. It also includes members who have been forced to join against their will, just as many newspaper workers have been driven into the Newspaper Guild, whose political character is similar. Such loyal Americans, of course, also would refuse to communicate to the Communist Party or its agencies information received in confidence.

As to Merrill's demands for citation of "a single instance where a member of the U. O. P. W. U. has betrayed his trust," I submit as follows:

On the night of last April 23 Mike Quill, the party-line boss of the Transport Workers' Union of the C. I. O., with a storm troop of goons, raided the New York office of District 50 of John L. Lewis' Union, the United Mine Workers, where a secret meeting was in progress.

QUILL FOLLOWED the party line of the Communists when Hitler struck Russia. He had been against intervention up to then, but now joined the demand for American military participation on Russia's side. Lewis remained an isolationist and, in his personal ambition to extend the Lewis family empire under his dictatorial power, started raiding other unions for members, including Quill's.

Marshall Field's New York tabloid publication, which began operations boldly with a large cell, not to say a hive of Communists in its editorial department, was privy to Quill's raid on the Lewis headquarters and had two reporters and a photographer on the scene with Quill and his goons.

Quill and his raiders found in the office of District 50 four anti-Communist leaders of his own transport union holding a private conference.

On May 14 Quill, in the name of his union, filed with Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., charges that Lewis had conspired to invade its jurisdiction, raid its membership and stir up conflicts in the C. I. O. The same day he also filed charges within his own union against the four anti-Quill men found in the Lewis headquarers.

An interesting question was "How did Quill find out about the secret meeting?"

He answered that himself on the afternoon of May 14, the day he set in motion the trial machinery of his own union against his four opponents for leadership of the transport workers. To a press conference Quill announced that Mildred H. Krohl, secretary to Edward Heckelbech, the regional director of District 50 of the mine workers, was at that very moment testifying before his own trial board against the four men accused of the grave crime of dual unionism. He said this confidential secretary to Heckelbech had resigned at the moment the trial started in his own court. Quill also passed out photostats of two private official letters on the stationery of District 50, obviously filched from its files, each bearing in the appropriate place, the initials of the stenographer, "M. H. K." which are the Krohl woman's initials. He also gave out photostats of her letter resigning her job and of an affidavit by her.

The Krohl woman wrote in her letter of resignation and in her affidavit that Heckelbech had demanded that she quit the office workers' union as a condition of employment.

In her letter of resignation from her job she said this demand violated the Wagner Act, as, no doubt, it did. However, it does not appear anywhere that she actually did resign from Merrill's Communist front for confidential employes. The affidavit says she "agreed" to do so.

MERRILL INSISTS that the Krohl woman did resign from his union and by this technicality, if it could be established, would insist that this confessed traitor to a confidential trust was no longer a member. However, the Krohl woman's own testimony in the trial of the four transport workers refutes the claim that she resigned. In this testimony she said "even at the request of the United Mine Workers, I didn't resign." She said she hadn't a union book at present, but added, "I didn't resign."

As to the betrayal of confidential information she made the admission that she had reported to Quill on meetings in the office of District 50 and she even gave testimony before Quill's Communist-front trial board regarding conversations which she had overheard as a confidential employe.

The original point of all this was that employers and other loyal Americans have not only a right but a patriotic duty to spy on unions of the Communist front because they are anti-American groups which naturally would spy on employers and the Government.

Incidentally, in her application for the job with District 50 the Krohl woman said she had been "engaged by the Government on special commissions charged with conducting surveys of various industries" at the time when information so obtained might have been very dangerous to the United States if Russia had remained friendly to Hitler.

War Labor Board

By Mark Sullivan

Its Policies Hit Employer And Public

THE MECHANISM for handling a labor dispute in a war industry is illustrated by the present case involving four companies in the steel industry. First, the War Labor Board turns the dispute over to a panel, in the present case composed of three men. The function of the panel is to "define and investigate the issues in dispute. The panel in this case has reported in favor of an increase of $1 a day for all workers and also what is called "maintenance of union membership."

SULLIVAN

At this stage, the War Labor Board as a whole takes over. The board holds hearings—in the present case the hearings begin July 1. After hearings, the board will hand down what is called a "directive." This is a strange new word recently introduced into the vocabulary of official Washington—its meaning is somewhere between a mere recommendation and a binding order. The directive is not compulsory on either the labor union or the employer company—either can refuse to abide by it. If either refuses, there would be a stoppage of production. If that should happen, the President presumably would take over the plant and operate it through the Army or Navy. Because of reluctance to cause stoppage, the War Labor Board's directives are practically all accepted, even though with much misgiving on the part of employers.

Of all the parties in interest in the present case, and in most of the labor disputes in war industries, the employer has the least concern about wage increases. The employer may have serious concern about innovations in labor relations such as maintenance of union membership. Maintenance of union membership means that every worker who is a member of a union at the time a labor contract is made must remain a member throughout the life of the contract. If he resigns from the union, or fails to pay his dues, or otherwise fails to abide by union discipline, the head of the union can notify the employer to discharge him, and the employer must do so. This is quite different from the case of a union shop, or closed shop, arrived at by private negotiation between an employer and a union. This is a case of the Government requiring a worker to keep up his union membership. This idea and practice is new. It has been applied by the War Labor Board in several cases. Because of the invasion of the liberty of both the worker and the employer, the new device has caused concern. Employers have accepted it only because the War Labor Board directed them to, and in several cases have taken pains to make clear that they accepted maintenance of membership only under protest.

AS RESPECTS the wage increases directed by the War Labor Board, employers have had comparatively little concern. This is because, in most war contracts, the increase in wages is actually paid by the Government. If the increase came out of the employer's profits, he might resist vigorously. But profits are so limited—by the contracts imposed by the Government, or the excess-profits tax, or both—that the employer has little motive for resisting wage increases. Out of a dollar a day increase in wages in the present case, not more than a few cents would be at the expense of the stockholders, the rest would come indirectly out of the Government's pocket.

Of all the parties concerned with wage increase, the one most adversely affected is the general public. This is because wage increases cause higher cost of living, and, under present conditions, bring serious risk of inflation. In the program for preventing inflation, prevention of wage increase is a keystone. President Roosevelt, when he laid down his seven-point defense against inflation, made his points simple by directly addressing the groups concerned. He said:

"Are you a businessman, or do you own stock in a business corporation? Your profits are going to be cut down to a reasonably low level by taxation. Your income will be subject to higher taxes . . .

"Are you a retailer or a wholesaler or a manufacturer or a farmer or a landlord? Ceilings are being placed on the prices at which you can sell your goods or rent your property . . .

"Do you work for wages? You will have to forego higher wages for your particular job for the duration of the war . . ."

THAT WAS more than eight weeks ago, on April 28. In the interval there have been many increases of wages. The present demand in the steel industry, if granted, would be a material increase in itself and would lead to other increases. Already pending for some weeks is a demand for increase in the General Motors Corp. Simultaneously with the present hearings on an increase in the steel industry, the board is confronted with a demand by the C. I. O. union in the Chrysler Corp. The union seeks a $1-a-day general increase, a $1-an-hour minimum for all plants, an increase for maintenance employes to $1.50 minimum an hour.

There is arising in the United States a new class, likely to be the largest class of all, purchasers of war bonds. They have a great and direct interest in preventing inflation—because inflation would reduce the value, the purchasing power of the dollars they will get back 10 years from now. Somebody representing the holders of war bonds ought to appear at the present hearings of the War Labor Board to persuade the board that unless it reverses its policy of directing wage increases, infiflation is likely to come.

Rails' Nets Rise 20 Million in May

The nation's class 1 railroads had an estimated net income of $63,600,000 in May, compared with $43,137,083 in the same month last year.

This brought the estimated net income, after interest and rentals, to $211,500,000 for the first five months of 1942, an increase of more than 92 million dollars over the corresponding period a year ago. The estimates were supplied by the association of American railroads.

Operating revenues for May totaled $601,001,598 compared with $442,285,876 in May, 1941. Operation expenses last month amounted to 375,439,983, compared with $296,590,475 a year ago. Net railway operating income, before the interest and rentals was $109,628,364, an increase of approximately $21,524,000 over a year ago.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Private Purkey

Dear Dad: Well, I suppose you been reading all the news about me and the boys opening up a second front. First fronts, second fronts and third fronts is okay by me, pop, but I did not know there was any shortage of fronts; in fact, I got the idea we had plenty. I can count six fronts without no trouble, so this talk of a second one has me a little mixed up.

* * * *

I asked Sergeant Mooney and he says it ain't like a old-time war, when a front was a front and one was par. He says that in this war we got a whole series of fronts. I guess we got so many we got to number them. Mooney explanes to me that the talk of opening a second front refers to Section A, Part I, witch is Europe. Europe is where I got to be, he says, if I am to be of much help to Russia witch is the real front of the whole war.

* * * *

Well pop you fought in Europe in the last war when it was the first front and when one front was the normal quota for any doughboy. So I wood not mind if I got sent there also. I guess we got to open it all right and start slamming Hitler there if we are going to make good with them Russians who are certainly bearing the brunt of it all now. Anybody who can fight like them Russians is good enough for me.

* * * *

I can't dope out what happened to the British in Libbiya. The way Rommell suddenly shoved them back makes me think it was a mickey finn. One minute the British was making Rommell look like a preliminary fighter and the next minute Rommell has carried everything but two States, Maine and Vermont. What is all this fighting for Egypt about anyhow? Sergeant Mooney says the winner gets the Pyremids and that it is all a matter of saving face, but the Pyremid I seen had no face left to speak of, so I guess he is just kidding again.

* * * *

What worries me is them Alooshun Islands. All my life you could of mentioned them and I wood of thought they was a chain of summer resorts but I know different now. I don't see why we let them Japs stay on even them two small ones. We should rush Lieutenant Bulkeley up there right away to shove them off.

* * * *

Tell mom I got the sweater wih the gay stripes but tell her I am in a war not a world series. Also the last socks she sent were all left feel witch points to fifth column work in some haberdasherry.

* * * *

I send you a snapshot of me. I look pretty fat. I guess that is on account of the way the Army cooks serve food. They got no manners. They slap a gob of meat on your plate, then a big scoop of mashed potatoes and then on top of the meat and potatoes they slap rice pudding. Can you beat that? If they served ice cream they wood put it on top of the goulash.

* * * *

Well give mom my love. I gess you and her is having your troubles as I just read in the paper that four gallons of gas a week is all you will get for the flivver. Four gallons is only what the gas man used to spill over when he filled up the tank. Well, do not worry as I am fit as a fiddle and rarin' to go.

All my love,

OSCAR.

P. S. Six big planes just flew over the camp and when I asked who it was Sergeant Mooney said it was Churchill. There is only one Churchill, I said. There must be more, said the sarge. One Churchill couldn't be in so many places at once.

Stakes Of Battle

By Barnet Nover

The Importance Of Egypt

IN COMPARISON with the size of the forces involved in the titanic struggle on the Eastern Front the armies now engaged in the battle for Egypt are almost negligible.

NOVER

More men have probably been killed and wounded in any one month of the war in Russia than have actively participated in all the campaigns that have taken place in Libya and Egypt during the past two years. However, what has happened in the Pacific since Pearl Harbor has taught us that the significance of a battle can be altogether out of proportion to the number of troops employed.

The Japanese conquered an empire of tremendous size, an empire extending from the Philippines to Australia, from Wake Island to the borders of India with a total force that probably did not exceed half a million men. Marshal Rommel is now making a bid for no less tremendous stakes with an army of well under that size.

CONTRARY to popular belief, control of the Suez Canal is not the most important but perhaps the least important stake in the present struggle in Egypt.

If the Axis succeeds in overrunning Egypt the control of Suez which would follow would have no meaning unless and until they also reconquered East Africa and took possession of Aden. Even then the Suez Canal would be worthless to them unless, in the meantime, the Japanese succeeded in sweeping Allied seapower out of the Indian Ocean.

In view of what happened at Trincomalee and in the Battles of the Coral Sea and Midway that is hardly an immediate possibility.

The fact is that as matters stand now the importance to the British of the Suez Canal is now the reverse of what it once was. Whereas in the past the occupation of Egypt was undertaken as a means of defending the canal, the control of the canal is important only so long and to the extent that this control contributes to the defense of Egypt by permitting supplies to reach Egypt by sea.

MORE IMPORTANT than the circumstance that it flanks the Suez Canal is the fact that Egypt occupies a vital position in the Mediterranean, Africa and the Near and Middle East.

British sea power in the Mediterranean is by no means the menace to Axis communications with Africa that it once was. In part this is the result of the enforced dispersion of British naval strength after Pearl Harbor; in part a reflection of the difficulty of employing sea power within close proximity to land-based enemy air power.

Nonetheless, the presence of the British fleet in the eastern Mediterranean remains a thorn in the Axis flesh. Hitler and Mussolini would like to destroy or eliminate it. They have been unable to destroy it, although they have sacrificed a large number of planes and a good part of the Italian fleet in the attempt. The capture of Alexandria would enable them to eliminate British naval power in the Mediterranean.

ONCE ALEXANDRIA has been taken, Malta would be completely isolated and could be starved out. Then nothing would stand in the way of continuous and uninterrupted two-way communications between Axis Europe and Africa, particularly since the loss of Egypt would also rob the Allies of their existing air bases in Northeastern Africa.

Egypt's position is also important not only with reference to the Mediterranean but also in its relations to the continent of Africa. In control of Egypt the Axis would be in a position to sever the invaluable air rout from the United States to Iran, India and China.

THE POLITICAL consequences of the loss of Egypt would also be extremely serious, so far as the fortunes of the United Nations are concerned.

The Arabs, despite the persistent efforts of the bureacrats of the British Colonial Office to appease them, even at the expense of the war effort, have remained on the sidelines. Axis agents have been busy among them and such Arab Quisling leaders as the Grand Mufti and Rashid Ali of Irak whom the British authorities allowed to slip through their fingers, are ready to step in to establish pro-Axis governments throughout the Near and Middle East.

A debacle in Egypt would see existing fifth columns in Egypt, Irak, Transjordan, Syria and Saudi Arabia come to the surface like Japanese beetles in the Spring.

Egypt is not yet lost. Rommel may yet be halted before he reaches the Nile Valley, though we certainly cannot bank on this. But the danger to the Allies in the Near East would not be ended even should that occur. If, in the process of stopping Rommel, the Allies have to draw on much of their present strength in the Middle East, an attack on Cyprus and Syria from Crete and the Dodecanese can be looked for. And recent developments at Sevastopol and in the Ukraine indicate that the Middle East is threatened from the north as well as from the south.

Plan Diet to Keep Up Vitality For War Work While Reducing

By Ida Jean Kain

Women have too much to do in wartime to go on any starvation diets. We're all putting out more energy than ever before. Even the housewife who has just about all she can do at home is averaging one to two hours a day in some kind of war work. But the women of the entertainment world are the ones who are really doubling up on their working hours. They seem to be enjoying it, too!

These singers and actresses are still glamor girls however, and they haev to keep slim. But their diets have changed for the better. They cut their calories with caution. For example, Jean Tennyson, opera singer and radio star, has to take her weight down every now and then. Her new diet is carefully planned, not to take the pounds off in a hurry, but to keep her vitality up while she losses. It is so good I think you might like to follow it.

As Miss Tennyson observes, "you've got to begin your day with a strength building breakfast to work at top efficiency." So the usual order of dieting, which simply omits breakfast, is out. For this meal she likes half a grapefruit, cereal and milk with just a sprinkling of sugar, a soft boiled egg, coffee without cream and a mere teaspoonful of sugar. This adds up to 370 calories or thereabouts which is slightly under one-third of her day's calories.

Strengthgiving Breakfast

One of her favorite reducing luncheons consists of a vegetable salad, a bran muffin and butter and a glass of skimmed milk. The salad is made of a half cup of chopped cabbage, a quarter of a head of lettuce, watercress, parsley, and a sliced tomato. It is mixed with lemon juice and seasoning, but no mayonnaise.

For dinner she goes a little heavier on the calories and has a menu something like this: A cup of vegetable soup, a slice of roast beef without any fat, or gravy; green beans, carrots; for dessert, strawberries with one teaspoonful of honey.

The three meals a day come to around 1,300 calories. That number allows for better than adequate amounts of the protective foods, and even though you are working extra hard, should keep you feeling tops while you lose weight.

Exercise Necessary

Along with a diet, you have to take exercise. Miss Tennyson gets hers in gardening and bicycling, with an occasional set of calisthenics thrown in.

Here is another of her menus:

BREAKFAST	CALORIES
Orange, sliced	90
Whole grain cereal, milk	220
Bacon, 2 strips, crisp	50
Coffee, no cream	20

LUNCHEON
Salad: 3½ tbsp. cottage cheese, chopped green pepper, 1 tbsp. chopped chives or onion, ¼ head lettuce	100
Poached egg on thin whole wheat toast, scarsely buttered	200
Skim milk, 1 glass	80

DINNER	CALORIES
Tomato soup, 1 cup, made with milk	150
Roast lamb, 1 slice, no fat	175
Yellow turnips	35
Asparagus	50
Fruit	100

Mary Haworth's Mail

Mother of Five Children, Eldest of Whom is Seven, Says It's Silly to Enforce Afternoon Naps When Youngsters Aren't Sleepy; Thinks Play Is Preferable

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As the mother of five small children, ranging in ages from infancy to 7 years, I have a suggestion to offer the mother of 3-year-old twins, who asks how to cope with their aggravating refusal to fall asleep, when put to bed for afternoon naps and at night. She says they never settle down until her patience is worn thin and finally she spanks them—usually one or two hours after they were put to bed.

My advice to her is to omit the daytime nap entirely. And, if she cannot provide separate rooms for them, to "stagger" their bedtime at night—putting one boy to bed at 6 o'clock, and the other at 6:15. If they don't have a daytime nap, I will wager both will fall asleep almost as soon as they hit the pillow. My children are wonderfully healthy and very energetic and in order to cope with the sleep situation, I had to cut out their naps from the time they were 2 years old. They were sent to bed for an afternoon nap only when they felt tired and preferred to rest.

I know doctors recommend daytime naps for small children; but doctors proceed on theory for the most part, whereas mothers have to deal with facts. I soon learned that an hour's enforced rest in the afternoon often caused my children to lose several hours' sleep at night. And that just doesn't make sense. My four eldest children, ranging from 2 years to 7 years, are permitted to romp and rampage all day. Then they are put to bed from 6 to 7 p. m., and they sleep around the clock—waking bright-eyed for breakfast, with hearty appetites. Everyone remarks how healthy they are.

My experience at trying to discipline a wakeful child at bedtime soon taught me that it is a futile, completely exhausting ordeal. All the by-products are bad. It makes the child the center of too much attention; it leads to contention; and the child discovers his power to demoralize parental authority. Besides, it's all silly. Nature would take care of the situation; if only we didn't hinder her with fetishes. If a child doesn't eat, let him get hungry. If a child won't sleep, let him get tired. That's my advice. Sincerely yours. M. H.

Divorcee Calls Alimony 'A Legalized Racket'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In your column of June 27, a woman whose husband and father are lawyers, comes to the defense of alimony for divorced wives, on the theory that it is, in most cases, "a legal discipline judiciously imposed upon men of irresponsible temperament." She declares that "the conscientious and disinterested jurists who hear and rule upon divorce cases are animated only by searching considerations of justice and merit, when stipulating alimony as a divorcee's due, in certain clearly defined conditions."

Four years ago, in my innocence of legal procedure, I might have endorsed her high-minded statements. However, in the interim, I have learned at first hand, in the School of Experience, that the legal fraternity's championship of alimony is not exactly altruistic, benevolent and disinterested. On the contrary, the attorney who specializes in divorce is interested in obtaining alimony for his women clients, on account of he expects to pocket a certain percentage of such winnings himself. In the event the client insists she is entitled to alimony, and incites her attorney to press her demands, no doubt he is entitled to a fair return on his efforts, especially if they meet with success. However, this is beside the point I wish to make.

I discovered that the accredited expounders of law are politely indifferent to "searching considerations of justice and merit," when approached by a woman client who is interested in divorce but opposed to alimony; and that with one accord, they begin with refrigerating courtesy to "plug" for Reno. If I had elected to follow the line of least resistance, by yielding to tacit pressure to demand alimony and pay the proportionate fee, all would have gone smoothly for me, in the local fiel dof jurisprudence. But since I was determined to have no truck with the prevailing custom of exacting my "pound of flesh," I was obliged to turn,—though reluctantly,—to Reno for equitable settlement of my affairs.

In my philosophy, alimony is a cynical contradiction of the whole purpose and meaning of divorce. When there is nothing left in a marriage relationship but strife and unhappiness, civilized persons have come to invoke divorce as the enlightened, man-made way of severing the ties that constrict and maim, instead of bind. Yet, to unloose some of the ties, while reinforcing the financial "strings," is not to sever the relationship at all. It amounts merely to changing the form of the persons' relationship to each other. Even though it is within the law for a divorced woman to "hold up" her former husband for liberal maintenance, and even though the practice is sanctioned by some portion of society, nevertheless the arrangement has the effect of lowering a woman in the esteem of her friends, despite their seeming approval.

When I set out to obtain a divorce, I was determined to take no alimony. Then began my disillusionment with the legal fraternity. One lawyer after another was recommended to me as "highly reliable",—and I procured recommendations from some of the best legal sources in Washington. Each successive lawyer's budding interest in my mission subsided noticeably, the moment I stressed, "No alimony." They put me off with various excuses. For example: "The docket is 15 months behind. It would be simpler to go to Reno." "No alimony? Then don't waste time in the District. Go to Reno." "I can't afford to take a case that might string along for a year or two; and with no alimony involved. You should go to Reno."

So I went to Reno. And, naturally, I am under no illusion today, concerning the true motive which inspires the legal fraternity's supposedly "protective" attitude toward the woman who is being divorced. If lawyers actually were animated only by "considerations of justice and merit," when handling divorce cases, — as "Woman Reader" naively argues.— I would have had no difficulty finding a lawyer to take my uncontested suit. Let's be honest, and sum up alimony for what it is. It is a legalized racket, that has no place in decent society. It is time our courts cleaned house.

HONEST WOMAN.

She'll Guide the Press Club

Even the boss was there—to see Christine Sadler (center) installed into the presidency of the Women's National Press Club at an inaugural luncheon yesterday. Alexander F. Jones (left), managing editor of The Post, extends his congratulations as does Edward Folliard (right), city room reporter

Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

ALERT Christine Sadler, who hails from Tennesee, was installed as president of the Women's National Press Club at an inaugural luncheon given by the club in her honor yesterday at the Willard Hotel. Immediately after taking over the president's gavel from Esther Van Wagoner Tufty, retiring president, she announced her committee chairmen for the year.

Since the program committee has the biggest job in keeping things moving, Christine named co-chairmen to share the responsibility. They are Ruth Cowan and Kathleen Holmes. Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris heads the membership committee and Isabel Griffin, the house committee.

Malvina Stevenson is chairman of hospitality and Hazel Grant Edgar, publicity. Mary McCracken Jones heads the fellowship committee, and Mary Hornaday is a new member.

Journalistic Plum

After speeches and committee appointments had been dispensed with, Miss Sadler revealed that Esther Van Wagoner Tufty had just received a journalistic plum. In a few days Esther will go to London (at the expense of the British Information Ministry) to serve as good will ambassador and war correspondent. While there she will take a turn at speech making and broadcasting.

Mrs. Tufty

Unable to attend the luncheon, both Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, who also comes from Tennessee, sent personal letters of congratulation to the new club president.

Alexander F. Jones, managing editor of The Post, returned from his vacation in Nova Scotia in time to see one of his favorite reporters take over the presidency of the Women's National Press Club. With Mr. Jones came Mrs. Jones, Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Post, was another on hand as an honored guest, as were Frank Dennis, assistant managing editor of The Post, Edward Folliard, reporter, and William V. Nessly, national news editor, Hugh Miller, picture editor, Donald Bernard, advertising manager, and Barnet Nover, columnist, also were there from The Post.

Besides the president other officers installed at the luncheon were: Betty Hynes, first vice president; Lily Lykes Shepard, second vice president Estelle Welsh, corresponding secretary; Virginia Mannon, recording secretary, and Katherine McKiever, treasurer. On the board of directors are Mrs. Tufty, Anne Wheaton and Katherine Lewis.

Off to Iowa

FIGURATIVELY speaking, Washington club women are in mourning. The reason—Mrs. Le Verne Beales, popular past vice president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, is leaving today to make her home in Iowa.

Mrs. Beales

So that Mrs. Beales might have a chance to talk over past events with her close friends, Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, who was president of the D. C. Federation at the same time Mrs. Beales was vice president, called together a group of mutual friends for a small party. The past presidents of the D. C. Federation, along with Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, the president, showed up for the event which was held at Mrs. Daniel's spacious home on Grant and Broad Branch Roads. And what started out to be an afternoon affair turned into an informal supper party, as a few of the guests lingered on. Mr. Beales showed up for the supper as did Mr. and Mrs. George Durno, Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Mrs. John Frizzell, Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt and Miss Frances Lide.

Brazilian Guests

TWO DISTINGUISHED Brazilian women—Mme. Laura C. Hasslocher, composer, and Mme. Mimosa Ferraz, writer—received a sample of North American hospitality when the American Association of University Women (D. C. Branch) honored them with a tea, Monday afternoon at club headquarters.

Mrs. Lalla Cornish, a close friend of the honorees and a member of the association, arranged the program, which was presented under auspices of the international relations committee of which Mrs. James Irwin is chairman. Mrs. J. K. McClintock made introductions in both English and Spanish. As a special tribute to Mme. Hasslocher a number of her songs were sung by Reinald Warrenrath, former Metropolitan Opera star. He opened the program with Julia Ward Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic," then followed up with the Brazilian composer's Pan American hymn, "Americas United," and two lighter numbers, "Butterfly Blue" and "Cigarette."

Old Songs Give Modern Woman Tips on Charm

Jessica Dragonette Believes Sentimental Ballads of Past Express Men's Ideals

By Martha Ellyn

No doubt when Jessica Dragonette steps from the concert stage tonight she will look around for a handful of raisins, one of her favorite foods. She keeps fit by drinking milk, carrot and orange juice daily. Above, she is shown on her studio terrace where she goes for air, sunshine and refreshments between rehearsals

WHAT is man's ideal of a beautiful woman? To answer this, look to the song literature of the world, advises Miss Jessica Dragonette, lyric soprana who will sing tonight at the Watergate Concert with the National Symphony Orchestra.

Miss Dragonette believes that all women should take a tip on pleasing men from the songs that men have written to womanhood. Talking with her yesterday at the Raleigh Hotel in the suite that has been named for her, I learned that she considers imagination the keynote of beauty, as it is of very feminine activity.

"Bonnie" Is Example

To illustrate her point, Miss Dragonette said, "Let's consider, 'For Bonnie Annie Laurie I'd lay me down and die.' Bonnie, you know means all those glamorous features: beauty, loveliness, appeal." To show how specific the poet had been in the qualifications of the beloved, the soprano sang softly the verse:

"Her brow is like the snowdrift,
Her neck is like the swan.
Her face it is the fairest
That e'er the sun shone on."

"A brow like 'snowdrift,'" commented Miss Dragonette, "implies no lines or frowns, and this can only be accomplished from within. No matter how trying Junior's hammering the parlor mahogany table may be—you must relax and be inwardly calm—if you want to possess a snowdrift brow."

Hold That Spine!

She continued, "Only good posture will give you a swan's neck. A straight spine and carrying the shoulder tips slightly forward is necessary. Of course, any tendency to stiffness will harden the neck and be detrimental to beauty. A helpful exercise is to lie down on a hard surface, with a tiny pillow under the head (not under the neck or shoulders) with knees bent over an overturned chair. This will straighten spine and prepare for the next step in exercise. Then your imagination starts to work. Try to imagine your spine a string of beads (the vertebrae being the beads) that you pull apart. This exercise if properly done stretches the places between the vertebrae and develops a flexibility so essential to good posture and well being."

Another exercise that Miss Dragonette finds most helpful to aid the internal muscles and help bring about a vital complexion is deep breathing. "There are countless Yoga exercises," she said, "that require patience and time to accomplish, but a simple one that everybody can do is this: Try while walking to inhale on four steps, then hold the breath for the next four steps, finally exhaling on the next eight steps. This will lighten your step, help the internal muscles to breathe and help the body burn up poisons.

"Every woman knows the importance of good cleansing cosmetics for the care and cleanliness of hair and skin, but no imaginative woman depends on these alone," said Miss Dragonette. "Nor does she neglect a balanced diet, with plenty of fruit and vegetables, nor 8 hours minimum rest. Fresh air and sunshine, too, are important. These requisites and happy thoughts do wonders toward marking a plain woman really beautiful."

Since this star has lovely blond hair, I asked her for suggestions about the care of it. This answer was also given by a song—Stephen Foster's "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair." "Jeanie must have had lovely hair," she observed, "and I think she probably gave it a hundred strokes a day with a good hair brush. And Jeanie must have had a graceful carriage for Foster to liken her to 'a vapor on the summer air.'

How to Be Happy

Questioned as to the effect of the war on feminine beauty, she answered, "The war has taught us that we can no longer depend on material security for happiness. This throws us all on the resources of our own personalities and sharpens our awareness to human relations. It is a challenge to the imaginative woman to make herself as beautiful, charming and memorable as possible to husband, sweetheart, brother, or son on leave; as nurse's aid and the hundred and one defense jobs she holds.

"All of us cannot have the flawless features of the Venus de Milo, but every woman can have radiance and charm by simply being willing to cultivate them."

Made-Over Clothes May Be Smart

Nowadays, when it's not only smart but patriotic to be thrifty, even Hollywood's fashionable ladies are making over old clothes. And the "made-overs" are often more attractive than the original.

One of the brightest ideas of the week was the complete transformation of a white linen shirtmaker dress Joan Bennett wore last summer, achieved by cutting the neckline into a low square at back and front, and taking the sleeves right out.

With a crisp red and white dotted Swiss blouse beneath it, and a matching ruffled apron tied around her waist, the star of Edward Small's "Twin Beds" now has the very newest of gay summer frocks—a pinafore dress.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Mrs. Mollusk Whiffletree of Truthtown, Long Island, and Yucca, Ariz., and Mr. Atterberry Whiffletree of New York, Miami, Chicago, etc., and formerly of Paris, London, Vienna, Cannes, etc., announce the engagement of their daughter Heloise Sapphira, who is a half-sister of Lady Clare and a granddaughter of Lady Teazle, who was formerly married to multimillionaire Obadiah K. Mulct, the Earl of Lochinvar and the Prince of Pilsen, and whose son, Sir Hilary Heckle, is the husband of the celebrated actress, Camille Souffle, whose former show place on the Riviera is now a Nazi cannery, and whose eldest son, by her first husband, Don Sancho Casanova, is a noted Surrealist refugee who paints under the name of "Dementi."

P. S.—Miss Whiffletree will marry Percy Z. Fifeblower of Truthtown.

Traveling Light

Mrs. Thornberry Flitterjig, Truthtown's most indefatigable traveler, will give a lecture tonight at the Plush Sofa Club on "How to Travel Light." "I have worked out a system," Mrs. Fliterjib told the Torch, "whereby I have cut my luggage down to 13 pieces."

The Simple Life

Mrs. Farthingale Midas has returned to her town house after opening her summer cottage on the Maine coast, her villa at Newport, her country place in Virginia, her lodge in the Adirondacks, her ranch in Arizona and her camp in northern Ontario. Mrs. Midas will not open her cabin in the Rockies or her hacienda in southern California this summer. "The war has caused me to curtail my summer entertaining," she explained yesterday.

A tea yesterday for Bundles for Graustark had to go on without the presence of the head of the organization, Mrs. Featherton Dabbler. Mrs. Dabbler got her schedules mixed and turned up by mistake at a cocktail party for Bundles for Babylon, of whose executive commitee she is a member. Before she could be located she had gone on to preside at a Bundles for Lilliputia board meeting, and from there had gone to a Bundles for Utopia hobby exhibit, of which she was a sponsor. She was finally reached at a Bundles for Shangri-La organization meeting, at which she was made chairman of hospitality.

Washington Looks Forward to Visit of Colombia's President-Elect, Whose Arrival Next Week Will Be a "Return Engagement"

HAVING JUST WAVED goodby to King Peter II of Yugoslavia, Washington society—without taking time out for a deep breath—is now getting ready to welcome with open arms another head of a nation, Dr. Alfonso Lopez, President-elect of Colombia.

Announcement that Dr. Lopez was expected to arrive here next week had hardly hit the headlines when the already popular Colombian Ambassador, Dr. Gabriel Turbay, suddenly discovered himself the center of attention every time he stepped out of his embassy at 1520 Twentieth Street. If he gives a reception for his country's President, it looks as if he had better make it exclusively official . . . or make up his mind to invite at least a thousand guests.

Washington women, who are generally conspicuously hesitant about leaving cards on a bachelor diplomat, have been throwing caution to the winds recently; at least they've been forgetting their Emily Post long enough to drop by the Colombian Embassy in droves, just to see that their calling cards get on that silver salver inside the door.

"I missed out on the two king parties this season," said one celebrity-loving woman, "and I'm going to get to that embassy reception for President Lopez if it's the last thing I ever do."

That's being pretty determined about the matter—particularly when nobody has yet announced whether there's to be a large party for the visitor . . . but we'll see.

To Stay at White House and Blair House . . .

Coming here on the invitation of President Roosevelt, Dr. Lopez will be another on the list of foreign notables to call Blair House "home" for most of their Washington sojourn. He will also follow the usual pattern of spending one night at the White House and dining there, before moving across the street for the remainder of his visit. Unlike the chiefs of state who have preceded him, however, Dr. Lopez will be making a return trip here and will meet once more many officials with whom he conferred when he came here in 1934, just before he was elected President of Colombia the first time.

Most Colombians will tell you, proudly, that the first Lopez regime was a South American counterpart of the North American New Deal; that Lopez himself rewrote the labor laws, revised the constitution and put across workers' compensation, collective bargaining and the eight-hour day. Furthermore, it was under his direction that Bogota gained prestige as the "Athens" of South America and added to its suburbs a "University City," where campus life is very much like that in any similar community in the United States.

Is Succeeding His Successor . . .

As to the facts of Lopez's life, other than his political career—well, here are a few: He was born in 1885; attended school in Bogota; had charge of a coffee concern for a time and then became a bank manager and newspaper owner. After the Banco Lopez failed, he went into politics and was later sent as Minister to London. Then he returned home to serve in a number of official capacities before he was elected President in 1934. He served until 1938, when Dr. Eduardo Santos (who visited Washington that same year) became President. Now Lopez is succeeding his successor.

One of the Colombian President's closest friends up until a few years ago was Colombian Ambassador Turbay; but the warmth between them cooled perceptibly last year when word got around that the Santos faction was backing Turbay as Lopez's opponent. Seems, however, that Turbay diplomatically bowed out of the Presidential picture in time for Lopez to take over the field, and a friendship that was in danger of being politically shattered got on firm footing once more.

Both Lopez and Turbay are members of the Liberal Party, and both are regarded as among the most brilliant men in Colombian political life. Turbay, as you probably know, is the youngest Ambassador in Washington; yet, long before he presented his credentials in this country at the age of 40, he had held almost every choice appointive position that his government had to offer. Educated as a doctor of medicine, he went into politics shortly after his college career was finished and then served as Colombian envoy to Peru and Belgium before he was appointed to the post here.

Miss Dorothy Mildred Nicholson Is Married To Harrison Bates at Evening Ceremony

Church Choir Precedes Wedding Party at At All Saints' Church

A wedding of wide interest in Washington, Maryland, and South Carolina took place last evening when Miss Dorothy Mildred Nicholson became the bride of Harrison Bates. With the Rev. Henry Teller Cocke officiating, the ceremony was read at 8 p. m. in All Saints Episcopal Church. An outstanding popular member of the younger set, the former Miss Nicholson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson. Mr. Bates is the son of Mrs. Corinne Tucker Bates and the late Robert D. Bates of Greenville, S. C.

The church choir walked ahead of the bridal party singing the weeding march. The bride, who was escorted by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin and alencon lace ending in a wide circular train with medallions of the lace appliqued on it. Her ivory net and Rose point lace fell from a coronet of lace and she carried orchids and sprays of bouvardia.

Aileen Harris Is Maid of Honor

Miss Aileen Havlin Harris served as maid of honor wearing a gown of chartreuse lace with a fitted bodice and flaring skirt. Her bouquet was of gladioli and delphinium.

William T. Bates, of Greenville, S. C., brother of the bridegroom, served as best man and ushers included the bride's two brothers, U. S. N., David Brown Nicholson, U. S. N.; David Brown Nicholson, and Jennings Bailey, jr., George Martin and Ellison D. Smith, jr.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents on Newlands Street. Mrs. Nicholson received with the young couple wearing a pearl gray marquisette lace gown and a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Bates had selected a powder blue chantilly lace with a black chiffon skirt. Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Ellison D. Smith, wife of Senator Smith; Representative Katherine Edgar Byron, Mrs. E. Brooke Lee, Mrs. Harold Brooks, Mrs. William Camp, Mrs. Jennings Baley, jr., Mrs. Emma W. P. Slack, Mrs. Edwin A. Merritt, Mrs. George Huguely and the bride's aunts Mrs. Bertha Rodrick and Mrs. Forest De Lore Van Valin. Charles Edgar Davis, uncle of the bride and Benjamin Franklin Davis came down from New York City to attend the ceremony as did Miss Virginia Fay.

To Make Home In Washington

When the cauple left for their wedding trip the bride wore a beige gabardine suit with a green hat and accessories. On their return they will live at the Dorchester house.

The bride was graduated from Holton-Arms School and National University of Law and made her debut here several years ago. She is a member of Phi Delta Legal Fraternity and a member of the National Intercollegiate Flying Club, having earned her solo wings. She is a lineal descendant of Capt. Jesse Davis and Baron Joist Hite, the first settler of the Shenandoah Valley, Va., and a great niece of the late Senator Henry Gassoway Davis. She is a member of the D. A. R., her family having been long identified with the history of Maryland and Virginia.

Mr. Bates was graduated from Alabama Polytechnic Institute and received his E. E. degree from Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. He received his LL. B. and M.P.L. degrees from National University and is a member of Kappa Sigma Fraternity and S. A. R.

Costa Rican President's Wife Is Feted at Afternoon Party

Minister and Wife Hosts at Gala Fete for Senora de Guardia

By Carolyn Bell

Extravagant South of the Border hospitality was sampled by some 300 or so diplomats, officials and residentials yesterday afternoon between 6 and 8 o'clock when the Minister of Costa Rica and Senora de Fernandez entertained at a party at the Mayflower honoring the handsome brunette wife of the President, Senora de Calderon Guardia.

Senora de Calderon Guardia, who has been visiting here for a short while, reports that she is leaving the Capital shortly for a stay of several weeks at a nearby beach resort, before returning home. Yesterday she wore a black gown, with a split skirt, and filmy net top. Orchids completed her ensemble. Senora de Fernandez had chosen a white dinner frock as had her pretty daughter, Leda, who was in the receiving line.

Greek Minister Is 'Relaxing Now'

The party was given in the Chinese room of the Mayflower and shortly after 6 o'clock the room was jammed with guests overflowing into the place where a sumptous buffet was arranged. Groups sat at little tables sipping their drinks and enjoying the turkey, creamed chicken on pancakes, ice cream or caviar.

"Oh I am just relaxing now," twinkled the Greek Minister, Cimon P. Diamantopoulos when someone asked him how he was enjoying the hectic Capital. All Washington is still discussing the elegant reception given in honor of King George of Greece. Mme. Diamantopoulos was wearing a black and white print frock yesterday with touches of green. She chatted with Mrs. Thomas Burke who later was joined by her husband. Mme. Hurban stopped to say a few words to the Indian Agent General and Lady Bajpai who came in midway during the party. Lady Bajpai was gowned in a sari of white and silver.

"Congratulations," said someone—and the Cuban Ambassador, Aurelio Concheso beamed. Senora de Concheso is returning today from Doctors Hospital with their brand-new son. Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson was greeting friends here and there. Dr. Fernanda A. Fournier, attache of the legation, was on hand to see that things ran smoothly.

Mrs. Tom Connally Among Guests

The Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, allows as how he is so busy with the Inter-American Defense Commission coupled with his diplomatic duties that he seldom, if ever, has a chance for his favorite form of relaxation—bridge. Mrs. Tom Conally chatted with a group and then dashed off to meet her Senator husband.

The Commercial Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell were accompanied by their daughter, Senora de Gacitua. "Noni," as she is known to her many good friends here, will remain in the Capital for a month before joining her husband, who has been transferred to New Orleans. Salvador Duhart of the Mexican Embassy, was here, there and everywhere greeting friends.

Many 'Young Latins' Attend Party

A foursome seated about a table together were Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Castro, Hector Castro, jr., and pretty Dolly Lagoa. Fan and Alex have returned from a two-weeks trip to Virginia Beach and both were nicely browned. Stopping at the table to greet the four were the Mexican Ambassador's two sons, Luis and Pancho Castillo Najera. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Minor—she was the former Luisa Teetz—were being greeted on all sides as they are just back from their honeymoon. Any number of the young "Latins" attended the party, and among them were Senorita Gloriella Calva, Senority Elena Castro, Senorita Ofelia Davila, Edgar Jiminez and the Secretary of the Dominican Legation, Dr. Horacio Vicioso.

Diplomats and Officials Throng Mayflower Between 6 and 8

Wife of Ecuadorean Envoy to Leave Soon

The Ambassador of Ecuador and and Senora de Alfaro were there and Senora de Alfaro plans to leave shortly for one of her three homes—this time Panama. She says she feels like an American, and considers both Ecuador and Panama home. The Ambassador of Venezuela was in the throng, as was Senora de De Bayle, wife of the Minister of Nicaragua, who was prettily gowned in a bright green ensemble.

The Minister of Honduras (who was hiding behind dark glasses) was accompanied by Senora de Caceres. Mrs. Thomas Dawson sat with a group and chatted over her food. The Minister of Thailand, Senj Pramoj, was there, as were the Minister of Canada and Mrs. Leighton McCarthy, who were surrounded by a group from the moment they walked in the room. The Minister of Haiti and Mme. Dennis were seated at one of the small tables enjoying their food, and many, many others were there.

TODAY, at the stroke of noon, all the retail stores in America will begin a concentrated drive for the greatest sale this country has ever seen.

For fifteen minutes, in every department, on every floor, we will sell only war stamps or take orders for a bond for Victory—eloquent appreciation of the work of our armed forces.

It's the greatest investment you can make, with a long life, and a value too precious to be expressed in words.

Come to town today and help us make this the greatest fifteen minutes in the history of retailing. Come help us show our government that the retail stores of America serving you day after day, year in and year out, can sell war stamps and bonds with the same eagerness as dresses and perfume . . . with the same pleasant customer reaction . . . with the same desire to serve.

Members of the American Women's Voluntary Services will drop their arduous duties for fifteen minutes at noon today and be here in our store to assist us. By the way—have you ever thought of joining the AWVS.

Retrial Refused

Ewing Gets 8-24 Years In Rape Case

Orman W. Ewing, 55-year-old former politician, accused of raping a young Government worker, yesterday lost the first phase of his fight for a new trial as Justice James W. Morris sentenced him to 8 to 24 years in prison, denied his motion for a retrial, and refused to release him on bond pending an appeal of the case.

In an impassioned plea for the former Democratic national committeeman, James J. Laughlin, his attorney, said that there were several "substantiated" questions of law that would be put immediately before the United States Court of Appeals. He asked that in view of this, Ewing be freed on bond until the appellate tribunal can review the case.

Ewing was convicted last February, but now claims his attorneys at the trial weer incompetent.

Following denial of the motion for a retrial, Ewing consented to immediate sentencing. As he stood before the bar, his wife and daughters rose also from their seats among the spectators. At the counsel table was the defendant's son, Lowell Ewing.

Laughlin said he would attempt to place the case before the appellate court today, but requested Ewing's release on the ground that Ewing's advice was needed in preparation of the appeal.

Taking of Testimony Is Begun in Second 'Sniper' Trial Here

A District Court jury of seven men and five women—finally assembled after six days of examination—began hearing Government testimony in District Court yesterday against John Eugene Eklund, 27-year-old former student charged with the "sniper" slaying of a Negro youth in October of 1940.

Eklund, who was convicted and sentenced to die last year, but won a new trial, took an apparent interest in the proceedings as several witnesses testified concerning identification of the body, the number of shots fired, and the events immediately following the shooting.

Among yesterday's witnesses were Merle C. Cole, a morgue employe at the time of the shooting; Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, assistant deputy coroner; Dr. Richard Franklin Hawkins, former Emergency Hospital interne; Michael Sternik, Washington Gas Light Co. guard, and Wesley Buchanan, jr., and Victor Whitlock, who drove up to the scene of the crime a few minutes after hearing the shots.

Identification Error Hinted

Defense Attorney Harry T. Whelan sought to show throughout his cross-examination of the witnesses that the night of October 15, 1940, was cold and dark, thus indicating possible error in the identification of Eklund as the slayer of Hyland McClaine, the 17-year-old Negro victim.

Buchanan's testimony, however, attacked this contention. Buchanan said it was warm enough that night for him to drive with the canvas top of his automobile rolled back. He knew, he said, that there must have been a full moon out, since he had noted one a few nights before. A street lamp on the corner, he added, also helped light the scene.

Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray announced in his opening statement to the jury that the Government would introduce as evidence a revolver, recently unearthed in a Baltimore park, and show that it was the gun owned by Eklund and used in the shooting McClaine.

How Police Found Gun

Police were led to the discovery of the weapon, Murray said, by Marvin Richard Harlow, a prisoner who struck up an acquaintance with Eklund while both were in jail. Harlow, it was said, had told one of the assistant United States attorneys that Eklund had offered him the use of the gun so that police would be led to believe the "sniper" was still at large. Murray said the gun was found wrapped in a newspaper dated October 31, 1940—15 days after the shooting.

McClaine's death ended a series of shootings—all with Negro victims and resulting in the death of four—that terrorized Washington Negroes during the fall of 1940. McClaine was shot in the back of the head while walking with his girl friend, Mildred Washington, 17, of 2323 Virginia Avenue, along Rock Creek Parkway near the K Street viaduct.

Hundley Case

Tires Bore 'O. K.' Mark, Witness Says

Further Government testimony was scheduled for hearing today in the District Court trial of Hiram Ben Hundley, Washington tire merchant accused of violation of an OPA tire rationing regulation.

Among yesterday's witnesses were representatives of the three District firms to whom Hundley is said to have sold new tires as used. The companies are the Star Publishing Co., the Premier Purchasing Co. and the Diamond Service Co.

Under questioning by Assistant United States Attorney John L. Laskey, Herman S. Cole, assistant superintendent of the newspaper firm, said his company had bought tires from Hundley and that he had noted they were marked, "O. K.—J. M. C." The defense contends these marks were made by an official inspector to indicate the tires had been used.

Purchases Indirect, Royer Says

Testimony by John H. Royer, president of the Premier company, revealed that purchases from Hundley by that firm were not made directly but through the Radio Cab Co. He said he had merely signed a check for tires turned over to him by Radio. Harry Trainor, general manager of Radio, who negotiated the transaction, is in the Navy.

About 400 tires were purchased from Hundley by the Diamond Service Co., it was testified by Edward J. Abner, service manager.

Tool Engineers Elect

Potomac Chapter No. 48, American Society of Tool Engineers, last night announced election of officers for 1942. They are Raymond C. Harbst, U. S. Naval Gun Factory, chairman; Ernest M. Seifert, U. S. Naval Torpedo Station, first vice chairman; Harold P. Berry, Naval Gun Factory, second vice chairman; Frank J. Rawson, Bureau of Standards, secretary, and Edward A. Peterson, Naval Torpedo Station, treasurer.

Desperate Appeals Feature Start of Extended Drive for Rubber Scrap

An estimated total of 400,000 or 450,000 tons of rubber in the Nation-wide scrap rubber drive may be realized by grace of the extra ten days proclaimed yesterday—but even this won't be enough, it was pointed out last night.

This figure, which will still be 25,000 tons short of the Army rubber requirements, can only be reached if there is no letdown in the present average yield of 17,000 tons per day. And officials admit that the first collections, however disappointing they may be, were done in the first flush of enthusiasm. What can be collected from now on, they say, will just be the leavings.

Make Desperate Appeal

In the effort to double the present total of 219,000 tons, Administration spokesmen and local salvage boards are making a desperate appeal that the whole Nation be recombed for any stores of rubber overlooked or held back during the original drive.

President Roosevelt ordered every Federal agency in Washington and across the country to turn in every possible ounce of rubber for the campaign.

Report Due Today

Following the President's order, Budget Director Harold Smith asked Goverment heads that items such as floor mats, seat mats, wornout rubber stamps, trunk mats in Government cars, be turned into collection depots without charge.

A building by building survey of Federal structures to determine what rubber mats can be given to the scrap rubber drive has been going on for the past two weeks, W. E. Reynolds, superintendent of public buildings, said last night.

Group superintendents will report on their survey today, indicating which mats could be spared without impairing public safety, and which could be replaced with mats of hemp or straw or other substitutes. They will be told to redoube their efforts during the next 10 days, McReynolds said.

A.A.A. Sponsors Contest

William R. Boyd, chairman of the Petroleum Industry War Council sounded the only optimistic note. "We feel confident that the people of American are going to bring in a whale of a lot more rubber before July 10, and they are going to do it, too, to show the President and the boys out in Australia, in India, in Alaska, in Iceland, or wherever they may be, that the citizens of the United States are themselves true blue and standing behind them 100 per cent plus," said Mr. Boyd.

A contest sponsored by the District branch of the American Automobile Association is the only new approach the District Salvage Committee has in mind for the next 10 days. Otherwise, the plan is to start all over again, getting collectors and agencies to make the same rounds they made last week for anything that might have been overlooked.

The A. A. A. will announce today details of the $100 worth of prizes in war bonds and sporting goods that will be offered to the boys of the A. A. A. safety patrol turning in the most rubber next week.

Looking past the rubber drive, the OPA last night announced a Nation-wide inventory of all serviceable tires held by dealers, garages and finance companies. The first report, to be filed with local rationing boards before July 15, must show quantities of passenger car and truck tires and tubes, tractor and farm equipment tires and all other types of tires not mounted on vehicles and in stock as of June 30.

Music, Drama, Athletics Offered At Play Center

A program of play facilities offering Washingtonians something to do after working hours was announced yesterday by the Central Community Center, Thirteenth and Clifton Streets Northwest.

For those who would like to play in an orchestra, or would like to play an instrument, Don P. McAdoo, conductor of the Civic Orchestra, holds auditions 15 minutes before rehearsals. This group meets every Tuesday at 8 p. m. There are no fees. The musicians play for the good time they have doing it.

A dramatic group, the Players Club, is at present devoting its time to radio plays Tryouts for both stage and radio work are held every Tuesday and Friday at 8 p. m.

The All States Mixed Chorus, composed of folks all over the United States, gathers Wednesdays at 8 p. m. The Washington Choral Society studies and sings the more classical music. Auditions are held every Tuesday at 7:45 p. m.

Other activities offered are tap, ballroom and square dancing, chess, shuffleboard, bridge and calisthenics.

Verdict in Robbery Slaying Is Upheld

William T. Mumforde, 20-year-old Negro cook, lost a plea in U. S. Court of Appeals Monday for reversal of his conviction of first degree murder in the fatal shooting February 15, 1941, of Fanny Cohen, 62, in her dress shop at 1512 U Street Northwest.

Attorneys for Mumforde contended that the youth had entered the shop intending to rob, but had changed his mind. The gun went off accidentally, they claimed, after he had tried to frighten Mrs. Cohen so that he could escape.

The court based its opinion on the testimony of an eyewitness who had said Mumforde's entry into the store and the shooting were virtually "simultaneous."

300 of Capital's Boys Off to Camp For Two Weeks

Nearly 300 Washington boys began free two-week vacations yesterday at camps sponsored by the Boys Club of Washington and the Metropolitan Police Boys Club and 200 more looked forward to July 10 when they will begin a similar holiday at the camp sponsored by the Volunteers of America.

At the Metropolitan Police Camp near Suitland, Md., 180 city-bound youngsters will shake free the summer heat shackles—to be succeeded in a fortnight by a new batch of 180. Sergeant Forrest Binswanger is the director.

Boys Club of Washington sent 100 boys to Camp Reeder, under direction of Arthur Fyfe. The same two-week rotation schedule will be followed by this organization.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Federal Pay Raises Out Until Sept. 1

Federal workers can forget about pay raises until September 1. Congress yesterday approved a joint resolution that extends until September 1 the overtime pay provisions of the Army and Navy. Under these provisions the higher-paid technical and professional Navy employes will continue to be paid time and a half after 40 hours. Employes doing similar work for the Army must work overtime without additional pay. There are countless other injustices in the bill.

This resolution will take the heat off the Administration's plan to pay time and a half to employes paid under $3800. However, too much blame can't be laid to Congress for failure to pass the bill. If the employe unions—chiefly the postal groups—could have got together, some sort of a general pay raise bill would have been passed and all the employes below $3800, instead of half of them, would be getting higher salaries.

At long last, and no more ifs, buts, and maybes, the three Interior agencies—Office of Indian Affairs, Fish and Wildlife Service, and the National Park Service—will be moved to Chicago. Only small liaison staffs will be kept here and no other exceptions will be made. The Indian office will start to move on July 15, W. E. Reynolds, commissioner of Public Buildings, yesterday told Secretary Ickes. Fish and Wildlife will start moving on August 16 and the park service on August 28. Nearly seven months ago the President ordered the bureaus moved. within 60 days and Interior officials have been scrapping about it since.

Ickes Gets Some Action

Labor Department won't work on July 4 . . . The Senate now has authority to confirm antitrust and special attorneys at Justice that are paid $7500 and more . . . A slow-poke outfit is War Production's Division of Conservation, which was supposed to handle the rubber scrap drive, but it was given to Secretary Ickes, who can get things done. Chief of the WPB division is Lessing Rosenwald who is Donald Nelson's former boss. The division is something of a flop and the resignation of Rosenwald is being rumored . . . Before the emergency it was estimated that there were 5000 attorneys in the Federal service. If the full Office of Price Administration budget is voted it'll have a staff of 535 attorneys here and 2222 in the field. But the full appropriation won't be voted.

The Civil Service Commission yesterday expressed the hope that all departments would follow Navy's lead in eliminating paperwork and it backed it up with a pledge that it too would reward rather than penalize employes who reduce work. In a letter to Secretary Knox, the three commissioners admitted that sometimes narrow-minded supervisors are "so lacking in proper appreciation of what needs to be done to win the war that they do attempt to penalize" employes who reduce work. The commissioners congratulated the secretary and offered their assistance in carrying out his program.

Membership of employe election committees: Tariff Commission, Edna V. Connelly, James Jarrett, Rita Cavanaugh, Thomas Joyce, and P. W. Gates; NLRB, Marcia Hertzmark, John Killens, and William Guffey; National Gallery of Art, S. P. Eagleton, C. B. Walstrom and Lamont Moore . . . Civil Service tests: custodial officer, $1860 and junior public health nurse, $1860 . . . The President has extended the life of the Board of Investigation and Research until September 18, 1944. The board is supposed to investigate transportation problems. So are several other Federal agencies . . . Bureau of Mines appointments: Stephen M. Shelton, regional engineer of the Eastern regional office at College Park, Md. John J. Forbes heads the bureau's new wartime mineral production security division. His assistants will be William J. Fene and Simon H. Ash.

Rent Control to Start Today in Radford Area

Radford, Va., June 30 (AP).—Rent control will become effective in the Radford-Pulaski area tomorrow, with rents being rolled back to the level of April 1, 1941.

This was announced today by John N. Goldsmith, area rent director, and at the same time he disclosed that the area rent office would be established in Radford instead of in Pulaski as had been contemplated.

The Radford-Pulaski area embraces the city of Radford and the counties of Montgomery and Pulaski. Erection of the Radford Ordnance Works brought a large influx of workers to this area, causing heavy demands for dwellings and a consequent increase in rents.

Practice Proves Monotonous

St. Louis (A.P.).—The Fireman's Band is disbanding after 20 years. Twice-a-week practice sessions with few opportunities to play proved too monotonous.

Even more depressing, said Fire Chief Joseph W. Morgan, was the fact the major activity of the group in recent years was the playing of dirges at the funeral of firemen.

Well, It's an Idea

Salt Lake City (A.P.).—Maybe your rent isn't so bad. A Salt Lake man paid $10 for one night—in the city jail.

He asked to be admitted for the night. Then the desk sergeant sniffed.

In the morning the man was fined $10 for intoxication.

Montgomery Approves Boy Farmers

Board Votes Use Of School Buildings As Dormitories For Young Hands

Montgomery County's junior farmers were assured of ten weeks' trial yesterday when the Board of Montgomery County Commissioners voted 3 to 2 to appropriate maintenanee funds for the project.

The plan provides for use of four county high schools as dormitories and work centers for a group of nearly 150 Washington high school boys who will work on county farms at 25 cents an hour as part of a program to meet the lack of farm labor in the county.

County Commissioners John Oxley and R. W. Farmer opposed appropriating the money for the project, declaring that they did not believe the public funds should be used for the benefit of one class. They declared that they believed the farmers should pay an additional ten cents an hour for the boys' wages to care for the transportation and supervision expenses.

Commissioner Thomas Earle Hampton, who interrupted his honeymoon to be present for the meeting, said that he believed it proper to make the effort to save vitally important crops as the county's contribution to the war effort. Commmissioner O. W. Roby moved adoption and Commissioner Walter P. Johnson seconded the motion. Commissioner Hampton broke the tie by voting in favor of the motion.

The resolution provided for continuance of the project for ten weeks at a weekly cost of $496. The funds provide for camp directors and bus drivers' salaries. Officials appointed were:

Poolesville High, Herbert Price, director; James W. White, assistant director, and Gorman Butler, bus driver. Gaithersburg High—Abell Norris, director; Harvey Beall, assistant, and A. W. Glagett, bus driver. Damascus High, Albert Warthen, director; Albert Bender, assistant, and George Boyer, bus driver. Sherwood High at Sandy Spring, Owen Knight, director; C. A. Michael, assistant, and William Ricketts, bus driver.

Provisions for cafeteria attendants also were made. The boys pay $5 a week for room and board from their earnings.

The commissioners voted a holiday for county employes for the Fourth of July. All county officers will be closed Saturday all day, including the Commodity Rationing Board. Emergency Policemen Joseph W. Ward, David S. Clothier and Robert Lee Waters were reappointed for another 60-day period under the emergency police law.

The commissioners reappointed William H. Prescott of Chevy Chase, Md., to a six-year term as a member of the board of assessments at a salary of $3000 per annum. Prescott's term runs out tomorrow.

Purchase of a 16-millimeter sound motion picture projector for use in showing civilian defense films to local groups as part of the work of the visual education committee of public relations and information service at a cost of $124.16 was approved by the commissioners. The machine has been loaned to the county defense group for months. The commissioners also authorized purchase of 2000 triangular white flags bearing the red letters "CD" for use in marking emergency vehicles in blackouts at a cost of $500 and 500 additional armbands for air-raid wardens. An issue of $300,000 tax anticipation certificates was sold to the Farmers Banking and Trust Co. of Rockville at an interest rate of 1¾ per cent.

Forsythe Files For Chief Judge Of Fifth Circuit

Baltimore, June 30 (AP).—Judge William H. Forsythe, chief judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, which comprises Anne Arundel, Howard and Carroll Counties, today filed a certificateof candidacy for election as chief judge of the circuit.

Judge Forsythe was appointed chief judge of the circuit in February, 1941, by Governor O'Conor after Judge F. Neal Parker of Westminster had retired from that position. He will reach retirement age in May, 1944.

Judge Ridgely P. Melvin, associate judge in the Fifth Circuit, announced recently his candidacy for the chief judgeship and received the support of the Anne Arundel County Bar Association.

The association lited Judge Forsythe's "distinguished career" but added "he will be riosely approaching the compulsory retirement age for judges, having less than 18 months to serve after said election.

Judge Forsythe had no comment today on the bar group's support of Judge Melvin.

Orchardist Files In State Senate Race

Shepherdstown, W. Va., June 30.—George McKee, orchardist, farmer and World War veteran, today filed his certificate at Charleston for the Democratic nomination for tSate Senate from this (Sixteenth) district, subject to the August 4 primary.

McKee, a former member of the Jefferson County Court for a period by appointment to fill out a term in 1940, is at present a member of the County Draft Board.

Mt. St. Mary's to Help Train Military Fliers

Emmitsburg, Md., June 30 (AP). Mount St. Mary's College has been added to the list of schools to which the Army and Navy will send potential service flyers, the Right Rev. John L. Sheridan, president of the institution, announced today.

The program will be started next week at the college when 25 young men are to be sent to Emmitsburg by the Navy Department.

Artist Who Cannot Use Hands Ably Wields Brush With Teeth

INDOMITABLE Miss Gunhild Jacobsson, of Takoma Park, Md., paints by holding the brush in her mouth

Undaunted by a nervous disorder which deprives her of the full use of her hands, Miss Gunhild Jakobsson, Takoma Park (Md.) artist, learned to paint by holding the brush with her teeth.

When she was 2 years old she was stricken with whooping cough which left her a semi-invalid. At the age of 12 she proved she could be an artist despite her handicap. One day she took a pencil in her mouth and sketched the family pet, a dog, and then water-colored the picture with a paint brush held between her teeth.

Since then the artist has completed several hundred paintings, most of them original sketches of animals and nature subjects. She illustrated "Black Beauty," the novel by Anna Sewell, from cover to cover. Her latest picture is a portrait of Rosie, her English pointer. This she gave to her father, Herman Jakobsson, a patent attorney who specializes in foreign work, as a Father's Day gift.

Several of her works were exhibited at the outdoor art fair recently held in Franklin Park, Washington. The Phillips Art School also has exhibited her pictures.

Art is not the only accomplishment of Miss Jakobsson. She is able to typewrite with her right hand. Through a correspondence course she has received degrees from Columbia University in astronomy and mathematics.

It takes the young woman three to four hours to sketch and paint a picture and she has never attempted any except in water color.

Arlington County Bureau of The Post, Arlington, Va. Tel. OXford 0509.

A meeting of Arlington County merchants will be held at 3 p. m. today in the Chamber of Commerce offices to complete plans for participation in the observance of Retailer for Victory Month.

County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan, lauding the enthusiasm displayed by merchants, said, "It is my sincere wish that the retail businessmen of this county devote every possible energy to America's great retailers' victory drive.

"It is said of Arlington that we are expected to lead and I have every confidence that the retail merchants will cooperate fully with this great contribution on the home front. No group has the confidence of the people more than the retail merchants. They are salesmen and should devote that salesmanship to this vital drive."

Woodyard to Lead Police Force Again

Judge Walter T. McCarthy yesterday reappointed the following officers of the Arlington County police force for a term of one year:

Police Chief Harry L. Woodyard, Capt. Hugh C. Jones, Lieut. James J. Scott, Sergts. T. H. Miller, James D. East and J. H. Marcey. Detectives John Sanders, C. B. Pressley and John E. Conway, Officers M. F. Ward, H. A. Barnett, Walter Bell, J. J. Berry, H. R. Carr, R. S. Cole, George Coppage, Louis Elliott, Raymond Crack, J. E. Cullins, Lester Hager, O. R. Howell, Jackie Snoots, Elmer Redmon, Frank Keys, L. L. King, A. D. Langley, H. E. Mason, Dudley Rector, J. C. Shepherd, Lynn Smith, Curtis Spencer, Douglas Topley, William West, Henry Willett, John Wise, N. S. Carson, E. G. Duncan, Frank Palmer, Leroy Barber, Walter Kadel, G. C. Harrell and A. H. Richards.

Substitute officers, all newly appointed, are C. W. Becker, James Laycock, C. R. James, R. W. Weekley, Russell Runyon, R. P. Smith, G. W. Kemp, W. W. Reynolds, B. E. Keyes, W. H. Dinsmore and Leo J. Densmore.

The Arlington County Civic Federation, through its executive committee, Monday night commended the action of the county board in opposing the erection of low-cost dwellings on Lee Boulevard by the Federal Government and reiterated its previous action that such dwellings, if erected, should be constructed elsewhere.

Chairman Edmund D. Campbell of the county board last Saturday stressed that the board fully intended to cooperate with the Federal Government in finding other housing sites in this emergency.

Rite Set Friday For Dedication Of Camp Pickett

Camp Pickett, Va., June 30 (AP).—Senator Harry F. Byrd is expected to head a delegation of State and Federal officials who will attend the formal dedication of Camp Pickett, one of the Army's newest camps, on July 3.

Governor Darden, a Marine Corps flier in World War I, and Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding general of the Army Third Corps Area, will be among the principal speakers at the ceremony.

The dedication will mark the reactivation of the Seventy-ninth Division, famous World War fighting unit, and the seventy-ninth anniversary of General Pickett's epic charge at Gettysburg. The ceremony will begin at 3 p. m., almost the exact moment when General Pickett began his charge against the Federal positions at Cemetery Hill.

Troops of the medical replamecent training center marched 45 miles last week from their previous base at Camp Lee to their new cantonment here.

Garden Club Elects

Mrs. E. H. Coulson has been elected president of the Arlington (Va.) Garden Club. Other officers are Mrs. W. M. Mattice, vice president; Mrs. Homer Strange, secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Floyd McCord, corresponding secretary.

Edith Hallowell, Former Principal Of Rockland, Dies

Miss Edith Hallowell, 82, a lifelong resident of the Ashton and Sandy Spring neighborhoods, Montgomery County, Md., died yesterday in the Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring. She had suffered a serious fall at her home in Ashton Friday.

She was a daughter of the late Henry Hallowell, who established Rockland, a school for girls at Sandy Spring, and was principal many years. She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Washington B. Chichester, Olney, and Mrs. Newton Stabler, Spencerville, and two brothers, Robert M. Hallowell, Elizabeth, La., and Elgar Hallowell, Evanston, Ill. She was an aunt of Jack Bentley, former big league baseball star.

The funeral will take place at 11 a. m. today from the Friends Meeting House at Sandy Spring Burial will be in the Friends Cemetery, Sandy Spring.

Benefit Card Party

The Sodality of St. Agnes' Catholic Church, Cherrydale, Va., will sponsor the first of a series of monthly benefit card parties today at 2 p. m. in the church hall. The proceeds will go to the school fund. Mrs. Jerome K. Holloway wil lserve as hostess.

Alexandria Votes 10% Pay Raises

Police, Firemen, Health Departmen, But Not Chiefs, Are Affected

Pay increases of 10 per cent for members of the Alexandria police, fire and health departments were approved last night by the Alexandria City Council. The boost will affect all members except department boards. It will add an expenditure of $15,000 a year.

Councilman Paul L. Delaney said the proposal was made to meet the added cost of living because of the war and to avert loss of personnel to the armed forces or more lucrative positions.

Plans for $3200 Dog Pound Under Way

Construction of a new and adequate dog pound for Alexandria will be started as soon as final plans for the structure are completed, City Manager Carl Budwesky said yesterday. The sum of $3200 already has been appropriated by the city council for the project.

Budwesky said the pound would be erected on a city-owned site off route 1, near Four Mile Run.

The present pound, the object of numerous complaints, is situated at the Municipal Stadium on River Road.

Plans for the pound have been drawn by Dennis H. Cahill, assistant to the building inspector, and provide for a lethal gas chamber for the execution of unlicensed and diseased animals; an inoculation laboratory and a series of stalls in which various types of dogs can be segregated to afford adequate protection from spread of rabies or other diseases. The pound will be under the direct supervision of Dr. W. A. Browne, city health officer.

Complaints against the existing pound have been intensified in the past two months as the result of a city-wide campaign to round up unlicensed and unmuzzled dogs in an eort to curb a growing outbreak of rabies. Numerous citizens have complained that dogs confined in the structure have been "herded together like sheep" without provisions for segregation.

Tuberculosis Clinics Today, Tomorow

The Alexandria Tuberculosis Association will sponsor the first in a series of July chest clinics today from 2 to 4 p. m. at the City Health Department for white applicants. A second clinic for Negroes will be conducted tomorrow afternoon.

Officials of the association have called attention to the change in the time of the clinics, held heretofore from 3 to 5. The change has been necessitated by the fact that all municipal departments are now operating on a summer schedule which provides for closing at 4 p. m., and the present schedule of clinics will remain in effect until September.

Dr. George Lemeshewsky will supervise examinations for white applicants today, while Dr. C. F. West will direct the Negro clinic tomorrow. The supervising physicians will be assisted by members of the regular health department nursing staff.

Playgrounds Mark Family Day

"Family Day will be observed at Alexandria playgrounds today, with special prizes to be awarded to the largest family groups participating in regularly scheduled playground activities throughout the day.

Miss Lucy Houston, city playground supervisor, said yesterday that prizes would be awarded to the largest family group at each individual playground, and that "grand prizes" would be awarded for the largest groups reported throughout the city for white and Negro playgrounds. There are seven white playgrounds and two Negro grounds in the city.

Members of families reporting to the play centers must participate in some regular playground activity in order to qualify their groups for prizes, she pointed out.

The program has been arranged in an effort to arouse parents' interest in the playground program, she said. Adults are eligible to compete as well as children.

Woelfel Enters Race For Attorney's Post

Annapolis, Md., June 30 (AP).—George B. Woelfel, asserting the taxes he paid last year were more than the salary he's get if elected, filed today as a candidate for the Anne Arundel County State's attorney post, subject to the Democratic primary elections, September 8.

Woelfel is president of the Anne Arundel County Bar Association.

"Neither myself nor my opponent (Marvin I. Anderson, incumbent) need the office as a means of livelihood," Woelfel said, "so consequently I do not propose to engage in mud-slinging contests to acquire it."

"In fact," he added, "the taxes I paid last year were more than the State's attorney's salary."

Blackout Violator Fined $15

Silver Spring Shopkeeper is First Prosecuted Under Ordinance

Jack Stein, proprietor of the Silver Spring Men's Shop, 8215 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring, Md., pleaded guilty yesterday to violation of the Montgomery County (Md.) blackout ordinance and was fined $15 and costs by Trial Magistrate Ralph G. Shure in Silver Spring Police Court.

Stein was the first person to be charged with violation of the ordinance, which was adopted shortly after Pearl Harbor and was the first county blackout ordinance in the Washington area. In pleading guilty, he said he had forgotten a 40-watt lamp in the rear of his store.

Air Raid Warden Elias Palozos, who observed the light, said it burned all night June 17, the night of the 10 p. m. to dawn blackout. He said he had told the defendant about the regulations several times. Assistant State's Attorney Alfred D. Noyes prosecuted the case. Stein was arrested by Detective Corporal Frank Lane of the county police. The maximum fine under the ordinance is $50.

Political Pot Boils In Montgomery Co.

Montgomery County's political pot began bubbling merrily yesterday with a meeting of Republican County leaders at Rockville and the announcement that the County Congress of the United Democratic Organization will meet July 14 at Rockville to indorse candidates.

County Commissioner Thomas Earle Hampton, candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Senator, who is chairman of the County Congress, announced the date of the meeting, anxiously awaited by county Democrats for weeks.

The County Congress indorsement is the final word in the campaign for Democratic nominations. Candidates for county offices, State offices and the post of Representative from the Sixth Maryland District, will be passed on. The meeting will be held at 8 p. m. at the old Richard Montgomery High School auditorium in Rockville.

Names of a number of Democratic candidates have been noised about but they will not be officially supported by the organization until after the 1000 members of the congress meet and pass upon their qualifications. It is expected that little trouble will be experienced in securing approval for the candidacy of Lieut. Col. E. Brooke Lee, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Representative, and for Commissioner Hampton's candidacy for House of Delegates.

Rotarians Fete T. E. Hampton And His Bride

Montgomery County Commissioner Thomas E. Hampton and his bride, married Sunday at Winston-Salem, N. C., were feted yesterday by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rotary Club at the Columbia Country Club.

Mrs. Hampton, the former Miss Helen Branham, was presented with an orchid and a rolling pin, but her spouse evened the score by accepting a gift of a baseball bat. Mrs. Hampton was entertained at a luncheon given by Mrs. Curtis Walker across the hall from the Rotary meeting.

The Hamptons attended a wedding breakfast given in their honor by Mrs. J. Eliot Middleton. They returned from their wedding trip after a brief visit with the commissioner's parents, Col. and Mrs. Thomas E. Hampton, at Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Hampton will continue her duties at the Tupelo (Miss.) Hospital until fall.

Rent Director Opens Office Today

Century-Old Poplar Falls in Thurmont

Thurmont, Md., June 30 (AP).—The great silver poplar tree which once was a landmark in Thurmont has fallen before the axe and saw—all in the interests of safety.

The tree, measuring almost 17 feet in circumference and more than 100 years old, was struck by lightning 12 years ago. Since then it had decayed and threatened passing traffic.

Man and Wife In Their 90's Die Same Day

A double funeral will be conducted in Alexandria at 11 a. m. today for an aged Virginia couple who died Sunday six hours apart after 64 years of married life.

The services will be held at the Demaine funeral home for Charles C. Marshall, 90, who died at his residence, 911 Cameron Street, after his wife, the former Lucy Turner, 91, had succumbed at Alexandria Hospital to a heart attack. Mr. Marshall was a grand-nephew of Chief Justice John Marshall.

Both residents of Front Royal, Va., Mr. and Mrs. Marshall had lived for 30 years in Alexandria, where Mr. Marshall was agent for the Home Fire Insurance Co. of Philadelphia, until his retirement about five years ago. He had been blind in both eyes since several years before he retired from active service and led by a small boy, had been a familiar figure on the streets of Alexandria.

Both, however, were active members of historic Christ Episcopal Church, with which they had been affiliated since coming to Alexandria.

He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Maria Clark, of Washington, and Miss Susan Marshall, of Front Royal. Mrs. Marshall leaves two brothers, Philip W. Turner, of Front Royal, and Smith S. Turner, of Parkersburg, W. Va., and two sisters, Mrs. George Adams, Wytheville, Va., and Mrs. G. W. Carter, Alexandria. They had no children.

Their funeral will be conducted by the Rev. Ernest A. DeBordenave, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Pallbearers for both services will be Mrs. Marshall's two nephews, Philip W. Turner, jr., and James Marshall, and V. Ward Boswell, Capt. James S. Douglas, jr., Albert V. Bryan and Gilbert Cox.

Sorghum More Popular In Augusta County

Special Dispatch to The Post

Waynesboro, Va., June 30.—Sorghum is making a comeback in Augusta County to help farm families answer their sugar ration woes. County Agent J. C. Coiner said today 100 or more sorghum patches had been noted in the county, most of them in the more mountainous areas.

Sorghum syrup is rich in both iron and calcium and can be used both as a substitute for sugar at the table and in cooking. A local seed store estimated it had sold 75 pounds of the seed this year, triple that of any recent year.

R. O. T. C. Keeps 24-Hour Watch On Md. Campus

Advanced R. O. T. C. students at the University of Maryland yesterday began a systematic routine of 24-hour watches over several strategic buildings on the campus.

Military heads at the university have placed clock-round watches over the gym-armory, which houses military equipment and armament, and all-night guards around the National Youth Administration workshop, the Administration Building, the new armory now under construction and the military offices.

Junior and senior cadets have taken over the first watches and sophomores will begin about July 15.

Col. Robert E. Wysor, jr., head of the military department, has announced that in August members of the advanced course will undertake long marches and night problems.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Boston, June 30.—Perhaps you've noticed that Taft Wright of the Chicago White Sox is back in business and batting a cool .375 after seven weeks out of uniform at the start of the season. That's bad news for everybody who has notions of winning the American League batting title, except Wright of course.

POVICH

Technically Wright is the league's leading hitter at this moment but his name is being omitted from the lists because he has been at bat only 108 times which isn't quite a quota. Joe Gordon of the Yankees is still the nominal leader with a .365, but he is probably very much aware that he now has Wright to contend with. After seven weeks' confinement with a stomach ailment, the fat Mr. Wright who is so wide of girth that it is as sensible to step over him as walk around him, is now whaling away grandly at the league's pitching.

The trade that sent Wright to Chicago three years ago in exchange for Gerald Walker will always stand as a monumental error by the Washington club. The Nats gave up one of the fine hitters of baseball in the humpty-dumpty Wright who has been a .330 hitter for his five years in the big leagues. When Wright shows a .375 average he is not hitting nearly as far over his head as Joe Gordon with .365 and must be rated by far the sounder hitter.

The fellow doesn't look like a hitter when he stands up there from the left side, his short arms holding the bat high and his hands choking the bat, but the league's pitchers have learned to fear him. There isn't much grace there, either, in contrast to the fluidity of the swing of such as Ted Williams, but Wright always gets a piece of the ball as the players say. And he's the outfielder's problem child with his skill at hitting to all fields. Taffy can turn on the power, too, when he's of that mind, but he's too smart to overswing.

Wright is no flash in the pan. He was a top hitter in the minor leagues before Washington brought him up from Chattanooga in 1938, but he says he became a better hitter by accident—an accident to his left wrist.

"I was a pull hitter all my life," says Wright, "until I broke my wrist one day in the minor leagues. When I got back in the game, I couldn't bring my bat around like I used to, and I had to push the ball into left field. Pretty soon I began to get the hang of hitting to left, and I guess it adds 50 points to my batting average every year. It was a lucky break for me."

The men Wright has to beat out for the league batting crown are, obviously, Gordon, Bobby Doerr, who is hitting .345 for the Red Sox, and of course Ted Williams who is moving up in the lists with a batting figure that now reads .326. Williams may be rated the chief challenger in deference to his .406 average of last year, as any man who ever hit that much must be.

However, the wonder is that Williams didn't hit .600 for the 1941 season in view of the leniency of the Boston official scorers who leap at the opportunity to credit Williams with a hit on the flimsiest excuse. He gets all the better of it. Today for example, he popped a high ball behind second base. It could have been caught by the first baseman, second baseman or right fielder—a simple catch for either of the trio. The ball was muffed, finally, by Bob Repass, an inexcusable error. But not in Boston. "Hit" flashed on the scoreboard. Boston, apparently, takes care of its own.

The other day we typed a piece about the lousy umpiring in the American League and suggested that most of 'em ought to be fired, citing Bill McGowan as one of the good umpires of the league. We're sorry about that, and would like to make a retraction. McGowan is as bad as the rest, and in a sense worse, because he abuses his authority.

McGowan put on the all time exhibition of big shot temper today when he ejected Catcher Jake Early from the Nats' double-header with the Red Sox in the first inning of the first game. He puffed up like a pouter pigeon when Early challenged his calling of balls and strikes and thumbed Early out of the game for daring to question his infallibility.

Big Shot McGowan couldn't charge Early with anything beyond an honest difference of opinion. The Nats' catcher was undemonstrative and the first intimation the crowd had that there was any sort of an argument was when McGowan stomped around in a red rage, shouting all the while, and directed Early to the bench. The usual excuses of umpires in such cases, that the offending player was inciting the crowd to riot, wasn't available to McGowan. The only riot taking place was in McGowan's swell head.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, June 30.—One of those old-school promoters, a breed noted for strong stomachs, is around town these days drumming up sucker curiosity about a combination rodeo, high-wire and auto-busting show he will stage in the Polo Grounds soon.

CONSIDINE

His name is Larry Sunbrock, a square-faced fellow with Harold Lloyd glasses and little of the physical appearance of the entrepreneur. He's only 38 but he has gone through a couple of personally owned mints and is risking another one by bringing into the jaded big city a show full of the old hocus-balonus adjectives about death-defying, super colossal feats of derring-do.

He was sitting in a local restaurant the other night with Horace Stoneham, asking Horace to believe him when he says that his show's leaping lizzies, bucking broncs, falling walls, head-on collisions and high dives into pots of burning oil would not hurt the field.

"Maybe not," wheezed the young owner of the Giants, unhappily, "but I'm wondering what Henry Fabian is saying." Henry Fabian was grounds-keeper for the Giants for so many years that even the oldest settlers lost track. He nursed each blade of grass individually, and some years ago when Tim Mara led his early football Giants into the old place, by their nose-rings, old Henry went up to the behemoths and he said, "Listen, boys, don't you go running any of them plays of yours over my infield."

Iron Head Perry, an Aptly Named Gent

Maybe Stoneham was wondering what McGraw is saying, too. Because hard by the spot where the great Matty once pitched, Mr. Sunbrock will present Iron Head Perry, the human battering ram. Iron Head, an old hand at the business, sits out on the cowcatcher of a speeding jaloppy and butts holes through a 1-inch plank with his noggin. He's been doing it for 20 years or so without so much as a headache, but his old lady has been jawing at him lately about giving it up for some other job. She says there's no future in it, and sometimes when Iron Head hits a knot he is inclined to think she's right.

Sunbrock has a guy named Lucky Lott who leapfrogs over a bus and five old crates in a cheap sedan. Lott's predecessor broke his neck doing the same trick. "I loved him like a brother," Sunbrock said. "The same was true of the wonderful boy who died of major burns, for me, after driving an open car into a pyre of burning gasoline cans. I'll never forget the way the kid came out of that fiery car and took his bow, before collapsing. I loved him like a brother, too," Sunbrock added, thus giving the world a saga of brotherly love that rivals the deep affection of Cain for Abel.

The public appetite for Sunbrocks Maverick Hellzapoppin is almost alarming. His ledgers, which he whips out at the drop of a Mack truck on the chest of death-defying jolting Jerry Flanagan, show that he paid taxes on 94,800 paid admissions at one show in the big coliseum in Los Angeles. That was on March 19, 1939.

Larry Has Gone Through 2 Million, He Says

His show drew 64,600 paid admissions a week later in Kezar Stadium in San Francisco, 36,484 in San Diego, 106,421 during a week in Detroit, 258,300 in two days in Soldier Field, Chicago, and 112,000 in six days in Sportsman's Park, St. Louis. That's more people than the St. Louis Browns have seen since Arlie Latham played for them.

"With me, it's up and down," he confessed eagerly. "I've had as many bloomers as good ones. I figure I've gone through about two million. The stock market took a lot of it, after I sold out a chain of 'shooting galleries' (cheap movie houses) in Cincinnati in 1929. I got going good with vaudeville in Cincinnati in the middle 1930's, but my wife blew to Reno with all the dough. Then I was a bum for a time, around Long Beach, Calif., and if I could win enough shooting craps to buy me a bottle of gin I was happy.

"But I got going again with a speeded-up rodeo and had a pot of money again. But I blew that trying to start a pro football league on the coast in 1940. I never will be able to understand that. Now I've come back with this show and it's going good. I'm putting it in ball parks.

"The only trouble I've had lately was a cowboy strike. They've got a union, you know. Then a guy sued me for $100,000 because he claimed the show was so exciting he had to stand up on his chair. He fell off the chair and broke his back. So I had to go to court and deny the show was thrilling."

We asked him if his conscience bothered him about burning gas and blowing tires. "Nope, we burn up very little. None of the boys put much gas in those crates before they bust 'em up. And we rarely blow a tire. I gave 80 tires to the Government not long ago. Had been hoarding them."

Sunbrock mans the public address system at his shows with the angry twang of a pitchman of the Clyde Hager school. He pays his beloved suicidists 50 bucks a week, flat, and bonuses. He believes that his greatest contribution to Americana was his Jigantic Jitterbug Jamboree, which apparently reached its crest when he staged a jitterbug wedding, featuring a parson who trucked down the aisle with one finger up in the air, chanting the eternal words of the marriage service.

"It was wonderful," Sunbrock said.

West Outfit Meets 'Skins In Training

Top Coaches Sought; Shaughnessy Among Prospects; Rice Heads Advisory Committee

By Pat O'Brien,
Associated Press Sports Writer

A schedule of big time football for soldiers was outlined at the War Department yesterday after the appointment of Grantland Rice, sports columnist, as head of a civilian corporation set up to handle details of the program.

Eight contests with teams of the National Pro League, five for the Army's Western squad and three for the Eastern soldiers' outfit, have been booked for next fall.

Rice said his corporation, War Football Fund, Inc., would advise the Army on the gridiron program and would handle the financial end. All receipts from the contests will go to the Army Emergency Relief Fund.

1000 Army Prospects

Members of the squads will be drawn from the 1000 or more professional and collegiate players now in the Army. Officers and enlisted men alike will be eligible. Each squad will number around 50.

"We're going to get the two best head coaches we can find," Rice said. "If men in the Army are unable to serve because of military duties, then we will find top-ranking civilians to handle the job."

Rice said Maj. Wallace Wade, now stationed at Fort Bragg, and Lieut. Col. Bob Neyland, with the Corps of Engineers, would be "ideal" choices.

3 Civilians Considered

Civilians mentioned as possible choices for the jobs were Clark Shaughnessy, former Stanford mentor, now at Maryland, and Maurice (Clipper) Smith of Villanova.

The coaches will round up their squads early in August for three weeks' practice, with the Western group training at Los Angeles and the Eastern team at West Point, N. Y.

The schedule follows:

Western team—August 30, Washington Redskins at Los Angeles; September 5, Chicago Cardinals at Denver; September 9, Detroit Lions at Detroit; September 13, Green Bay Packers at Madison, Wis.; September 20, New York Giants at an Eastern city, probably Syracuse, N. Y.

Eastern team—September 12, New York Giants at New York; September 16, Brooklyn Dodgers at Jersey City; September 20, Chicago Bears at Boston.

Rice estimated the eight games would bring in more than $300,000. Another $100,000 may go to the relief fund from the annual all-star contest in Chicago August 28, he added.

Cards Defeat Pirates, 4-2, Under Lights

St. Louis, June 30 (AP).—Mort Cooper missed his fifth consecutive shutout tonight, but he did toss his ninth consecutive victory as the Cardinals downed the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4 to 2. Elbie Fletcher's first-inning homer snapped Cooper's scoreless innings at 33.

Cooper's winning performance, however, fell a little short of his average for the year. He allowed nine hits, a total only the Pirates have been able to get from the Card ace this year. They did it once before on May 28.

Nats Suffer Twin Beating, 9-8 and 5-2

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Boston, June 30.—The pennant-scenting Red Sox won two games from the Nats today with the help of the Nats. Washington's defeat in the first game was largely self-inflicted by Bucky Harris' athletes, who have been making a career of that sort of thing this season. The score of that one was 9-8. The second game went to Boston, 5-2.

There wasn't much the Nats could do about that second game what with Tex Hughson holding 'em to six hits and pitching the second-place Red Sox to within four and one-half games of the leading Yankees who divided a double-header at Philadelphia. Hughson simply outpitched Sid Hudson.

But in that first game, the Nats took a 6-3 lead into the fifth inning and then made a mess of it with bush league fielding. They kicked the game out from under Early Wynn, who wasn't doing badly until his mates took a hand.

Early Sits Out

Jake Early wasn't a party to either defeat. Umpire Bill McGowan ran him out of the game in the first inning of the opener after a dispute at home plate and Early saw the rest of the proceedings in civilian clothes. Evans, Early's successor, didn't get a hit all day, and thus McGowan didn't do the Nats any favor in ejecting their No. 1 catcher.

The Nats rocked Heber Newsome for six runs before he was taken out under fire in the fifth inning and was succeeded by Mike Ryba. They got two runs in the first inning when Case and Vernon doubled and Spence singled. In the second, Spence socked the second of his four hits of the game, a homer into the right-field bull pen. In the fifth the Nats came up with three more runs with the help of three walks and singles by Spence and Cullenbine.

The Red Sox chipped a run off Wynn's lead in the fourth inning when Repass threw the ball into the dugout trying for a double play, and George Case completed the damage. Case dropped a fly ball hit by Peacock, who was credited with a triple, and the run scored.

Bosox Come Back

Boston scored a legitimate run in the fifth and another in the sixth on Tabor's homer over the left field wall to cut Wynn's lead to 6-4, and in the seventh the Nats booted the ball game away.

The Red Sox scored four runs in that seventh. First off, Repass fumbled a pop fly off Williams' bat. Doerr doubled to drive in a run. A sacrifice and Tabor's single scored Doerr, and Tabor scored on Ryba's safe bunt. A bit later, with men on first and third, Evans threw a ball into center field in an attempt to stop a steal, and Peacock ambled home from third with the fourth run of the inning.

In the eighth the Nats had one more gift run for the Red Sox in their system. Williams led off with a triple to center against Carrasquel, but when Doerr grounded to Estalella, Williams held third. Estalella pulled Vernon off the bag with a wild throw, though, and nobody was out. Lupien flied to short left and Williams held third, but he scored when Tabor also flied to left.

Ryba stopped the Nats for three

Melton Wins 10th, Giants Beat Phils, 4-3

New York, June 30 (AP).—Lefty Cliff Melton attained his tenth victory of the season tonight by holding the Philadelphia Phils to seven hits as the New York Giants eked out a 4 to 3 decision which was made close by Stan Benjamin's two-run homer in the eighth.

The Phils rattled off four double plays in the first four innings, but they were unable to prevent the Giants from doing all their scoring in the same span.

Two singles helped New York open the scoring in the first inning and after the Phils had tied the count in the second on two hits, a sacrifice and an infield out, the Giants barged in front in the third with two runs on four hits, including a double by Mel Ott. They added what proved to be the deciding tally on an error and two singles in the fourth—Cliff Melton himself driving in the run.

The game was a twilight affair, finished under floodlights, and drew 3252 fans.

A Torn Race Ticket Is Cashable, Rules N.Y. Supreme Court

By the Associated Press

New York, June 30.—The appellate term of the Supreme Court, upholding a municipal court decision, ruled today that torn-up winning pari-mutuel tickets must be honored.

It ordered the Westchester Racing Association to pay Joseph Alieno, a seaman, who had torn up four $2 tickets he held on a winning horse at Belmont, $77.20 plus court costs, or a total of more than $100.

Combined Team of Reds, Cubs Bows to Great Lakes Tars, 3-

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 30.—Johnny Rigney and Russell Meers pitched Lieut. Mickey Cochrane's Great Lakes Sailors to a 3-to-1 victory over a combined Chicago Cubs-Cincinnati Reds team beore 30,000 fans in the opening feature of tonight's three-ring Army-Navy Relief Fund game. The Cubs and Reds got only four hits.

The star-spangled crowd of soldiers, sailors and officers and people named Joe saw the Naval Training Station team masterfully outplay the major leaguers as a preliminary to an Army combat show and a scheduled Cub-Red game.

In a major league encounter played at night the Cincinnati Reds, with Pitcher Starr hurling a six-hitter, stopped the Chicago Cubs, 4-1.

The Sailors, winning their thirty-sixth victory against six defeats since formation of the team, scored first in the fourth inning on Benny McCoy's double, a fly, a walk and Bernie Andres' short fly. In the seventh they added another run after two were out on George Grace's single and two successive errors by oJe Abreu, the Reds' magician second baseman.

The third Navy run came in on a note of confusion in the ninth. Grace walked and stole second, and Frankie Pytlak hit sharply to Bert Haas, third baseman, who tried unsuccessfully to tag Grace, then threw to first too late to get Pytlak. Grace scored sanding up.

3-Run Spree In 9th Saves Champions Double Loss; Lindell Stars In 1st Game

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 30.—The stumbling New York Yankees divided a doubleheader with the Philadelphia Athletics today, winning the second game, 4 to 3, after dropping the opener, 8 to 5, and saw their American League lead dwindle to four and a half games.

The first game brought the first defeat of the year for Hank Borowy of New York and the first victory of the season for Lefty Herman Besse of the A's.

Besse was tapped for four hits and three runs in the first inning, but after that he allowed only four for the rest of the game and none counted except Charley Keller's ninth home run with one on in the sixth inning.

The Athletics also scored three times in the first frame and they took the lead with three more in the sixth when they routed Borowy to the showers with his six-game winning streak shattered. Two of the runs in this rally were knocked in on a single by Besse himself.

Relief Pitcher John Lindell of the Yanks also took a hand in winning his own ball game in the afterpiece by hitting home the deciding run in a three-run ninth-inning rally with a single. The other pair were batted in by Bill Dickey's double after Charley Keller singled and Joe Gordon walked.

Atley Donald pitched two-hit shutout ball for the Yanks till the seventh, when the A's overtook a one-run lead with three tallies on five hits. Roger Wolff went the route for Philadelphia, allowing nine hits, one more than his teammates made.

Before their second game success the Yanks had lost three in a row and 10 of their last 15 games.

Major League Bosses Protest Proposals for 1943

Jack Zeller Of Detroit Criticized

Tiger Head's Plans For Short Season, Home Training Rouse A. L. Leaders

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, June 30.—Beset with worries over the present season, baseball's bewildered magnates today protested the arousing of next year's ghosts by Jack Zeller of Detroit, who proposed that major league clubs train at home and shorten the season two months.

The general manager of the Tigers said he would present his ideas at the major league meetings here Monday before the All-Star game and based his suggestion on reported housing shortages in Florida and transportation difficulties.

"It's ridiculous," declared Edward G. Barrow, forceful president of the World Champion New York Yankees. "Why should anybody say anything like that? Major league baseball is a respectable business and doesn't have to operate like a fly-by-night. We have heard of no housing shortage. As a matter of fact there will be a lot of vacant hotels in Florida next winter that will be glad to have baseball clubs."

It's Hot Air

Roy Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics was just as vehement. "We don't approve of anything like that," he said, "I don't know why fellows pop off like that. It's a lot of hot air."

Alva Bradley, president of the Cleveland Indians, commented: "I'll swear, with these uncertain times I don't even know what is going to happen tomorrow. He talking about next spring and that's too far off to even think about."

Harry Grabiner, vice president of the Chicago White Sox, asserted, "He's probably been thinking about it for eight years. We haven't had an opportunity to consider it."

Clark Griffith of the Washington Senators said, "There aren't any tourists in Florida any more and hotel accommodations should be adequate. There may be some transportation difficulties, but they can be worked out by four or five clubs in a short area forming a practice circuit and using regular rail and bus lines.

Griffith added that he would favor shortening the season two weeks because "I've always wanted to have the World Series over by October 1."

Comment from National League club owners was similar.

Buc Boss Agrees

William E. Benswanger of Pittsburgh said: "We feel spring training should be shortened and we may have to do it a little closer home than California, where we have been training. But baseball fans want their good baseball in April as much as in any other month, and players must be conditioned to make that possible.

"I'd like an earlier finish in 1943, not by shortening the schedule, but by getting an earlier start."

James Gallagher, general manager of the Chicago Cubs, observed: "There is nothing to prevent Detroit from doing its spring training at home if it wants to. I don't see why league approval has to be obtained. A lot of minor league clubs train at home. So far as the Cubs are concerned, that is something to be decided when the time comes. I haven't heard any reasons advanced for cutting the playing season."

Gerry Nugent of the Phils also said he had heard "no reason for curtailing the season," and added that he thought it would be contrary to President Roosevelt's request that baseball continue.

Lou Jenkins Named City's Best Bowler

Lou Jenkins of the Yellow Cab team has been adjudged the city's best bowler for the second successive season, the City Duckpin Association announced last night. Astor Clarke, No. 1 bowler of the country, was unranked because he didn't bowl the required number of 125 league games, as were many other of the town's top pinmen.

Jenkins, an unanimous choice of the six voters, boasts a league average of 126-58 for 305 games, and a special events average of 129-267 for 327 games.

Second to Jenkins was Fred Murphy of Arcadia, with a league average of 125-135 for 204 games and a special events average of 126-207 for 296 games. In order, with their averages given in the above style, came Cletus Pannell of Rosslyn, 125-157 for 180 and 126-244 for 269; Karl Gochenour of Mount Vernon and WINX, 126-27 for 206 and 123-07 for 218, and Hokie Smith of Lucky Strike, the District League champion, 124-51 for 201 and 127-26 for 182.

The second five were Lou Pantos of Hi-Skor, Billy Stalcup, Rosslyn; Ed Nash, Anacostia Spillway; Joe Freschi, Clarendon, and Nick Rinaldi, also of Clarendon.

Braves Beat Dodgers for First Time, 4-3

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 30.—The Boston Braves, who had not beaten Brooklyn in 14 consecutive games extending back into last season, bounced up with a 4-to-3 triumph today to spoil Hugh Casey's venture as a starting pitcher.

The chunky relief specialist gave up three of the Braves' runs in the first four innings, but was not charged with the defeat.

He was removed for a pinchhitter in the last of the fourth while the score was tied and the winning tally came against Rookie Les Webber in the fifth on a triple by Chet Ross and a single by Nanny Fernandez.

Southpaw Willard Donovan opened on the mound for the Braves and was jarred for four singles in succession by the Dodgers in the first inning, but the National League leaders scored only once, leaving the bases loaded.

Then doubles by Paul Waner and Eddie Miller and a single by Donovan brought Boston two runs in the second.

The Dodgers counted twice in the third on a walk, Joe Medwick's double and a single by John Rizzo and Boston tied the score in the fourth on a walk and a double by Al Roberge.

Augie Galan opened Brooklyn's half of the fourth with a single and Babe Dahlgren, a righthanded batter, marched to the plate for Casey. Donovan immediately was replaced on the mound by Johnny Salvo, a righthander, and Brooklyn substituted lefthanded Arky Vaughan at bat. Vaughan walked, but Salvo kept the Dodgers from scoring and went on to win with three-hit ball for six innings.

Brooklyn used two other pitchers, Newt Kimball and Schoolboy Rowe, neither of whom allowed a hit in the last three frames.

Racing's War Relief 'Kitty' Million; Soon Will Double

New York Tracks Alone Kick In $370,000 As Drive, Slow in Starting, Goes in High

By the Associated Press

New York, June 30.—Racing's war relief "kitty" showed nearly a million dollars today, and the cash register was ringing so fast that the folks keeping score figured the turf would hit its two million-dollar goal by the end of the summer in a mild gallop.

With $101,000 from Aqueduct as the latest contribution, topping off previous pay-days from Belmont and Jamaica and private offerings from owners, jockeys and concessionaires, New York racing already has kicked in with $370,000 alone. And Hialeah and Tropical Park in Florida, Maryland tracks, Churchill Downs, Detroit and some way stations also have been heard from to boost the pot.

On top of that, Empire City and Arlington Park run their "war" days Saturday, and you won't be far wrong if you guess they'll chip in $100,000 apiece from the proceedings.

And, with New England and other Midwest tracks getting ready their bundles, there's no wonder Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman of the National Turf Committee running the effort, is walking around with a benign smile and a pleasant word these days. Herb had a lot of trouble getting the boys to start pitching in, but once they saw the light, the thing started to slide right along like soap on the bathroom floor.

Most tracks already have designated particular days from which they'll turn over their entire "takes" to the war effort. Belmont came through with $97,000 from its "day" on June 6. Jamaica, which had previously promised to match the Belmont bit, did even better with a check for $125,000. Then Mrs. Payne Whitney, Trainer John Gaver and Jockey Eddie Arcaro turned in 10 per cent of what their horse Shut Out won in the Belmont Stakes that day, and the Stevens Brothers, concessionaires, added some more.

Horsepower To Govern Boats' Gas

By the Associated Press

The Office of Price Administration announced yesterday that small power boats in the Eastern gasoline ration area would be allowed gasoline on a horsepower basis, permitting the owner of each to obtain enough fuel to keep it in commission and prepared for war duty if necessary.

Under the new ration plan effective July 22, inboard boats will receive four gallons of gas for each horsepower unit for six months—up to a total of 250 gallons. Outboard motors will be allowed five gallons for each horsepower for the same period up to a maximum of 40 gallons.

This will be the basic ration, OPA pointed out, and boats used for occupational purposes will be granted additional supplies. Although the basic ration may be used at the owner's discretion, OPA emphasized that the gasoline was made available so that the boat owners could have their craft in readiness for "defense duty, or for any war emergency."

Va. Horseman Claims D. C. Jumping Mark

Just what records fell when three horses jumped 7 feet in the Columbus Horse Show at Meadowbrook Sunday remains somewhat in the dark—but Stanley Greene, sr., of Leesburg, Va., has ample reason to know that it wasn't the local high-jump mark.

One afternoon in 1912, Greene sent the late Brig. Gen. Mitchell's Sir Dixon 7 feet 2 inches at the old Washington Horse Show grounds near the Monument, and the leap was the talk of the city—until the news came out of the sinking of the S. S. Titantic the same day.

At any rate, local followers are convinced that Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Randle's Sport Marvel, David Martin's Cateer and Mickey Magill's Gratchino set a mark for leaping that hasn't been touched anywhere on the basis of numbers.

Ordinarily one good horse sends another over a record height but is unable to make it himself. The spectacle of three horses scrambling over a 7-foot mountain of bars and then all missing the next height is considered by experts as unprecedented.

Wishing Beaten At Arlington Park

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—Hugh S. Nesbitt's Copperman got up in the final stride to nip Appel T. Simmons' Wishing in the $1500 Hourless Purse at Arlington Park today.

Wishing led throughout and just failed to last. R. C. Groff's Forever Prince was third, W. B. Simpson's Weigh Anchor fourth and Dixiana's Sirrocco last. Forever Prince and Sirocco were equal favorites.

Copperman, ridden by Arthur Craig, returned $10.20, $6 and $3.60. The time for the mile was 1:36 1-5.

Ex-Tiger Mullen Unexpectedly Joins Service Ball Team

By the Associated Press

Great Lakes, Ill., June 30.—The lineup of the All-Service team was set officially at 20 players today. Then Pat Mullin showed up. It was a welcome a surprise as could have ever hit a manager.

The former Detroit Tigers outfielder, although invited to play July 7 on the team that will face the winner of the major league All-Star game the night before, had not put in an appearance and had been given up as too involved in military training—the same reason keeps Hank Greenberg, Hugh Mulcahy and several others out of this game.

But the deeply tanned Mullin made his way from an Army reception center at New Cumberland, Pa., and promptly joined in a workout with a dozen others assembled here.

The rest of the players are members of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station team, who tonight were in Cincinnati to play a combined squad of Reds and Chicago Cubs.

Played Only 54 Games

Mullin, who hit .345 in 54 games last year, being idle the rest of the time because of an injury, completes an All-Service team outfield of Don Padgett (Cardinals), Sam Chapman (Athletics), Joe Grace (Browns), Morrie Arnovich (Giants) and Frank Baumholtz, owned last year by Cincinnati but who played at Ogden, Utah.

Manager Mickey Cochrane originally counted on a list of 23 men, but 5 couldn't make it. He picked three more men—none of whom is a full-fledged former major leaguer—from his Great Lakes squad, Baumholtz, Chester Hadjduk, former White Sox rookie first baseman, and Ernie Andres, former member of Louisville of the American Association, a third baseman.

Cochrane today arranged a test for his entire Service All-Stars by scheduling a game for Friday with Sutherland of Kalamazoo, Mich. Saturday the Great Lakes team, augmented by the Navy men on the All-Star team, will play Fort Custer, which will use the Army stars, at Detroit's Briggs Stadium.

The rest of the Service All-Star squad as announced today:

Catchers — Vince Smith (Pittsburgh), Frank Pytlak (Red Sox) and Ken Silvestri (Yankees).

Pitchers—Bob Feller (Cleveland), John Grodzicki (Cardinals), Mickey Harris (Red Sox), Johnny Rigney (White Sox) and Fred Hutchinson (Detroit).

Infielders—Cecil Travis (Washington), Johnny Sturm (Yankees), Hadjduk, Benny McCoy (Athleteics), Emmett Mueller (Phils), John Lucadello (Browns) and Andres.

Coaches—Cochrane, Lieut. George Earnshaw (Athletics), now at Jacksonville, Fla., Naval Air Base, and Hank Gowdy (now Cincinnati Reds coach).

Bell Tower Wins Suffolk Feature

Boston, June 30 (AP).—B. F. Lister's Bell Tower raced to a length and a half victory today in the feature race at Suffolk Downs, drawing from the rest of the field after taking command at the head of the stretch.

The winner covered the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:44 4-5 and paid $3.60, $2.80 and $2.40. Wise Father of the Circle S Stable was second and returned $7.80 and $3.80. A. B. Christopher's Topee and Mrs. Sam Orr's Star Boarder finished in a dead heat for show. Topee paid $2.40 and Star Boarder $3.

Quebec Rink Destroyed

Quebec, June 30 (AP).—The Quebec Arena, home of the Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, was destroyed by fire today. Damage was estimated at $100,000.

Hard Loser Leads All the Way to Win Charles Town Feature

Busy Fingers, Favorite, 2d, Beaten Badly

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 30.—The Eastview Stable's Hard Loser took command in the first jumps of the Bombardier Purse and led all the way to win the day's feature race. The son of Spanish Play and Winona Lady showed his heels to six rivals including W. W. Waters' Busy Fingers, the favorite in the test of a mile and a sixteenth. Busy Fingers wound up in second position, beaten three lengths. Two lengths farther back came D. H. Tabler's honest-running Groucher's Boy to be third.

Hard Loser was capably handled by Jockey Buddy Root and returned a $7.60 mutuel to his backers. The 5-year-old gelding was clocked in 1:50 2/5 over a track that was fast but slightly on the dull side.

Root broke Hard Loser promptly from the No. 1 post position and the gelding opened a two-length lead on Boat's Crew in the opening quarter. Grape Vine was close up and Busy Fingers was fifth as the field turned into the backstretch. Root saved much ground with Hard Loser when Busy Fingers made his move on the outside. The Waters' color bearer moved along as if he was going to take it all but Root put Hard Loser to pressure in the stretch and held the favorite safe approaching the wire.

Jockey Herb Claggett who has been riding in excellent form of late, again was the day's saddle star. He rode three straight winners, taking the third, fourth and fifth races. Claggett put the finishing touches on an $81.40 payoff in the daily double with his victory aboard Mrs. Victor P. Noyes' Ecoway in the third event.

Jockey Butsy Hernandez put up a strong ride to win the seventh race with the Prospect Hill Farm's Discretion, a favorite. Time Scout and Freds First followed the winner to the wire.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIEF TEDDY, $20.40, $5.40, $5.60; SADDLING BELL, $9.00, $6.00; DUPLIKET, $2.80.

CHIEF TEDDY saved ground from start, responded to strong handling and wore down SADDLING BELL to win going away. SADDLING BELL went between horses to get to front, could not resist winner but closed willingly. DUPLIKET was pinched back at first turn and hung in final drive. READY-ABOUT had good early speed and stopped.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:27½. Off at 3:28. Winner, Mrs. V. P. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ECOWAY, $4.80, $2.80, $2.40; MOST ALERT, $3.60, $3.20; DARTING STAR, $3.20.

ECOWAY took command in opening furlong, drew out and was not threatened at any stage. MOST ALERT went up on inside to get closest to pace, was taken up repeatedly and closed on own courage. DARTING STAR was well placed and weakened in final stages. WINTIME closed willingly.

Daily Double, CHIEF TEDDY and ECOWAY, Paid $81.40

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:55½. Off at 3:56. Winner, S. J. Fiammia's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EXARCH, $5.20, $4.00, $3.20; CHILLEE VALLEE, $3.80, $2.60; LENNANE, $3.60.

EXARCH off in first flight and steadied, came willingly under hand riding in the stretch and won as if much the best. CHILLEE VALLEE set good pace, showed game effort, but was no match for winner. LENNANE was pinched back approaching stretch and had no chance. SINGING CONNIE saved ground and closed willingly.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:50. Off at 4:50½. Winner, Eastview Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HARD LOSER, $7.60, $3.40, $2.40; BUSY FINGERS, $2.80, $2.20; GROUCHER'S BOY, $2.40.

HARD LOSER went to front at once, was nicely rated while saving ground and held on gamely under strong handling in final stages. BUSY FINGERS was within striking distance, came out for racing room, moved up menacingly and then hung in final sixteenth. GROUCHER'S BOY was badly outrun early and closed a gap. BOATS CREW raced close up early and weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:17. Off at 5:17. Winner, Prospect Hill Farm's b. g. Bill Bennings

—At The Post

Dear Al:

Racing Secretary Freddie Burton has whipped up a fine program for the final Wednesday of the victory meeting. The James Sager Purse, named for the popular Washington financier and sportsman, and the Rosslyn Bowling Center Handicap, named for Galt Davis' pin establishment, are the top races on the nine-race program. The Sager Purse is at 1 1-16 miles and has drawn Hot Man, Tellevane, Burner and other distance stars. The Rosslyn Handicap lures Saran, Royal Business, Royal Echo and other good ones to the post. Jockey Martin Bletzacker said goodby to friends and left for New England to ride. Jockey Danny Scocca did not waste any time riding a winner at Delaware Park. He can earn his way on the big tracks, which is more than I can say for some of the other riders around Charles Town. Jockey Al Bocson's eye improved overnight and he was back in action yesterday. Vernon Arthur has taken over the horses of Leon Frye for conditioning. W. S. Sprague's Placement is a well-bred horse. The 5-year-old is by Challenger II out of Shell Hole, a Man o' War mare. Jimmy Rizer will handle the public address system at Hagerstown and also will air the races at that point over Station WJEJ. Hon. Matthew M. Neely, the Governor of West Virginia, will visit here on Saturday at the closing day of the victory meeting. It's going to be a big day. Plan to come out. Also try to make it today. If you can't, tune in on WOL or WFMD and hear the broadcast from this track. Remember, all the business here at Charles Town is being done for Army and Navy relief and West Virginia charities. Hope to see you on the rail. BILL.

First race—OWALLER was off poorly in that last and had little chance. With better handling this one should get home. BUTTERMAN should save ground from the inside post position. RED WINGS is dangerous.

Second race—SHALEEN can't be as bad as that last and deserves another chance. KAMARI has speed and belongs close. BILL K. is a threat.

Third race—MALVOIS gets in light and needs only the right ride. HIGH BUD belongs close. HAPPY SLAVE might take it all.

Fourth race—BURNER, in present form, is the class in this field. Needs only a ride. HOT MAN figures to be close with these. TELLEVANE will be a keen factor.

Fifth race—ASTER LADY may take the top on these and stay there. CLOCKS has speed and will be a threat with this ekin. SURPRISE BOX may be close.

Sixth race—NEVER HOME, MARANDAN and SAINT PYREWICK are hard to separate in this field. I prefer them in the order named.

Seventh race — ROYAL ECHO likes the route, can carry the weight and should get the right ride. The entry of SARAN and SPECTATOR should be right there. ROYAL BUSINESS could get up in time.

Eighth race — AGNES KNIGHT gets in light and deserves the call. MACIE MARGARET is good now. PURPLE DAWN for the show end.

Ninth race—WORTHOWNING belongs on top of this kind. CANDLE ENDS is dropping down and will be a factor. SIR TIME'S last was the bunk.

Sub race—If this event is used I'll take WAKE, AUTOGO and CLIFTONS DAWN.

Best bet—WORTHOWNING.

BENNINGS AT DELAWARE PARK

Petro Brothers to Box in Benefit Card

Charlie, Dan Make Pro Debuts

Hawkins, Morris To Be Foes InStadium Program For Family Of Preston Drew

Two youngsters, brothers who were close friends of Preston Drew, the 24-year-old fighter who lost his life following injuries received in a boxing match, were lined up for bouts yesterday on next Monday night's benefit show at Griffith Stadium.

They are Danny and Charlie Petro, stars for years in amateur and Golden Gloves competition. They have chosen the show for the benefit of the family of Drew to make their pro debuts, though neither is receiving a penny for his services.

Danny's opponent in a four-rounder will be Leon Hawkins, who also is making his pro bow. Hawkins has been fighting as an amateur for four years.

Billy Morris of Chester, Pa., tentatively has been selected to face Brother Charlie in a four-rounder.

Headlining the show in an eight-rounder is Jimmy DeChard, Frankie Mann's heavyweight, who will engage Al Reiss, Detroit boxer. Reiss has engaged in 100 pro fights and is handled by Harry (The Horse) Raskin.

A rematch between Eddie Kane, Golden Gloves product, and Leon Kennedy of Harrisburg, Pa., also is being planned by Promoter Turner. Kane won a close decision from Kennedy at the ball park recently.

Lew Hanbury, Golden Gloves feather king, makes his second start, facing Wayman Stewart, conqueror of Vince Truminelli, in a six-rounder. Hanbury was among the first to volunteer to fight on the card.

Roy Dunn will meet Ken (Young) Stribling in a six-rounder, and Bobby Bant and Jimmy Hill will tangle in a four.

Tickets are on sale at Turner's Arena, where Promoter Turner reports a brisk demand for this benefit show to help out the family left fatherless by Drew's death two weeks ago.

Manor Golf Play Captured By Mrs. Pray

A long and short hole tournament over eight selected holes was held yesterday at Manor. Low gross honors went to Mrs. L. G. Pray with 33. Mrs. W. R. Stokes was second with 34.

Mrs. Frank Butler deducted an 18 handicap from a 46 score to take low net with 28. Next came Mrs. Jack Dally with 34—8—29, Mrs. D. C. Donnaker, 40—9—31, and Mrs. J. W. Cramer, 39—8—31.

The prize for one-putt greens was garnered by Mrs. H. J. Simons, who required only one putt for seven of the eight holes.

Mrs. R. C. Mitchell had low net for guest entries, with 40—9—31.

Despite a four-run Western Electric rally in the ninth inning, Naiman Photo nine, winner of the Departmental League first half, notched its second straight second-half triumph yesterday, 11-6, on the Ellipse.

Glascot was slugged for 11 hits by the losers, while his teammates collected only 9 off Billy Carroll, but the timeliness of the hitting counted. Bobby Mulvihill led the Naiman attack with a double and two singles in four times at bat.

Winning honors in Columbia Country Club's ladies' odd-even tournament yesterday were shared by Mrs. T. O. Brandon and Mrs. Marion Falls. Mrs. Brandon won the "odds" with 41—3—38, and Mrs. Falls took the "even" with 43—5—38.

In the B Class, Mrs. W. D. Jarvis was "odd" winner with 51—10—41, and Mrs. Audrey Bogley captured the "even" with 50—15—36. Low-putt champion for the day was Mrs. A. Gardiner with 28.

Cameo Nine Eliminated By Heurich

The 3-way tie for top spot in the Washington Post-Industrial Baseball League was cut to a 2-way tie yesterday as Heurich eliminated Cameo nine in an 11-5 clash on the Ellipse. The victory left the Brewers and Center Market deadlocked with two triumphs apiece.

After scoring 4 runs in the first inning, Heurich saw its edge gradually fade until it went to bat in the last half of the sixth with a 5-4 deficit. The winners then put on a 5-run uprising, utilizing four singles and three errors in the process.

Johnny Murnane turned in a 6-hit pitching performance for the victors as his mates, led by Posnack and Lagos, banged Printz and Hahn for 15 safeties.

Leone Meets Plummer on Mat Tonight

Wednesday wrestling at Turner's Arena makes its bow tonight with "Gentleman Lou" Plummer, the Baltimore meanie, tangling with Michele Leone, a new star from Boston, in the feature battle.

Plummer, who recently won from Ed (Strangler) Lewis, is expected to have his hands full with the slashing 210-pounder, who last week created quite a furore by upsetting Milo Steinborn, the Memphis "Strong Man."

Leone was given immediate headline billing following his 18-minute triumph via the backdrop route over Steinborn. Few wrestlers have reached arena stardom in such a hurry, but the stocky Bostonian got it just as quickly as the manner in which he stepped over and around Steinborn in his first showing last week.

The Plummer-Leone feature bout will have a one-hour time limit. It headlines the first of all future shows on Wednesday night under Promoter Turner's new policy. Heretofore the shows have been on Thursdays.

In the semiwindup Tommy O'Toole, undaunted by his loss to Jim Londos last week before some 2000 fans, meets Tony Milano, 250-pound New Yorker. O'Toole has challenged the winner of the Plummer-Leone bout, and also Londos to a return bout on a victor-take-all basis.

Of particular interest is the special 30-minute scrap between Maurice LaChappelle, the Frenchman, and Henry Kulkovich, the "Mad Russian." This is the first meeting in singles, and it's the well-known "grudge." Chappie and Kulkovich have been on opposite sides in two-man competition, with the Frenchman's team always the victor. The Russian claims he can lick the Frenchman in a 30-minuter.

Jim Austeri faces Fred Grobmier and John Melas and Abe Yourist open the show at 9 p. m.

Fishing with JACK BELL

Some time this month members of the board of commissioners of Maryland's Department of Game and Inland Fish will convene for their semiannual meeting. They will be presented with a number of recommendations from the fresh-water committee of the Maryland State Game and Fish Protective Association.

JACK BELL

Among them will be one placing creel limits on several species of game fish now taken in nontidal waters, altogether lacking any protection at this time. While, of course, the proposed new regulations would apply to all nontidal waters of the State, they would be of particular value up to that portion of the Susquehanna River below Conowingo Dam, that is adjudged to be above tidal water, and the Potomac above Little Falls.

Sportsmen of the District of Columbia are awaiting with anxious interest to see what action the State commissioners take on the recommendations. We here in the District of Columbia have a parallel with Maryland. The species under discussion are the shad, the so-called Susquehanna salmon or wall-eyed pike and the striped bass otherwise known locally as the rockfish.

Those who have studied the situation both here in the District and in Maryland feel such regulations would be of value, because these species are taken at certain periods for sport only. For some time Washington anglers have tried to obtain some protection for these species taken in the Potomac, and feel that a minimum size and creel limit would aid materially in perpetuating the sport, especially the striped bass.

Should the State of Maryland set a creel limit on these species it would set an example for the District of Columbia, because the Maryland law would affect these species in the Potomac above Little Falls, that point being the boundary line.

Ten striped bass of not less than 16 inches, measured from the tip of the nose to the fork of the tail, is sufficient for any angler. District anglers have also enjoyed for many years the privilege of catching these fine game fish in the Potomac up to Little Falls without the cost of a fishing license.

Maryland, and that portion of the State of Virginia west of the Blue Ridge Mountains, gets its 1942 start of the black bass season today, and it will continue in Maryland until November 30, and in Virginia until December 31.

However, the season got off to a very poor start, with muddy waters greeting the anglers throughout Maryland and in the nearer portion of Virginia. The season for catching black bass east of the Blue Ridge Mountains in Virginia, opened June 15. So far the reports bear out an early prediction by G. W. Buller, fish expert for the State.

The heavy rains of May proved most disastrous to spawning bass, while the bass west of the Blue Ridge do not spawn until late June. Also since the storms were not so severe, it is felt the fishing in the western part of the State will be found much better.

Among the famous fishing waters known to be damaged by the floods are the Cowpasture River, the Jackson River and the Shenandoah. Ponds, and the streams in the far southeastern portion of Virginia, where the rainfall generally was less severe, were improved by the rains. Water levels were raised, dissolved oxygen was increased, and suffocating gases which had accumulated during the protracted drought were removed from these waters.

To refute reports that salt-water fishing will not be permitted in Virginia waters this year we have received word from the captain of the port at Norfolk that there are no restrictions as to fishing in the James River and Hampton Roads. There are no restrictions on fishing in Chesapeake Bay north of a line from Fort Monroe to Cape Charles Lighthouse on Smith Island. Fishing in the area south of that line and east of a line from Fort Monroe to Willoughby Spit is forbidden, also Willoughby Bay.

Surf casting will be permitted at present along the shore line within the Fifth Naval District, except no fishing will be allowed either by boat or surf casting within 300 yards of any shipyard, marine terminal, oil terminal, or other defense projects, and no pleasure boats will be permitted within one-half mile of any naval vessel, ammunition storage dumps or vessels loading or discharging same.

innings, but they got the tying run on base in the ninth. Cullenbine kept 'em in the ball game with two out and Spence on base in the ninth by belting a home run into the right field seats. Estalella was safe on Tabor's fumble, but Evans abandoned the tying run with a fly to left field.

Hudson had one rough inning in the second game—the fourth, when the Red Sox took a 3-0 lead after Finney led off with a single to right and Williams doubled to right. Lupien grounded to Vernon, but Finney beat the throw to the plate. Tabor scored Williams with a double to left, and Conroy scored Lupin with a single to left.

The Nats had only two hits off Hughson at the end of five innings, but they got back into the ball game with two runs in the sixth, muffing the chance to score more. Case led off with a double against the left-field wall and Spence also rattled the wall with a double. Vernon grounded out, but Cullenbine walked and Estalella scored Vernon with a single to left. With only one out and men on first and third, the Nats got no more out of the inning because Evans struck out and Pinch Hitter Bruce Campbell popped out.

They never got another man to second base, which is no way to win ball games.

Most of 550 Md. Students To Play Sports

Nearly all of the 550 men enrolled at the University of Maryland will take part in summer athletics during the "swing shift" semester of the accelerated academic course, college officials have announced.

Of these, approximately 100 will participate in intercollegiate baseball and lacrosse while the rest engage in the R. O. T. C.'s physical-fitness program. The purpose of this program is to build and maintain morale, to increase the physical strength, coordination, agility, and endurance of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and to provide recreation.

The program is divided into three categories—body building, consisting of instruction in calisthentics, boxing and gymnastics; individual sports, which take in running, jumping, wall-scaling, and other Army training items; and team sports, which list touch football, soccer and basketball.

Competition in the summer intercollegiate sports schedule gets under way on July 18 when Jack Faber's Terrapin lacrossmen play Penn State on the Maryland field. July 22 marks the start of the baseball league, which includes Navy, Georgetown, George Washington and Catholic University as well as Maryland.

Mass. Open Golf Title 2-Way Tie

By the Associated Press

Osterville, Mass., June 30.—Ben Loving, the little Longmeadow professional, had only one really poor hole in the 72 he played during the Massachusetts Open golf championship, but it was enough to drop him into a first-place tie today with Lester Kennedy, steady Cambridge pro, at Oyster Harbors.

The tourney wound up in a first-place deadlock for the sixth time in 36 years and the first since 1933. Loving and Kennedy will play off for the title tomorrow over the 18-hole route.

Loving, by carding a woeful seven on the sixth hole of his final round on this testing course, wound up with a three-over 75 after posting 71, 68 and 72 on his previous tours. His 72-hole total of 286 was matched by Kennedy when he closed with a regulation 72 after carding 71, 70 and 73.

After starting his last round eight strokes behind the front-running longmeadow pro, Harold (Jug) McSpaden of Philadelphia, the defending champion and a four-time winner, put together a sparkling four-unber 68 to clinch third place with 287, only one less than the deadlock leaders.

Paul Runyan of White Plains, N. Y., matched par for 72 holes to gain fourth place with 288, five strokes ahead of the most successful amateur, Ted Bishop of Newton, the New England titlist. Three were tied for sixth place with 298 totals—Gene Anderson, the home club pro, lanky Harry Nettlebladt of Avon, Conn., and Jery Gianferante of Woburn.

Bill Blaney of Newton, acting president of the Massachesetts Golf Association, was the second best amateur with a total of 300, which gave him ninth place while Elmer Reed of Nashua, N. H., collected the smallest of the $500 prive money with his 301 total.

Cadet Joe Comer To Wed Local Girl Here Tonight

Aviation Cadet Joe Comer, captain of the 1940 George Washington University basketball team, and Vivian Gray Smith, daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith of Monrovia, Md., will be married tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Wallace Memorial Church at New Hampshire Avenue and Randolph Street Northwest.

Miss Gray is a graduate of Wilson Teachers College and now is teaching in the public schools here. Cadet Comer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Henry Comer, 3731 New Hampshire Avenue, is a graduate of Roosevelt High School and George Washington. He is just completing preliminary flight training at Shaw Field in Sumter, S. C.

The wedding was postponed from last night because Cadet Comer was unable to obtain leave from the field.

Richard Le Roy Milton, 21 of 1820 Burke Street Northeast, was instantly killed yesterday when his car crashed through the south side of the Glen Carlin bridge on the Lee Boulevard and plunged 75 feet to the rocks below.

An apprentice machinist at the Navy Yard, Milton was found pinned under the wheel of the car, and was later identified by his cousin, Mrs. William Birchmire, of Falls Church, Va., at the C. J. Ives funeral home in Falls Church where the body was taken. It was presumed that he was on his way to Washington from his cousin's home.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Milton, live at West Newton, Pa.

Joseph Waldron, 21, of 942 N Street Northwest, suffered lacerations of the head and chin and a fractured left ankle last night when his motorcycle collided head-on at Ninth Street and Mount Vernon Place Northwest with an auto driven by Herman Carter, colored, 32, of 1620 R Street Northwest.

Waldron was admitted to Emergency Hospital where his condition was said to be not serious. Carter was not injured.

sued the Illinois corporation in United States District Court here, and claimed a breach of contracts. Myers lost the case.

Hobbs was the first victim of the shooting that reechoed through the corridors of the Law Building.

Three shots rang out in the rear of the first-floor corridor and a stenographer in the Kemp, Hobbs & Davidson law firm offices ran out and said, "What in the world is the matter, Warren?"

Myers made no reply, turned and ran back up the stairs, she said, adding that she heard more shots and a cry for help.

Capt. W. D. Torrence said a fully loaded pistol was found beneath a hat on a desk in Daniel's office, and in a waste-paper basket were five empty 32-20 cartridges believed to have been fired from the gun.

"Undoubtedly he used the time after he shot Daniel and before the police arrived to unload the gun and load it with fresh shells," Torrence said.

Daniel, a native of Brunswick County, Virginia, was elected to the Virginia House in 1934, was a former president of the Young Democratic Clubs of Virginia, and was a member of the Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic society, and Tau Kappa Alpha, social fraternity. He was unmarried.

Hobbs began the practice of law here in 1909 and became city attorney in 1924. He was a past national president of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, social fraternity, and a deacon in the Christian (Disciples) Church. He is survived by his widow, a daughter and three sons.

Patients' Complaints Upheld By Glenn Dale Investigator

Although the District Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md., in general is an institution of which the Capital "can well be proud," there is an immediate need for improvement in food-handling methods and in the attitude of the personnel toward the patients, Senate District Committee Counsel R. F. Camalier asserted yesterday in his formal report on the committee investigation of the hospital.

Camalier told Chairman McCarran that there was an obvious carelessness in preparing, handling and serving food—bearing out complaints made by patients.

The patients had charged that they often found hairs, toothpicks, fingernail parings and insects in their food, and complained of the use of broken or dangerously chipped glassware and china. Camalier said that the conditions complained of "were found, in the main, to exist, and the authorities concede that fact."

"There is no excuse which can be offered," he declared, "for the conditions which do exist unless it be, as the superintendent contends, that the turnover in personnel is so great that there is no opportunity to properly train certain employes.

"Also, there is no excuse or reason why the permanent personnel, which in most cases are supervisory, cannot issue instructions and see that the same are executed, which will insure the proper handling and preparation of food."

Camalier recommended that the superintendent, Dr. Daniel Finucane, be relieved of some of his administrative duties—through the adding of an executive aide to the staff—to leave him more time for supervisory work.

An apparently prevailing attitude on the part of many nurses—"that the patients are either criminals or culprits"—should be corrected, he asserted, even if this necessitated a complete change in personnel.

Doolittle Wins Guggenheim Prize; Tokyo No Item

(Washington Bureau of The Chicago Sun)

Brig. Gen. James H. Doolittle yesterday was awarded the Daniel Guggenheim medal for notable achievement in aeronautics—but believe it or not, his famous Tokyo raid was not responsible for the honor.

"The April raid on Tokyo, conceived and executed under the command of General Doolittle, was not a factor in making the award," an official announcement said. "Prior to the raid on Japan, General Doolittle had been proposed for the medal on the basis of achievements in aviation over a period of years."

The award was made by Dr. J. C. Hunsaker, chairman of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, who specifically cited General Doolittle's feat of being the first to fly blind in a completely covered cockpit in 1929 as one achievement which led to the award.

Store Orders Up 55% Here During Month

Orders for merchandise of Washington department stores at the end of May were 55 per cent higher than at the same time a year ago, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. Orders for goods averaged 62 per cent higher in the entire Fifth Federal Reserve District, it was noted.

The survey also showed that stocks of goods on hand in Washington stores on May 31 were 71 per cent heavier than last year. Stocks were up 63 per cent in the Fifth District as a whole.

Store collections in the Capital in May were 34 per cent of accounts due at the beginning of the month. Payments in the whole district averaged 35 per cent of bills due during the month.

As already noted, May retail trade in Washington was 12 per cent more than in the same month last year, and volume for the first five months was 29 per cent improved. May retail trade in the Fifth District was 4 per cent heavier and for the first five months was 23 per cent larger.

Bear Market Seen Ended

The long-term bear market which has been under way since September, 1939, is over, in the opinion of Standard and Poor's Corporation. While there may be further temporary declines on bar war news, the next major movement is foreseen to be upward. This is the first important change in long-term stock market policy announced within the past two years by this organization.

"Buying stocks when nearly everyone distrusts them and almost no one wants them has been exceedingly profittable in the past. We believe that today a similar instance is at hand, and that the time to get ready for the next bull market is now. Periods of weakness and uncertainty should be regarded as periods of opportunity that may not be repeated for years. The next major movement, as we view all the evidence, points unmistakably upCorporation, largest investors' staward," said Standard & Poore's tistical company in this country.

Income Tax Credit Is Proposed for Payments On Debts Contracted Prior to January 1, 1942

Last of two articles by Mr. Rafier, Washington economist associated with the Cafritz Co.

The President's seven-point program to combat inflation is well underway. Already in effect are those points dealing with taxation, price-fixing, rationing and voluntary purchase of war bonds. Yet to be dealt with are the stabilization of both wages and the prices of farm products. Half of the seventh point, the discouragement of new credit and installment buying, has already taken place through regulations recently promulgated by the Federal Reserve Board. There still remains the problem of implementin gthe rest of the President's suggestion—to encourage the paying off of debts, mortgages and other obligations.

As was sen in yesterday's discussion, heavy taxes have endangered the ability of many people to meet their debts, while not being sufficient to soak up greatly increased salaries ressing for inflationary expenditure in the hands of labor. I believe that a system of compulsory savings offers a means of closing up the inflationary gap and at the same time offerig equally just treatment to both the debtor and the nondebtor classes.

It should be feasible for the duration of the war to institute a combined system of taxation and compulsory purchase of war bonds, to be graduated on a progressive scale, depending on an individual's income and dependents. These bonds ought to be of a special type which cannot be redeemed until after the war, when civilian goods again will be available in ample supply. Provisions might be made for cashing them sooner in case of ample supply. Provisions might be made for cashing them sooner in case of dire need.

A possible plan would work somewhat as follows:

Suppose, at the $4000 income level for a married man with no dependents, it was decided that the Government should take 25 per cent in combined taxes and compulsory saings. That would be $1000. The proposed 1942 income tax on the $4000 income is about $500.

The technique would e to allow as a credit against the combined $1000 both income taxes and required minimum payments on debts. (These debts would have to be old ones, say those in existence prior to January 1, 1942, and prof of payment could be attached in the form of receipts for payment.) Then for a debtor and a nonbebtor the calculations would look like this:

	Debtor.	Nondebtor.
Combined income tax and compulsory savings	$1000	$1000
Income taxes	500	500
Balance after taxes	500	500
Debt payments	400	none
Compulsory investment in war bonds	100	500

Such a plan would not favor the debtor class over the class of people who have somehow managed to pay cash for everything and remained out of debt. In the example given above the person in debt will pay $400 on past purchases, and put $100 into war bonds—a total of $500. The person not in debt will put the same $500 into war bonds, to be used for purchases after the war, a time when increased purchasing power will be very helpful during the transition from a war economy to a peace economy. We know that the Government will probably have to finance some part of this conversion, but it would be a good thing for the debtors to be wholly or partially out of debt at that time, and for the nondebtors td have cash reserves of their own so that the load on che Government will be lessened.

The same approach could be employed for corporations, which in view of the proposed 40 per cent normal and surtax, and 94 per cent excess profits tax, will find it impossible to meet their required debt amortization or to build up reserves for the post-war readjustment.

Since the President is on sound ground in believing that the purchase of war bonds out of current earnings is anti-inflationary, what difference does it make if people's earnings are first applied toward legally required payments of debts if the recipients of the resulting payments purchase the war bonds themselves? The same favorable rethere is the desirable effect of alsult is achieved, but in addition lowing people to retain their homes or other articles which were purchased in the past, but which are boing paid for out of current earnings.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—All grain prices and soybeans advanced sharply today on buying stimulated by mill demand for flour, covering by previous short sellers and firmness in the cotton market. The close was at the day's top in many instances.

Liquidation in July contracts, which had helped to unsettle the market in recent sessions, was met by good demand from elevator interests today, a fact which served to simulate buying. The market was also considered in a favorable technical position for a rally in view of recent declines.

Phone Fun Out

Long Distance Social Calls Discouraged

If you are in the habit of making long distance telephone calls just to inquire about the health of Grandma and Aunt Nellie, you'd bettter find a different means of communication.

The Bell System, it was learned authoritatively here yesterday, will step up its publicity campaign to discourage the use of its toll lines for nonessential calls. This is being done in deference to the wishes of Chairman James L. Fly, of the Communications Commission and the War Communications Board. Fly warned that the Government might have to impose priorities on telephone service if users failed to curtail.

American Telephone Co. spokesmen admittted that certain bottlenecks had developed in the Bell System service as a result of the huge increase in Government business but they added that no serious congestions had occurred so far in the local services.

Washington was described as the prime bottleneck with a current volume of 70,000 calls daily, in and out, or more than four times the number handled daily in January, 1941. Facilities at Norfolk, Atlanta, New Orleans and some places on the Pacific Coast also were being heavily taxed, it was said.

Within the last year or so the Bell System has installed additional circuits at key points for the handling of long distance calls but further expansion is severely handicapped by scarcity of copper and other materials.

In putting before its customers the importance of eliminating social long distance calls the Bell System will use newspaper advertising, the radio and other publicity mediums.

New Type Glass Floats Like Cork, Can Be Sawed

Pittsburgh, June 30 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Corning Corporation reported today it had started production of a new type opaque glass, composed of myriad tiny cells, that floats like cork and can be sawed or drilled with ordinary tools.

The product, known as foamglas, weighs only 10 pounds per cubic foot—one-fifteenth the weight of ordinary glass. It is odorless, fireproof and vermin proof and possesses insulating qualities, the company said.

Its crellular structure gives the glass its buoyancy and insulating properties. It will not absorb water and it will remain afloat indefinitely.

The company, jointly owned by the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. and Ccrning Glass Works, has had the product under development since 1938 and recently started manufacturing it in a new plant in western Pennsylvania.

Ex C. I. O. Head Forms An Investors' Group

k Detroit, June 30 (AP).—Homer W. Martin, one-time president of the United Auto Workers (C. I. O.) and now a manufacturer's agent, announced formation of the United Investors of America with an objective of guaranteeing a minimum return to common stockholders of 4 per cent on their investments.

The organization, Martin said is to be incorporated next month under Michigan's statute governing non-partisan, now-profit educational groups, with himself as president.

Martin described membership of the group as "several thousand" investors in common stock of private corporations, "the backbone of our American middle class and of our while system of free private enterprise.

Economist Warns

Buy War Bonds or Compel Issuance of 'Invisible' Money

By the Associated Press

New York, June 30.—Every time you fail to purchase a war bond, says Harry Scherman, economics writher, you force your Government to issue "invisible greenbacks," a process which, uncontrolled, would lead to "unimaginable disaster."

Writitng in the July 4 issue of the Saturday Evening Post, Scharman, who is president of the Book-of-the-Month Club, Inc., says:

"By failing to buy war savings bonds, with money we can spare for that purpose, we are continually forcingt he United Sttaes Treasury to create new money with which to pay its war bills . . .

"These multitudinous little sins of omission can easily add up to as much disaster as anything the Germans and Japanese can do to destroy American civilization."

Scherman explains that what the Treasury does not get in taxes and in sales of bonds to the public, it must raise through selling its bonds to the commercial banks, and continues:

"The key fact for laymen to grasp here is that when we individuals buy Government securities, we use dollar bills or bank deposits that are already in evistence. But when the commercial banks buy Government bonds, new bank deposits are created."

When the banks buy the bonds, he says, they give the Treasury a credit to their books, then the Treasury transfers "these deposits by check to manufacturers in payment of its bills for airplanes, guns, ships and whatnot."

These new bank deposits, he says, are thest conceived, in America where we do most of our business by bank checks, "as invisible potential dollark bills."

Scherman writets that the Government will have to sell some billions of its bonds to the commercial banks and thus increase deposits, but:

"No irreparable damage need be done by this undesirable increase, nor by later ones, provided one thing: Provided it is sharply understood that the real danger lies in the creation of new bank deposits beyond the war necessity, and that this continuing increase must be stopped at the first possible opportunity."

War Insurance Applications at New Crest Here

Washington insurance firms reported yesterday that they were swamped by applications for Government-sponsored war damage insurance from owners of property here who are seeking to replace automatic protection voted by Congress last March. This protection expired at midnight last night.

The requests for insurance, it was said, were swelled by virtually a general demand that such insurance be carried on residential properties on which financial institutions hold mortgages. Said the head of a leading loan association here yesterday:

Mortgage Protection

"We insist that the property-owner take out such insurance in an amount sufficient to cover the mortgage balance due. We have sent applications to all our mortgagors or asked them to come in and fill out such applications."

Because of the comparatively low cost of comprehensive coverage, most of the lending institutions are trying to have property owners the full replacement value.

The rush for policies has multiplied the work of the majority of insurance firms here. Various offices have designated specialists to devote their entire attention to handling all phases of war insurance.

One local executive pointed out that the small percentage of commission allowed agents is not sufficient to cover the cost of such work.

"We are performing this service more or less as a patriotic duty," he said. "It has meant night work for our regular employes and eventually will mean the hiring of more clerical help."

A similar sentiment was voiced in other insurance quarters contacted by The Post, all of whom reported they had been snowed under by applications since early last week.

Owners of more than one piece of property of the same general type may cover all their holdings if they list them properly on a form designated as No. 11. This means that all dwellings owned by one person might be so grouped. But it is impracticable, because of varying rates, to group residential and mercantile holdings.

Contents Also Covered.

The coinsurance clause does not apply to dwellings which comprise fewer than five family units. All other properties, however, are subject to a 50 per cent, coinsurance clause unless a higher percentage is selected.

In computing base rates of commercial and like properties, a ten per cent, reduction is allowed if the property is sprinkler-equipped.

Contents also may be covered. Private passenger automobiles must be identified separately as to make, model, year, etc. The word contents does not include jewelry and furs in excess of $1000 in the aggregate.

Additional coverage for furs, jewelry, stamps and coin collections and similar "contents" may be obtained at 75 cents per $100, whereas the residential rate is 10 cents per $100. The minimum annual permium is $3.

Meanwhile President W. L. Clayton of the War Damage Corporation said yesterday he had telegraphed all agents who will write war damage insurance that applications for coverage must be signed by only one owner of the insured property, when there are several owners, or by a duly authorized agent of an owner.

Questions have arisen as to whether all owners of property owned by perhaps five or ten persons must sign the applications, the WDC said, and it was ruled that it was "highly important that applications correctly state the name or names of the insured but it is not necessary that all such names be signed to the application."

New York Cotton

New York, June 30 (AP).—Cotton futures closed with sains of $1.35 to $1.50 a bale today after reports that a favorable compromise might be reached in the deadlocked farm legislation set off a wave of trade and mill buying.

New outside participation also was stimulated by the reports, which said that farmers might be granted 100 per cent of parity crop loans.

After the market closed, it was indicated that House-Senate conferees had failed to agree on the farm bill and a compromise was not expected.

First Federal Assets Soar to $11,350,000

The First Federal Savings and Loan Association, Washington, last night reported record assets of $11,350,000 as of June 30, a gain of nearly $1,000,000 as compared with the same date last year.

Resources of the institution have tripled in the last four years, according to the company's records which showed $3,702,197 assets on June 30, 1938.

Mortgage loans in 1942 aggregated $10,455,878 and as of June 30 reserves and undivided surplus totaled $367,000. Membership has risen to 12,903 as of the latest date.

A special department has been installed to sell war bonds and to date the association has sold $293,850 worth.

Officers are A. E. Giegengack, president; C. H. Ellingson, executive manager; Milton I. Baldinger, vice president; Corinne E. Ballou, secretary, and Edwin Jacobson, treasurer. Directors include Mr. Giegengack, Mr. Baldinger, Sefton Darr, Leon S. Gordon, Thomas E. Lodge, Harold E. Sheffers, Emery J. Woodall, R. W. S. Bonnett, Mr. Ellingson, Dr. Carl Henning, Mr. Jacobson, P. J. Schardt and Hugh A. Thrift.

Metropolis Building Association

Directors of the Metropolis Building Association, meeting last night for the annual election of officers, were told by Rudolph W. Santelmann, secretary, that the last year was one of the best in the 75-year history of the group. Santelmann's report revealed that total resources are close to the 7 million dollar mark while surplus and reserves are at the high water mark of $650,000.

Harry G. Wilson was reelected president as was John Scrivener vice president, and Rudolph W. Santelmann, secretary.

Directors, who were selected by the shareholders at their annual meeting on June 3 include the officers and the following:

George M. Siebert, William A. Simpson, Martin T. Wiegand, Arthur Seagren, H. Hazen Wilson, Chalmers F. Groff, Channing S. Walker and John W. Hardell.

Oriental Building Association

The eighty-first annual statement of Oriental Building Association, released yesterday, showed resources of $7,252,258.27. According to John G. Kolb, treasurer, this is the highest figure ever recorded. Analysis of the report disclosed that share accounts of members totaled $6,684,000 while surplus and reserves climbed to $665,528.

Chapin B. Bauman is president of Oriental Building with Ralph A. Xander, secretary, and Mr. Kolb, treasurer.

Stocks Drift Unevenly as Traders Await The Outcome of Battle Crisis in Egypt

New York, June 30.—The war news seemed a trifle better today but stocks were not particularly responsive and leaders generally shifted over an irregular terrain.

Price hesitancy prevailed at the opening and, with dealings reverting to sluggishness, closing trends were spotty. While there were scattered gains of 1 to 3 points on a few sales, declines of about as much were in evidence.

The desire to await the outcome of the battle crisis in Egypt tended to halt some potential buyers, brokers said, and the tax question remained as a market problem. Some timid buying developed on the idea that the seasonal direction of industrials has been upward in 30 out of the past 45 years in July.

The majority of the buoyant rails of yesterday failed to repeat their climb although Santa Fe jumped 1¾ points when directors voted a dividend of $1.50 on the common against $1 paid in the preceding four quarters.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 35.3. For the month just ended the composite was up .7 of a point. Transfers totaled 248,480 shares compared with 282,293 Monday.

Of 572 individual stocks traded, 189 were down, 179 up and 204 unchanged.

Steels were handicapped slightly by decision of the fact-finding panel of the war labor board that most steel producers were able to pay the requested wage increase of $1 a day.

Allied Chemical appeared just before the final gong, up 3 points on a 100-share sale. Dow Chemical was off 2 on a similar transaction. Modest advances were retained by Standard Oil (N. J.), Texas Co., Westinghouse, American Can, General Electric, Philip Morris, United Aircraft, United States Gypsum and Kennecott. Losers included United States Steel, Bethelhem, Western Union, Chesapeake & Ohio, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft, du Pont and Air Reduction.

Bonds were relatively steady. Commodities pushed up with cotton gaining $1.35 to $1.50 a bale. At Chicago wheat advanced 1 to 1⅝ cents a bushel, corn was ⅛ to 1 higher and hogs off 10 cents.

U. S. Exports Set Record Pace in First 4 Months

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department said yesterday that United States merchandise exports—including lend-lease shipments—exceeded merchandise imports by $1,250,000,000 in the first four months this year.

At this rate, the Department said, a new export record will be set in 1942. The figures, moreover, do not include supplies sent to American troops at foreign bases.

As a result of the large proportion of weapons involved in wartime trade, 70 per cent of the exports were "finished manufactures," compared with a customary 47 per cent. Shipments of crude materials and foodstuffs declined from a usual 29 per cent to 5.4 per cent.

Imports as a whole were barely holding their own with a year ago.

All the highlights of a typical U. S. O. party for the boys in the armed services will be brought to you tonight by Radio Station WJSV in a special on-the-scene broadcast from the U. S. O. headquarters in the penthouse atop the Y. W. C. A. Building at Seventeenth and K Streets.
You can hear it between 7:30 and 8 p. m.
Actually the party will start at 7 p. m. and, before the broadcast begins, the soldiers, sailors and marines and their feminine companions will go in for community singing and other get-together processes so that they'll be in good fettle for going on the air when the time comes.
Music will be furnished for the broadcast by Paul Kain, WJSV orchestra leader, and a 25-piece musical group, a goodly number of whom will remain afterward to play for the dancing.
As for the broadcast itself, WJSV's Joe King will serve as master of ceremonies for a festive half hour in which service men themselves will be the stars, singing, dancing, joking and what have you.
WJSV's blue-voiced soloist, Shannon Bolin, will be along to sing some of the favorite melodies of the boys from the camps and, as we said, Paul Kain's orchestra will play any selections asked.
Miss Mabel R. Cook, the U. S. O. director in town, will take a very few moments out to tell about the work the U. S. O. is doing. The auditorium is large, and you're invited to attend the shindig if you feel so inclined.

Contract Bridge

This question concerns your play of today's hand at a three-no-trump contract. You are sitting South and West opens the heart five, which is won in dummy with the jack. Carry on from this point to take nine tricks. The solution is presented below.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable

SOUTH DEALER

	♠ J 9 3 2 ♡ J 4 ◇ A J 7 2 ♣ K 6 4
♠ K 4 ♡ K 9 8 5 ◇ 10 6 ♣ Q 7 5 2	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ Q 7 6 5 ♡ 7 6 2 ◇ Q 9 8 ♣ 10 9 3
	♠ A 10 8 ♡ A Q 10 ◇ K 5 4 3 ♣ A J 8

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 5 ♡.

The Solution

South makes three no trump by developing the spade suit before letting East in the lead. A small spade is led from dummy, and South's eight finessed, West winning the king. Now the best West can do is to return the diamond ten. East eventually wins a diamond trick and returns a heart. Declarer goes up with the ace, goes to dummy with a diamond and finesses the spades successfully. South makes three no trump, winning three diamonds, two spades, two hearts and two clubs.

If declarer had played diamonds first, East would have won the lead and led hearts, and South would have had to lose a spade or club trick later to the hand that held the established heart suit.

17,000 Navy Yard Workers Get Raise

Round One

Bus Hearing Delayed by Word Battle

Heated arguments between Public Utilities Commission Chairman Gregory Hankin and Capital Transit Co. officials marked the later part of a hearing on the establishment of a second crosstown busline, called by the PUC yesterday.

The hearing, which was adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning, brought out over 200 representatives of citizens' associations who demanded the new line as vigorously as transit officials opposed it.

The new line, which would run from the intersection of Wisconsin and Western Avenues Northwest to Twelfth and Quincy Streets Northeast and known as the Military Road line, would have feeder lines on Nebraska Avenue giving new service to the region between Spring Valley and the Potomac Rivver.

Its establishment was justified by the citizens' spokesmen because of the proven profitable service of the first crosstown line, inaugurated on January 23. The citizens won the point that the burden of proof was up to the transit company to prove that the line was undesirable rather than to the citizens to prove that it was desirable.

Transit company representatives argued that the new line would require the installation of five new buses during the basic day period and seven during the rush period. This, they said would involve the use of more gasoline and tires and shouldn't be allow at this time.

Dean J. Locke, transit company engineer, said the new line would have to carry 4375 new fares a day to make it pay. Doubting that these many new passengers in the region crossed would be forthcoming, he felt that there was no assurance that the company would get just returns within a reasonable period. Hence, he said, under law the PUC should not order the line to be established.

During one part of Locke's testimony, Hankin rephrased a question Locke had asked, which brought a protest from Capital Transit President E. D. Merrill that his ngineer was being misquoted. At Merrill's insistent protests, Hankin banged on the table with an inkwell and ordered him to sit down, which Merrill refused to do. The other members of the PUC thereupon recessed the hearing for five minutes and withdrw with Hankin into another room until the tension was relieved.

Similar Increase In Shore Units Over U. S. Ordered

Wage increases will go into effect July 6 for about 17,000 workers at the Navy Yard hr, which will add some $65,000 to the yard's weekly payroll.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph A. Bard announced that wage rates of employes at Navy yard and other shore establishments throughout the country will be increased to conform to raises granted by private yards under amendments to the shipyard stabilization code adopted at a recent meeting in Chicago.

At the Chicago meeting, pursuant to the wage stabilization program of the President, an increase of 8 cents an hour was established for Atlantic Coast, West Coast and Great Lakes area commercial shipyards. Slightly higher increases were provided for Gulf Coast yards, to make the standard rate for shipyard mechanics $1.20 an hour.

"The Navy workers' increase," Bard stated, "is an overall boost of 8 cents an hour, except in a few classifications where inequalities had xisted and where the increase was slightly more or less than 8 cents an hour, as the case demanded."

Officials at the Washington Navy Yard last night had not received information as to the effect of the increase on their workers. It was estimated elsewhere, however, that some 17,000 per diem workers there will receive th 8-cent-an-hour boost.

Bard said that the pay adjustment will add more than one million dollars a week to the pay envelops of 250,000 civilian employes at Navy yards and shore stations. The increase was granted administratively by the Navy Department, he said, rather than by following the usual pattern of convening Navy wage boards and holding hearings, so as to give the workers the raise immediately.

Atlantic Coast, West Coast and Great Lakes area yards receive the increase July 6. It goes into ffect August 3 at Gulf yards.

Dupont Circle Raid Wardens to Gather

The air-raid control center and its operation will be explained by Thomas W. Sandoz at a general area meeting of members of the warden service of the Dupont Circle Area at 8 p. m. today at the Church of the Covenant, Connecticut Avenue and M Street Northwest.

Sandoz, deputy air-raid warden for the area, has just finished a 10-day course at the University of Maryland's chemical warfare center. Chief Air Raid Warden for the Metropolitan area, William J. Mileham, will also speak.
